BANDITS STEAL 128 HOGS

One hundred twenty-eight head of hogs disappeared mysteriously from the farm of J. P. Schommer, a well known farmer living a mile and a quarter north of St. Leo, about Oct. 18th. It is believed that the hogs were stolen by motor truck bandits.

The missing herd includes 88 head weighing over 200 pounds and 48 head weighing between 175 and 180 pounds. Twenty-one of the hogs were Chester Whites while the rest were a cross between the Duroc Jersey and a Mule Foot boar. The hogs are peculiarly marked, being mostly all red with black spots. Most of them had at least one mule foot.

The South St. Paul Commission firms have been advised to be on the lookout for these hogs as are also local buyers and shippers associations.

AN INTERESTING DEBATE

The Community Hall at Spicer was crowded to overflowing last Friday evening, standing room being at the premium, to hear the debate between friends of Volstead and supporters of O. J. Kvale, candidates for Congress. Mrs. T. M. Findley led in support of a resolution offering that the cause of prohibition required the re-election of A. J. Volstead to Congress. Mrs. Findley showed that the W. C. T. U. organization in the district was unanimously in favor of the resolution and was loudly cheered.

Mr. J. W. Witham, the Cornfield Philosopher, opposed the resolution. He quoted from an interview with Volstead that he was compelled to draw up the law in obedience to his oath of office, and that he "made the act just as wet as Congress would stand." The Philosopher called attention to the fact that Gov. Preus was supporting the wet candidate for Congress in the St. Paul district, and brot down the house when he asked if the reactionaries were supporting Volstead because he was "dry," and voting for Preus because he is "wet."

Mrs. Frank Lundgren also spoke for Volstead following the same line pursued by Mrs. Findley and insisted to keep the dry law on the statute books beyond the shadow of a doubt. Mr. V's election was vitally necessary. She also was greeted with a round of applause.

Mr. Witham, who once taught the boys in college parliamentary law and is a recognized authority on the subject, asserted that not only the chairman but every member of the Committee on the judiciary were as wet as the Atlantic ocean, yet if the House itself had a dry majority of only one no wet bill could get through.

In her closing remarks Mrs. F. named an ex-brewer who she alleged had come out for Kvale and she would not support the "Angel of Gabriel" if he had such backing.

The large audience, of which a good majority were clearly in favor of Kvale, evidently enjoyed the discussion, and everybody appeared happy and good natured.

OBSERVATIONS

(By the Cornfield Philosopher)

A Story

Editor Tribune: I was once very much impressed by a story told about a cute Yankee. When only a boy he started out to make his way in the world and coming to Albany, N. Y., he wandered down to the river where a number of boys were amusing themselves by throwing stones out into the water to see how far they could throw. Among them was the son of a rich aristocrat who having cast, a stone farther than any of the others, looked around in triumph, and observing the Yankee lad said, "There, I've beat all these boys, and I can beat you too." The Yankee in reply said, "I just calculate ye can't. I jest bet I can throw you further than you throwed that stone." The enraged "smart aleck" not being used to having his word disputed, especially by one in rags, and not for a moment realizing the consequence of the act put up a good $5 bill against a bill of an equal sum on a busted bank which the Yankee happened to have, and then was seized by the sturdy lad from Massachusetts and dumped about ten feet out into the cold water. On coming out nearly frozen and half drowned he claimed the money, but the Yankee pushed him back and exclaimed, "I didn't calkerlate to do it the first time, I am just going to keep on till I do get you that; and without more ado seized the trembling scion of aristocracy and cast him about 20 feet into the stream.

Never mind, he observed, I am sure to make it after a while, I gained ten feet that time. But the half drowned boy did not want any more duckings and gave the Yankee another $5 to let him off. So the boy from New England who was afterwards very successful earned his first $10 by giving this spoiled child of wealth two good duckings in the cold river.

Those of us who have been fighting the battles of the farmer and the working man for all these many years have taken a lesson from the above story. We did not get these the first or even the second or third time but we have kept on and now we may clearly see the end which is not many years distant.

The men and women who toil and labor and create the wealth of this nation are rising up in their might and majesty and ere long will take possession of this government by the power of their ballots and administer it, not in the interests of the favored few but the interest of the many who toil for a living. God speed that day.

MOVED TO OSSEO

Rev. H. R. Klemp and family left for their new home near Osseo, Minn., Wednesday. The congregation whose pastor the Reverend will become is larger than the Trinity congregation. He is also assisted by a parochial teacher in educating the children. There being no outside congregations he will not be compelled to make many trips as it was necessary here.—Raymond News.

SQUIRREL LICENSE REQUIRED

A trapping license is required for all persons desiring to take protected fur bearing animals with traps or other devices, the only exception being persons and members of such person's immediate family, who take or trap such fur bearing animals on land owned or leased and occupied as a permanent abode by such persons.

The following is a list of the various species protected by law together with the open season dates for their taking:

Black, gray and fox squirrels, snowshoe rabbits and raccoons—Oct. 15th to March 1st.

Mink, fisher, marten and muskrat—December 1st to April 1st.

MAN WHO HAD BEEN DRINKING HEAVILY FOUND DEAD

Peter Hokold of Underwood was found dead in a woodshed on the Elshaug farm two miles northeast of Underwood.

Mr. Hokold in company with four other men had purchased a bottle of moonshine from a man and were to pay 70 cents for it. They had a car and as soon as they got outside of Underwood they started to drink it. The moonshine which was very "strong stuff" seemed to affect Hokold more than it did the rest of them. He went to sleep after he had taken a few drinks. The other members of the party left him sleep in the car for a while and then they removed him to the shed.

The party went out to see the man shortly before midnight and they found him dead. The coroner was at once notified. Mr. Hokold's stomach will be sent to the state chemist to ascertain whether or not death was due to poison. The state chemist reported that he has several other cases under investigation. Fusel oil is the cause of most of the deaths due to moonshine. The oil is very difficult to trace in the stomach unless there is a large quantity present.

In some cases death is due to copper from the coils. The copper becomes corroded if the coil is not kept clean. Another form of poison develops between the acid and the alcoholic stage, due to imperfect distillation.
