Breaking It Gently.

A Southern planter, on his return from a European trip, was met at the railroad station by his old darky servant.

"Well, John," said the planter during the drive to his home, "what's happened since I've been away?"

"Jes' can't think o' nuthin, Boss," replied the darky, after slowly scratching his head, "'ceptin' dat de dog's daid."

"That's not very startling; tho I'm sorry, of course. But he was getting quite old. By the way, John, what did he die of?"

"I doan know, Boss, for positive, but I's an idea dat he done eat too much roas' hoss flesh."

"Indeed! And where did he get the roast horse flesh?"

"Well, you see, Boss, de ole gray mare done got roasted to death."

"You don't say so, John! How did that happen?"

"Well, Boss, she war in de barn when de barn burned down."

"You don't mean to tell me that my barn has burned down? How did it catch fire?"

"Doan know, Boss, 'zac'ly, but we sort o' specks it ketches fire from de house when de house burned down."

"Oh, that's awful news! How in the world did the house catch fire?"

"Why, Boss, dat's a myst'ry 'deed 't is. But I do heah 'em say as how some candles upset from roun' de corpse an' set fire to de house."

"Corpse, did you say, John? Whose corpse? Has anybody died?"

"Deed dey has, sah; yo' mudder-in-law has done died."

"Oh, that's terrible! What did she die of?"

"Well, Boss, we couldn't see dat dere was anything de matter, but I did heah 'em say dat she died o' shock."

"Died of shock? For heaven's sake, man, what could have shocked her?"

"Why, Boss, I speck 'twas o' count yo' wife runnin' away wid de coachman."—Lippincott's.

MONKEY BARBER MURDERS MATE

Tragedy Committed on Circus Train between Mankato and Minneapolis.

Says the Minneapolis Journal of Sunday:

A murder was discovered early today, when the Gentry show cars arrived in Minneapolis. A monkey was found strangled to death in his cage. The cord attached to his collar had been twisted around his neck and the free end of it was tightly gripped in the hands of another simian.

The man who takes care of the monkeys had retired to his bunk before the animals were loaded last night at Mankato. He left the care of the monkeys to a boy who had recently joined the show. The dead monkey and his murderer had exhibited unfriendly feelings toward each other since the beginning of the season. The dead one had had his face lathered daily by his murderer in a barber act. Often he had showed his teeth and exhibited a desire to get even.

The barber monkey was determined that he would not be caught off his guard. He hopped about in the cage last night and would not sleep. While the other was in the land of dreams he sprang upon him, with the result that the customer of the barber-shop scene is no more.

LOW BRIDGE TURNED THE LORENE

Ambitious Steamer Couldn't Get Past Judson.

The steamer Lorene put out toward New Ulm Monday morning, but as it neared Judson, the cry of low bridge was raised. Had the bridge at that point been about two feet higher the Lorene could have passed underneath it without any trouble. If the water should fall that much trips to New Ulm can be made by boat. Captain DeMers regretted very much that his boat could not have proceeded on its journey.—Mankato Free Press.

While talking about the battle of "Jeske's Grove" somebody asked Tony Wiesner if he ran. "Did I run?" says Tony; "of course, I run; if I hadn't run, I'd been there yet."

Mrs. Irene Cox Buell, a daughter of the once famous E. St. Julien Cox, was last week admitted to practice in the federal courts. She is the first woman lawyer in Minnesota to be accorded this distinction.

A new military society has been suggested, to be known as "The Veterans of the war of 1909." Only those are eligible to membership who participated in the memorable battles of "Scheible's Heights" and "Jeske's Grove."
