Little Girl Hurt Sliding Bannisters
Little Gladys Mayer, the nine year old daughter of Mrs. John Mayer, came very much to grief when she was sliding down the bannisters at the Morris high school yesterday. She had just started to slide down the railing from the main floor to the cafeteria in the basement when she slipped and fell fifteen feet to the floor below, striking her chin on one step and her mouth on another on the way down. It was found that her left arm was broken at the wrist, that her chin was badly cut, and that several teeth were knocked loose and one broken.—Morris Tribune.

—Too many youths regard themselves as above menial labor; too many girls regard themselves above doing the work that must be performed in the home. This class cannot, and does not, make much of an appeal to stalwart Americanism. Menial labor in all its branches, played an important part in building up this great nation.

—A little more patience with our fellow men, a few more compliments and fewer complaints, will not only pay better financially in the long run, but will put a little brightness into the lives of those who grow weary of complaints. Don't use all of your time in kicking or you will ruin your own disposition.—Canby News.
