

New UIm Review

Wednesday, Dec. 27, 1905.

Entered in the postoffice at New UIm, Minn., as second class matter.

The Czar is another instance of a high salaried man to whom the year 1905 has brought a lot of trouble.

If the big packers are sent to jail for rebating they will expect, of course, to have their sentences commuted. They are so used to that thing.

Important business at the White House will prevent Mr. Longworth from taking a very active part in the congressional proceedings this winter.

There seems to be an inclination on the part of some of the papers of the state to impress J. P. Jacobson in the race for the republican nomination for governor. Jake is too honest.

New Mexico reports a remarkable turquoise discovery. Prospectors will keep on until they find a great American diamond field and then the big trust in South Africa will have to stand competition in the business.

The Nicholas seem to be in it at this time of the year. There is St. Nicholas, the Czar Nicholas and then there is Nicholas Longworth. They may not all be happy alike but they each have their peculiar sort of fun.

Under the statehood measure proposed by the Republican caucus Arizona will absorb New Mexico, but the new state will not be entirely harmonious. Some time must elapse before sagebrush and cactus can fraternize.

A Buffalo paper says the farmers of that county will not maintain good country roads even after the city pays for them. People as close-fisted and short-sighted as that are doomed to a horrible sort of existence all their lives.

A Canadian syndicate proposes to build a canal and ship railway that will flank Lakes Erie and St. Clair and part of Huron. In ventures of this kind it is well to take into consideration the time when the Canadians will insist on annexation.

Another New York editor has been arrested on the charge of blackmailing a rich man. An editor who works to accumulate money lacks the true spirit of the profession and deserves to suffer both the pangs of poverty and the pains of the penitentiary.

The state ought to and no doubt will give the annual convention of the Grand Army which is to meet in Minneapolis next year, one of the best if not the best time that honorable body of veterans has ever had. The veterans are entitled to the best we have and this will probably be the last time the state will have to show its appreciation of the national body.

A number of the papers coming to this office from various parts of the state have shown enterprise in the publication of holiday editions, some of which were really works of art and worthy of the admiration of all the craft. As a rule these things are gotten up in a hurry and the excellence of appearance of the lithographed front is entirely destroyed by the blotchy job of printing which appears on the other pages.

There were a lot of little cases in the term of court just closed, that should never have been on the calendar, by all that is just and proper. The county was put to the expense of holding a term of court that lasted at least one week longer than it should. Cases were tried that cost the county more than the amount money involved, in fact many of them under most circumstances could have been settled out of court. There was a list of little cases this term that exceeded that of any other term for sometime.

The Philadelphia Ledger remarks that "the post office department is maintaining, at a tremendous loss, that most excellent philanthropic and educational institution the rural free delivery." Does the Ledger forget that there was a deficit in the post office department long before rural free delivery was started, or deny that the deficit could be removed by cutting out postal abuses? The rural population, where it is practicable to reach them, are as much entitled to free delivery as the citizens of Philadelphia. In some European countries all citizens, city and county, have free delivery, and postal departments there make large profits, though their charges in general are lower than those established in the United States.

The New Year.

A happy new year! What measure of meaningless greeting is this to many?

A happy new year! and then set immediately about making it miserable for someone.

A happy new year! and something done to make people realize that you mean it. How much of the brightness of life would come into this world if every person who utters this exclamation would see to it that through the year he made strenuous effort to see that his wish was made good.

But what of the old year! Is no one sorry that it is gone. Are there no tears to be shed when the midnight hour tolls the knell of the dead year?

A few perhaps; they from whom the passing years are stealing the blossoms of youth and they who number the days until the dawning of eternity, but the great jostling world as it pushes on reckons but its treasures of gold and silver and pauses only to whisper of loss or shout of gain.

The world is not sentimental in this age; it is commercial. It says: We have Christmas, that is good; it is the time to make money for at that time people buy who have no need to buy at other times, and when a week later the new year comes, the invoice of stock is taken and the profits reckoned.

But the sentiment that created the holidays!

Where is it? A merry Christmas, my friend, but I foreclose a mortgage tomorrow. A Happy New Year, but I will raze every happy hope that you have and obliterate every spark of ambition if you stand in the way of my success.

Happy is he who finds contentment at his own fireside, for friendship is the creature of an imagination, a dream, that vanishes with the awakening.

Happy New Year! Whisper it to her you love, or cry it from the house tops to all the people, unless you do something that will make good your wish, your words are nothing but sarcasm.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you
"Weep and you will weep alone."

The holiday season this year has been one of the best for trade for several years, and there is universal satisfaction over the way people have been patronizing the merchant with articles suitable for the time. For more than a month the demand for Christmas articles has been felt. This condition did not prevail last year and the merchants began to fear that there would be no trade until about two weeks before Christmas, when the buying was very heavy.

Out of the Dark.

The swinging gates of time, which open ever outwards on noiseless hinges, when the last stroke of the midnight hour shall have sounded Sunday, by invisible hands will be parted and out of the darkness, black with the impenetrable shadow of the unknown future will step the awakening form of the new year.

Before it, spread in letters of fire on parchment that time can never destroy, is the legacy of the old year, the last will and testament of all to which the new year succeeds: and what a legacy!

Political graft bank wrecking, graft in all its forms, the yellow dog, the yellow car, railroad rebates, patent medicine frauds, tainted money, Standard Oil corruption, public land frauds, Mormonism, corrupt elections, the beef trust, election frauds, subsidized legislators, disregard of law and trusts betrayed.

What a legacy!
And what have we to offer the new year?

We have men.
With all its baseness; its crimes against humanity, its spoliation of trust and the degradation of the principle, this age has still men who love honor and purity above money, and whose purpose in life is higher than has been that of they who coming to the close of the year must unfold to the new this terrible legacy of shame and disgrace.

If there is one resolution pressing itself upon the people of this nation at this time of the year, it is one that will bind them to take up the warfare against all of these unholy practices and see to it that virtue once more triumphs over vice and men are elected to all offices who have clean hands and pure hearts, and are worthy of the trust that shall be imposed in them.

Black as is the night out of which the new year comes, there are still the twinkling stars of hope, and over the hills that limit our imperfect vision, are faintly traced those golden rays of light that foretell the dawn of a better day.

The Maynard Progress says that a food inspector at that place made a raid on a quantity of groceries shipped there from Chicago and sold to the farmers through their representative, known as the "box car merchant." In the consignment were found several canisters labeled "black tea," but resembled dried weeds. Samples of this peculiar looking dried herb, together with samples of spices and syrups, was sent to the state dairy and food commissioner, St. Paul, for analysis. As to weight there were only four or five packages that could be considered full.

The most surprising incident of these examinations was that the consignment contained several packages of granulated sugar containing nineteen pounds each, the price per package being $1, while as a matter of fact this same grade of sugar is being sold here twenty pounds for $1. Another peculiar revelation was the large amount of corn meal the farmers were induced to buy, which cost at least twenty-five per cent more than if they had the native corn ground into meal.

There is plenty of food for thought in the statement that a fad for hunting birds' nests in the vicinity of Lawrence, Kan., deprived that section of an apple crop for six years. Birds are nature's chief balance wheel in keeping down insect pests. Yet many country folks are dissatisfied with a game law unless it is a practical nullity.

WONDERS OF SLEEP.

The Effects of Slumber Upon the Brain and the Heart.

"Shakespeare," said a scientist, "called sleep the ape of death. That is a striking name for a striking thing. Sleep is a wonderland. Let us explore it."

"Self hypnosis is a mysterious force that we can exercise on ourselves in sleep alone. We are all self hypnotists. We all, on certain nights, tell ourselves firmly that we must not oversleep, that the next morning—at 4, at 5 or 6 precisely—we must wake up. And we do wake up. Our sleeping selves respond to the hypnotic suggestion made the night before by our waking selves. That is mysterious and striking, isn't it? Still more mysterious and striking, though, is the fact of our keeping track of the time somehow in our slumber. How on earth do we do this?

"It is impossible to do without sleep. Men have slept standing, walking, even running. They have slept in battle, under fire, with guns roaring on all sides. They have slept in unendurable and deadly pain.

"There is no torture equal to that which the deprivation of sleep entails. The Chinese are the cruellest folk on earth and the most ingenious of torturers. Well, the Chinese place the deprivation of sleep at the head of their torture list.

"Sleep is a state of rest. The heart rests in sleep. The heart is a rhythmic muscle, not one that never ceases, but one that works at short shifts, like a puddler, a moment on, a moment off. Well, when we sleep the heart's shifts of rest are redoubled. It works, then, one on, two off, getting, indeed, pretty nearly as much repose as we do.

"The brain in sleep becomes pale and sinks below the level of the skull. When we are awake the brain is high and full and ruddy.

"Not only the brain and heart, but even the tear glands, rest in sleep. That is why when we awake we always rub our eyes. The rubbing is an instinctive action that stimulates the stagnant tear glands and causes them to moisten properly our eyes, all dried from their inaction."—Buffalo News.

THE ENGLISH PARLIAMENT.

Why Its Houses Were Built Upon the River Bank.

Wellington once declared that the most exciting moment of his life was not in any of his great battles, but that in which he had to forbid William IV. to attend a public banquet in the city during a time of great national excitement. Of the millions of people who every year see the English houses of parliament, how many imagine that their position was determined by strategic considerations? No one nowadays can think of the palace of Westminster in any other position than that which it occupies. But when the old houses were burned down and the task of rebuilding faced there was a proposition to establish them on or near the site of St. James' palace. Wellington resolutely put down his foot on the proposal.

The site suggested, its advocates pointed out, would be better as regards centrality and convenience than any other. But to the argument of the duke there could then be no answer. "With a vast and growing population, such as yours in London," he said, "you must never make it possible that you can be surrounded. You must build your houses of parliament upon the river, so that the means of ingress and egress are safe and that the populace cannot exact their demands by sitting down around you." Sir William Fraser, in whose memoirs the story is recalled, mentioned it to Napoleon III. just before the death of the latter. "What wisdom!" he said. "What wisdom!" And it set him musing upon the different turn which the history of France might have taken if in other ways as great precautions had been observed in his own case.—St. James' Gazette.

Hard Luck.

"Las' night I dreamed I died an' went ter heaben," said Toot. "St. Peter met me at de gate, an' I ax him ef I could come in. He sez he hatter weigh me 'gust mah sins fus,' an' wid dat he git out a big pair ob balances an' put me in one pan an' a great big bag in de udder. De bag outweigh me way yondah, so he sez I can't come in. I ax him foh ter tell me whut's in dat bag, an' he bus' it open fo' me. Well, sub, it wuz plumb full ob watahmillions an' chickens! An' I sez, sez I, 'Ef yo'll leabe mah sins out yere wid me,' sez I, 'I won't ax ter come in.' Sez he, 'All right.' But, doggone mah skin, I wake up fo' I could git ter dem t'ings!"—Judge.

De Witt's Little Early Risers
The famous little pills.

Julius A. Schmah, the veteran chief clerk of the house of representatives was looking after his political fences in St. Paul this week. Mr. Schmah is said to have his eye on the office of secretary of state now held by P. E. Hanson of Litchfield. The story of Schmah's candidacy has, it is said, several addenda in the shape of politics in the Seventh district. Those not over friendly to him say that he has formed a coalition with E. D. Seward of Lyon county for the judgeship in his district, with Jim Larson of Walnut Grove for the senate and with a man named Stewart for the house. George W. Somerville of Sleepy Eye may have to be reckoned with for the judgeship and Speaker Frank Clague for the senate. Then too, Julius' candidacy may affect J. F. Jacobson's chances for the gubernatorial nomination. Verily, it is a long land and tortuous too that leads to high places.—St. Peter Herald.

Max Sebald, who is known to many people in this county, was in the city yesterday and secured a license to marry Miss Dorothea Brande of Mulligan. Mr. Sebald has been in the service of the United States for a number of years, having enlisted as a private in the army and now holds a position as post quartermaster sergeant at Newport, R. I. He is home on a four month's furlough and will take his bride with him when he returns to his post. He has risen gradually in the service and is now receiving a very good salary, which increases as his term of enlistment increases, and will still be a young man when he is retired on a handsome pension.

In the opinion of many well-formed men all this talk of a successor for Judge B. F. Webber is a useless waste of breath. He has never declared that he would not be a candidate and, unless the Herald is much mistaken, he will make no such announcement. There is no higher-minded, more conscientious or more impartial man on the Minnesota bench and many years of usefulness remain to him.—St. Peter Herald.

The Princeton Union, Bob Dunn's paper, contains one of the editor's characteristically coarse and vulgar articles, this time it is directed against the daughter of the president of the United States. People who are compelled to read such stuff should be more than ever thankful that he is not representing the state in the capacity of governor or any other public office.

F. W. Hauenstein came up from St. Paul last evening to visit a day with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Weigand Hauenstein.

Mr. Otto A. Fleissner, American Epicurean, late Chef to Col. W. J. Coady, (Buffalo Bill), now chef at the Rainer Grand Hotel Seattle, Wash., writes: "I suffered with kidney and bladder trouble until life did not seem worth living. I had tried many medicines, but did not get any relief until I took Peruna. It was really wonderful how much better I was after I had used this medicine only a week. I did not expect that it would help me permanently, but as long as it was doing me good I continued to use it. At the end of six months I found to my relief that it had rid my system of all poisons, and that I was cured to stay cured. You certainly have a splendid medicine and I gladly endorse it."—Otto A. Fleissner.

Catarrh of the Kidneys a Common Disease—Kidney Trouble Often Falls to Be Regarded as Catarrh by Physicians.

Catarrh of the kidneys is very common indeed. It is a pity that this fact is not better known to the physicians as well as to the people.

People have kidney disease. They take some diuretic, hoping to get better. They never once think of catarrh. Kidney disease and catarrh are seldom associated in the minds of the people, and, alas, they are not very often associated in the minds of the physicians. Too few physicians recognize catarrh of the kidneys. They doctor for something else. They try this remedy and that remedy. The trouble may be catarrh all the time. A few bottles of Peruna would cure them.
