We Are Winning the War; Government Raisers Continue to Hoop.

The satisfaction of knowing that you did your best in the production of poultry, eggs, etc. will be a great comfort to you when the war is won. Even then our boys and Allies will need our best efforts for a long time after. In this connection Mr. Olof M. Sundt, Willmar, representing in this county the National Department of Agriculture and State Agricultural College in poultry work offers the following suggestions for the promotion of better and more poultry.

The great drawback for profitable poultry keeping in very many cases is the lack of careful and timely consideration and not ignorance as many suppose. Chicken pox, roup, lice, and many of the ailments that commonly infect and affect poultry are due in almost every case to the carelessness of the owner. The Government and State colleges have given deep thought and spent much money in trying to have more and better poultry produced, but their good work will avail very little if the farmers and poultry producers in general do not take more thought and care of their poultry. There is no greater point than sanitation. The house, shed or wherever poultry is kept should be clean and sanitary. The fowls should be free from lice. The water should be fresh and in clean vessels. Almost every known disease can be avoided if a little care is used. Do not overcrowd. Do not keep weaklings. Do not handle your poultry on any less degree of efficiency than you do your cattle, horses, hogs or sheep.
