WILLMAR 40; LITCHFIELD 0.

The Willmar boys again beat the Litchfield high school team last Wednesday afternoon. This time the game was played on Litchfield home grounds. The game was fast and lasted until the moon came up on account of the late start and because of many stops for injuries. Altho no one was hurt very badly there were quite a few minor injuries.

The Willmar boys took the ball on the kick-off and ran it right down for the first touchdown in their good old style. After that it was just a series of plays necessary to put the ball across as the Litchfield boys didn't seem to put much pep in their work. Christy made the first two touchdowns; playing thru the right side of the line. Linn played a good game; going thru the line for his yards every time. Nelson and Grace played up to all expectations. Nelson has come right ahead since he got into

SUNDAY SCHOOL COUNTY MEETING

Convention Next Tuesday and Wednesday at Presbyterian Church.

The Kandiyohi County Sunday School convention will this year convene here at Willmar next Tuesday and Wednesday, November 18th and 19th. This is an annual affair in each county throughout the state, but owing to the multiplicity of activities demanding the attention of the people during the last year, this branch of work suffered, and no convention of the kind has been held in this county since two years ago.

A few months ago Rev. Swan W. Mattson was appointed as County President by the state officers, and under his direction able and experienced Sunday School workers have been secured to address the convention at every session. The opening session will be held at the Presbyterian church on Tuesday afternoon, at one thirty o'clock while the evening session will be held at the Swedish Baptist church and the morning session on Wednesday at the Swedish Mission church.

This organization is a part of the International Sunday School Association. State, County and District Sunday School Associations are organizations of Sunday School banded together for the purpose of extending and deepening Sunday School interest and activity, for the development of interdenominational fellowship, denominational loyalty, the exchange of ideas and the enlisting of co-operation in efforts of common interest, inspiring workers to do the best work in their own church, without assuming any authority over them, or in any way interfering with the work or rights of the denomination of which they are a part.

By means of these conventions, men who have wide experience in Sunday school work bring to the representatives of the county Sunday Schools methods and suggestions which have been found valuable in other fields. The Sunday School workers of the county are given an opportunity to exchange new ideas and experiences which have been worked in the local field, and the inspiration such a gathering gives new force and impetus to the workers who attend. Every Sunday School ought to be represented by one or more delegates at this convention, thus giving the Sunday School work of the county a strong stimulus for better work.

Representative Government.

It may not have occurred to the president that his calling of a conference of capital, labor and the public is an indication of the way American representative government has been perverted. Our city press appears to have regarded the move as necessary and proper.

But if our representative government were what the term implies all these elements of the conference, capitalists, labor, farmers, etc., would be adequately represented in congress and no special, arbitrary attempt to bring these interests together would have been needed. And being represented in congress they would long since have ironed out the difficulties which now loom so large on the social horizon.

By manipulating district representation the vested interests have secured almost the unanimous vote of our law-making bodies. There is little honest doubt as to what group in our nation nearly all the 323 lawyers in congress stand for. Few seriously believe that one man can represent all the varied interests of a district—capitalists, usurers, utility interests, the farmers, the laboring men, the professional men, or that the upshot of trying to represent all is representation of the vested interests.

How can representative government be restored? The editor of the New York American has written a pamphlet suggesting occupational instead of district representation. But this plan probably calls for too fundamental a change unless two other things are done at hand.

One of these is organization of the common people to secure political power. The other is proportional representation. Farmers and city workers throughout the United States and Canada are now progressing rapidly in political organization. Proportional representation is a simple plan by which several representatives are elected from one large district and each element of the population in this district gets representation according to the number of votes it can cast. These two things, awakened interest and organization of the common people and proportional representation, will restore representative government in this country.—Exchange.
