The accident for which Mr. Strelow claims damages to the extent of $1,065 happened at Hanley Falls. Strelow was in the caboose of the train at the time and because of the jolting of the train was thrown against a stove receiving injuries which laid him up for several weeks. The case will be tried at the next regular term of the district court for this county in May.

A notable feature of Charles Klein's "The Lion and the Mouse," which Henry B. Harris brings to the Turner Theatre this evening, is the wholesome and distinct drawing of the various characters in the story. There cannot be found in the play a villain, a frivolous matron, a wayward girl, nor an adventuress. Nowadays it is indeed a rare occurrence to visit the theatre without having to hear the doings and misdoings of one or more of such characters on the stage. Mr. Klein has displayed a wonderful knowledge of what is most desired by the public of today over the footlights, and his treatment of the people in this pleasing play shows a delightful sympathy on the part of the dramatist. The cleanliness of "The Lion and the Mouse" has also been a factor in the remarkable success enjoyed by this interesting and well-told story of certain phases of the money world of this country today.
