Met His Match.
He could lick the stiffest boxer that ever donned the mitts,
And it wouldn't take him very long to do it.
He was pat on all the upper-cuts and scientific hits.
Was he doubtful of his prowess? No, he knew it.
He could lick John L., that fistie chief, who once defied the earth,
And keep him hustling constant in his orbit.
He could lick big Peter Jackson, with his Ethiopian grit,
Play base ball with the champion, Jimmy Corbett.
You might gather all the middle-weights from Dempsey up to Hall,
He could lick the whole catoodle in a minute.
The welterweights, the featherweights, and weights both great and small.
Could he lick them? Tell the truth, they weren't in it.
He could lick the giant Sampson, and Goliath, if you please,
All English scrubs and bum Australian tramps.
He could lick them single handed or in groups of twos and threes.
But he couldn't lick the new Columbian stamps.—M. J. Donnelly.
