PROMISING KIND OF WHEAT.

Canadian Farmer Has a Prolific Variety With Six Rowed Heads.

R. J. Taylor, who lives a few miles north of Carlyle, Saskatchewan, Canada, is in possession of forty pounds of a new kind of wheat which he hopes will increase greatly the yield of the west, says a Winnipeg dispatch. The striking feature of this new variety is that it grows on the head in six rows instead of the usual two.

Two years ago Mr. Taylor, while cutting his wheat, noticed a six rowed head and saved it, planting the seed in the spring and getting ninety-four heads. These ninety-four heads he sowed last spring and now has forty pounds of the seed, enough to sow about fifteen acres. Mr. Taylor claims that this wheat yields sixty and more bushels to the acre, so this fall he expects to have at least 1,000 bushels from his forty pounds. This wheat grades No. 2 Northern and is said to be less susceptible to frost than any of the varieties now grown in western Canada.
