Supreme Court Puts Social Organizations Selling Liquor in Same Catgeory with Saloons.

Not a Few of Them Will be Put out of Business as a Result of the Decision.

By a vote of three to two the Minnesota supreme court has decided that social clubs in this state, if they wish to dispense liquors, must take out a retail license under the same restrictions as are required from saloons.

Heretofore clubs of this character, dispensing liquor only to members, have been asked to pay only the license required by the federal government; but in 1907 certain parties in Mankato raised a question as to the justice of the exemption and an appeal was made to Attorney General Young. That official decided that a club license was necessary.

Then the Minnesota club of St. Paul, the most prominent in the state, asked to have a test case brought and it was tried in Ramsey county on stipulated held directly opposite to the views of part of the week. the attorney general, but on an appeal brought by the latter the supreme called to Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, court reverses the lower court. The vote, however, is divided on the quesfor a license and Elliot and Jaggard dissenting.

In nearly every city of any consequence in the state there is a club that will be affected by the decision. New Ulm has one, St. Peter has one, Mankato has one and St. Paul and Minneapolis have several. Some of them will not be able to pay the license rethey exist, while others, like the Min-Rev. J. H. About a dozen dogs have been killed, either by the police or their owners, as the result of the rabies scare which has prevailed here for a week. Some of the animals may not have been affected, but the people and the authorities are taking no chances. Absolutely no dogs are allowed on the streets without a muzzle, a very sensible precaution. Among the valuable dogs that had to be killed were a water spaniel belonging to John Hauenstein Jr., a pointer belonging to James F. Garrow and a hunting dog owned by Anton Wiesner.

According to the annual report of County Attorney Erickson fifty criminal cases were prosecuted by the county during 1908. Of these five were for grand larceny in the second degree, one for assault in the second degree, two for bastardy, five for assault in the third degree, three for petit larceny, two for violation of the pure food laws, one for selling undrawn three for violations of the game laws, two for violations of the laws governing the conduct of saloons and two for threatened assault.
