

Which costs most— painting or waiting?

After your house needs painting, every year you wait it will require more paint and more labor to put it in good condition. And every year you wait, your house is worth less. A little paint-money is good paint-insurance.

THE GUARANTEED LEAD AND ZINC PAINT NEVER GALLS—WEARS LONGER

Just as soon as your house needs painting, come in and let us show you how little it will cost you to use DEVOE. We say "DEVOE" because it's absolutely pure. That's why DEVOE takes fewer gallons, wears longer—and costs less by the job or by the year. And that's why we guarantee Devoe without reserve.

The Dub and The Live Wire

A Fable By

GEORGE LEMON-ADE

Once upon a time there lived in a Thriving Burg a Dub named Livingstone—and rightly too, for while he occasionally showed signs of being a Dub, he was a regular Livingstone. He was as up-to-date as a Bustle and as popular as a prohibition candidate at a Bartenders' picnic. He even knew that General Grant was dead and everything like that. Father Livingstone, after establishing the Leading store in the town, obligingly cracked the Dub never quite got over patting himself on the back for his shrewdness in getting born in time to inherit the business under the terms of the will.

The Old Buck had been well meaning enough, but being only human he could not foresee what he was inflicting upon the community by this offering to the townspeople seemed to hold it against his memory, and some of his customers still patronized the Old Place. Otherwise, few butted in on the Peaceful Quietude. The Dub fondly believed he was running the business, but it really never even reached a good fast walk.

Of course the Dub believed in advertising. Not with an abiding and all-consuming faith, but as the Old Noise of the Burg he felt it duty bound to patronize the Daily Scribble. At least to the extent of the four-inch space in which he set forth his solemn announcements in their borders of mourning, so that Ye Editor might obtain other sustenance thereby, than the regular Roller Composition. As a matter of simple justice, he it recorded that the Dub really believed that an Editor should act once in a while, if for no other reason than to give his strength to Harp the praises of our Leading Citizen.

Occasionally he changed the copy of Ad. But only after Ye Editor had himself black in the face to convince the Dub that the Whiskers on his Ad were interfering with the press work. But so far as the public knew of his Store or his Business by his Advertising, anyone could have claimed the place by right of Discovery.

To a gentle Tip from Ye Editor that he try an On-The-Job Sales Service, inject a little Pep into his copy and Play it Up with a worthwhile illustration like this, "What's the good of a Sales Service? What good are their pictures? People don't buy the pictures, they don't even read advertising. My business aint any bigger than Father's was and he never did any advertising, and look at the money I've spent on it. What could a Sales Service do for me? What does some Smart-alek of a city advertising man know about what I have to sell or how to sell it? Tell me."

Now it so happened that one Jack Livewire was at that time enjoying the excruciating horrors of making a commercial dream become a reality. Jack was There as a merchant all right in everything but size. Some of the Wise ones claimed he got his capital to start the business by Stalling his landlady for a week's board. His stock consisted chiefly of nice new empty boxes neatly arranged on the front of the shelf to give the Appearance, but so far as any quantity of real goods was concerned he could easily have been indicted for running a store under false pretenses.

But the Livewire had ideas—real ones. He used his Nut for other purposes than just a place to put his Lid. He was ready to listen to anybody's chatter is he could detect the tinkle of the Coin.

Of course, his business grew, slowly at first and accompanied by all the usual Growing pains, but all at once it seemed to get a Shot in the Arm from some cause, and Jack was getting on for Fair.

Even the Dub got Hop to the fact that there was something Doing down the street at Livewire's, and one day when the Solitude of his own place was unusually oppressive, he centered over to Ye Editor and Braced him about it.

"What's all the commotion down at Livewire's about?" says the Dub. "Oh that's just one of Jack's removal sales—going to larger quarters again," pipes Ye Editor. "And the congregation you Lamped is a Bunch of our Fellow Citizens waiting to kick in with their Cus of late?" "Which leads me to inquire," says the Dub. "Who's been writing his Ads of late?" "A Hundred-Thousand-Dollar-a-Year Ad-organization," chirped the Scribe—just like that.

"Cut out the Hot Blast," butts in the Dub.—"If an organization like that would write for sweet charity's sake, Jack couldn't pay for the ink."

"On the square, Dub," chimes in Ye Editor, getting Sore—"if it came to a showdown you'd have to Go Some to Come Across with enough evidence to prove that you are actually alive. From a two-by-four hole in the wall, young Livewire has built up a business that makes you a Bum 'Also Ran' and he has done it with that BONNET-BROWN SALES SERVICE I tried to get you to use and spoiled a perfectly good pair of lungs in the attempt. As a Progressive merchant you are a humdinger of a Pack Peddler. You....." but the Dub had fainter.

MORAL Resurrecting the Dead always has been considered a miracle, so don't be discouraged if you fail, but look for a Live One.
