

The Local News of the Week.

A healthy woman experiences the greatest happiness of all her life when her first-born nestles in her neck. Motherhood is a woman's duty and should be her joy. There are thousands of women to whom motherhood is a torture because of weakness and disease of the organs that make it possible. This is wrong and need not be. If a woman will but study the physiology of the organs distinctly feminine, and learn to take the proper care of her health—the proper remedy for weakness and disease peculiar to her sex, motherhood will become an unalloyed pleasure, where now it is dreaded and avoided for its pains and dangers.

The best medicine for a woman to take during the period preceding motherhood is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is the only medicine for this purpose invented by a regularly graduated, skilled and expert specialist in the treatment of the peculiar diseases of women. It cures all weakness and disease of the organs that perpetuate the race. It makes them strong and vigorous. It rids the expectant period of its usual discomforts. It insures baby's health and makes its coming easy and almost painless. It is the discovery of Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y. Women who wish to know more of the "Favorite Prescription" should write him.

Frederick Frederick, of No. 114 S. Second St., Camden, N. J., writes: "My wife is a customer of yours. She has used 'Favorite Prescription' to prevent miscarriage. She had a sickness last July, and suffered untold misery from a severe pain. I repeatedly told her to use your medicine, but she persisted in going to a so-called specialist, whose treatment only made her more sick and miserable. Then she used the 'Favorite Prescription' and was cured."

◆Pleasure. It is a matter of health alone. Nothing else. A healthy man can't be unhappy if he wants to. Much sickness is caused by constipation. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

ON OCEAN'S BED.

What Becomes of Ships Which Sink to the Bottom of the Sea.

What becomes of the ship that sinks in midocean? If it is of wood, it takes, in the first place, considerable time for it to reach the bottom. In 100 or more fathoms of water a quarter of an hour will elapse before the ship reaches bottom. It sinks slowly, and, when the bottom is reached, it falls gently into the soft, oozy bed, with no crash or breaking.

Of course, if it is laden with pig iron or corresponding substances, or if it is an iron ship, it sinks rapidly and sometimes strikes the bottom with such force as to smash in pieces. Once sunken, a ship becomes the prey of the countless inhabitants of the ocean.

They swarm over and through the great boat and make it their home. Besides this they cover every inch of the boat with a thick layer of lime. This takes time, of course, and when one generation dies another continues the work, until finally the ship is so laden with heavy incrustations, corals, sponges and barnacles that, if wood, the creaking timbers fall apart and slowly but surely are absorbed in the waste at the sea bottom.

Iron vessels are demolished more quickly than those of wood, which may last for centuries. The only metals that withstand the chemical action of the waves are gold and platinum, and glass also seems unaffected. No matter how long gold may be hidden in the ocean, it will always be gold when recovered, and this fact explains the many romantic and adventurous searches after hidden submarine treasures lost in shipwrecks.—Exchange.

Sanitation in Asia.

The appearance of plague at Bombay and Calcutta has produced one good effect at all events. Before its advent those prosperous cities had come to believe that they had nothing to learn in regard to sanitation. There was a time when they were open to reproach in such matters as open sewers, polluted water, and what not. But by dint of liberal expenditure of money and energy they had made matters right and could even challenge comparison with Paris, Berlin and Vienna. When, however, the awful eastern scourge, after striking firm root at the western capital, flew across the peninsula to the eastern, the public became a little doubtful as to whether sanitary precautions had been duly observed. First came inquiry, then dismay, indignation, wrath, as discovery followed discovery, each more appalling than the last. We refrain from giving particulars. Even to read these horrors is sickening. But a still more terrible question presents itself, if the two most cultured and wealthiest cities in Hindustan are in this dreadful condition, what must be the state of less favored centers of population in districts where there are few whites and many blacks? Were the plague to penetrate inland, it would, we fear, find many towns only too ready for its reception.—London Graphic.

The Wedding Ring.

The associations called up by a wedding ring are very touching, and it is the last thing that even the poorest wife will part with. If it ever was considered a badge of servitude, it now is much more suggestive of queenship and sovereignty. An old Latin writer thus describes the ring: It is circular, because the mutual love and hearty affection of matrimony should be forever, their continuity remaining as unbroken as the circle itself. It is an old—and exploded—notion that the ring is placed upon the fourth finger because a small artery connects with the heart. The real reason probably is that the left hand is not used as much as the right, and the fourth finger less than the other fingers.

The common cocklebur of the country is simply the seed case of a plant. Its thorny hooks give it a hold upon fur or wool bearing animals or upon the clothes of men, and thus cause it to be transported to considerable distances.

How joy would shine in the human heart, And life seem nothing but fun, If work looked as little before you start, As it does when you get it done. —Washington Star.

The masquerade ball at Turner Hall last Tuesday evening was a success in more ways than one. Although the number of masked people was not large, the number of lookers-on was, and they were certainly given their money's worth. The Prince Carnival and his retinue were richly attired and presented a pretty scene, while the stage performances were by far the best ever seen by the writer at a masquerade in Turner Hall. Brambel's engine was immense, the two tramps were clever and original, the jugglers in their burlesque performances were unique, and the "Kneipp cure" was laughable to the highest degree. All in all, the young men of the society are to be congratulated on the outcome of their efforts.

Some of the local barbers are again agitating the closing of shops on Sunday, simply on the ground of securing rest, and why should't the movement meet with endorsement? The barber is one of the hardest worked men you will meet in a month of Sundays. Just stop to think a minute. The barber must stay in one room and try and pass the time away, when there isn't anything to do, from seven o'clock in the morning until eleven at night. He can't even go out and breathe the fresh air in a few minutes' walk, for, just as sure as he does, someone will come in and ask: "Where is So-and-So?" "He just went out for a walk." He says: "I'll be back directly." And that is the last you see of him. Fourteen hours is the schedule time everyday except Saturday and then it is seventeen. Sunday finds him opening at 7 in the morning and keeping open till noon. His customer was out late the night before enjoying himself. He sleeps until nearly 11 o'clock Sunday morning, then gets up and goes to the shop, get their faces washed, shaved and hair combed, tells the barber of the time that he had the night before, and almost gets him drunk by the smell of his breath. Any barber will tell you that is the way it is. After he gets through, it is generally two o'clock before he can leave the shop. Then he goes home to get his dinner, feels sleepy, lies down and doesn't wake up until 8 or 9 in the evening. Then comes a cup of coffee and he goes to bed again, only to repeat the experience the next day. Do you blame him, then, for desiring a day off.

Col. Ingersoll, speaking of the fragrant Havana, once said: "These leaves tell of hope and rest. They smooth the wrinkled brows of care drive fear and strange mishapen dreads from the mind.
