

Do You Get Up With a Lame Back?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everyone knows of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because of its remarkable health restoring properties. Swamp-Root fulfills almost every wish in overcoming rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble, it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been thoroughly tested in private practice, and has proved so successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root, and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are sold by all druggists. Don't make any mistake but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

THE MEETING OF CONGRESS

Most Comprehensive and Ambitious Program Ever Proposed by a Chief Executive Is Recommended to the National Legislature.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.
THE congress of the United States meets once a year and sometimes twice. This is one of the years in which it meets twice. The special session started on March 15 and adjourned when the weather grew so hot it wilted even the tariff discussion. The regular session convenes Dec. 6. Ordinarily little is done before the Christmas holidays except the appointment of committees. This year will probably prove no exception to the rule, although the committees of the senate and a few of the most important of the house are already appointed. What the coming session will do nobody can tell. The prophet never lived with sufficient temerity to tackle the job. There are alleged prophets who attempt to foretell when the world will come to an end, what the weather will be on inauguration day and who will be elected president, but they all sidestep congress. When it comes to uncertainty the probable action of congress is the most uncertain thing known in nature. In comparison the future actions of a katydid can be determined with mathematical exactitude. The only safe prediction to make is that the president will tell congress what it ought to do and that it will proceed to do something else, yet it might fool us even in that. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and congress blows nobody knows where, but at any rate it blows. Congress is made up of Speaker Cannon, Senator Aldrich and some others. Numerically there are 390 others in the house and 91 in the senate, but Ten Main Policies Urged by the President—Great Fight Looked For Over the Widely Discussed Postal Savings Bank Proposal.

Expansion of the duties of the bureau of corporations.
Creation of a new bureau in the department of justice to deal with violations of law by interstate carriers.
Establishment of a so called "railroad court."
Amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law.
Creation of a postal savings bank.
Amendment of the procedure regarding the granting of injunctions.
Conservation of natural resources.
In addition to these and the minor recommendations of the president, the two territories of Arizona and New Mexico will knock for admission to statehood, the deep waterways people will knock for a ship canal through the Mississippi, the insurgents will knock for a tariff commission, the individual congressmen and senators will knock for "pork" and a growing deficit in the treasury will knock with loud clamor for economy. Can you beat that for a knocking program? If any pessimist gets out his hammer and adds to the unholy din he should be sternly suppressed.
There yet remains the monetary commission about which Senator Aldrich is trying to educate the country. It is not probable, however, that this body will make its report in time to be acted on by the coming session. It may even be left over to the next congress, which meets in 1911.
One of the minor policies favored by the president is the consolidation into a national health bureau of all instruments for the investigation, prevention and cure of disease, which are now included in the national government or may properly be included. As this was favored in the last national to keep the transportation control in the hands of the interstate commerce commission, an executive body.

President Taft plans to divide the executive and judicial functions of the commission, giving the last named to a court proper. One objection urged to this by congress will be on the score of expense. Perhaps the chief amendment advocated by the president in the anti-trust law will be one to permit certain forms of combination by railroads, such combination to be under the supervision of the government and with entire publicity. This was favored by Roosevelt. It is not believed that these proposed changes in the transportation laws will arouse much opposition from the railroads, some of them being heartily favored by transportation men as in the nature of a relief.

Postal Banks and Subsidies.

One of the greatest fights of the session will be over the postal savings bank proposal. Notwithstanding the fact that this is in the last Republican national platform and is even mentioned as an alternative in the Democratic platform, it will be opposed by an influential section of both parties. The banks, of course, will antagonize it—not only the private savings institutions, but the national and state banks. The old cry of government paternalism is being raised. In many cases this is no doubt the sincere utterance of those who believe "that government best which governs least," while in others it is just as certainly assumed by men who oppose the government going into the banking business. What the attitude of Cannon and Aldrich will be toward postal savings banks is problematical, but it is hardly likely to be one of extreme friendship, as Cannon is himself interested in a bank and Aldrich is in close touch with the bankers of New York.

Ship subsidies will bring another fight, but from an entirely different source. The American people are traditionally opposed to the granting of direct subsidies, and this sentiment has been sufficient to defeat attempted legislation of this kind in the past. Taft is the first president to come out flat footedly in favor of ship subsidies, and but for one circumstance his influence might be sufficient to put it through. The obstacle in the way is that the national treasury is running more and more into a deficit. It was hoped that the new tariff bill would remedy this condition, but as yet it has failed to do so. Not in recent years has there been so great a cry or so great a need for economy. In the hands of the foes of a ship subsidy this fact will be a powerful club.

In the matter of injunctions and reform of federal court procedure the president has indicated that he will ask for the appointment of a commission to look into the matter and report to a future session of congress. Against this plan, unless it be on the score of expense, there will probably be little or no opposition.

A Third Term Bugaboo.

The conservation of natural resources has formed the storm center during the summer and may play some part in congress, although it is safe to say that the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy will take a back seat when trust regulation, postal savings banks and ship subsidies come to the front. In a general way the president has approved the Roosevelt policies of conserving water power sites, coal lands, forests and other resources. On the reclamation question Mr. Taft has come to the rather momentous decision that he will ask for an issue of bonds. On its face this is sufficiently startling, but considered with the circumstances it appears justifiable. The fact is that a large number of people procured lands in the arid belt with the understanding that the government was about to open irrigation plants in their vicinity. Owing to lack of funds the government projects have been held up, and the people are suffering in consequence. The president's proposal is to issue bonds payable from future revenues raised for reclamation purposes and with the money obtained from the sale of these bonds to complete the irrigation projects thus halted. That would be a relief to the settlers, would open up thousands of acres of idle land for cultivation and would work little or no hardship on the government.

As an aftermath of the row raised over the conservation question a New York newspaper recently printed a story to the effect that the whole trouble was started as a part of a scheme to renominate Theodore Roosevelt for president in 1912. It even stated that the cabinet had met in extraordinary session during President Taft's absence and had considered the alarming situation. As an example of the fantastic tales that emanate from Washington during the dull season it is not bad, but is hardly worth considering from any other standpoint than that of a fairy story.

When congressmen return to Washington this winter they will find the president housed in a new and commodious executive building of an architectural dignity befitting his great office. For the first time the chief magistrate of the republic has official quarters that are not a reproach. Up to the time of Roosevelt the presidents were compelled to attend to public business in their private residence. Under Roosevelt the executive office wing which was constructed was popularly known as the "hencoop." During President Taft's vacation and transcontinental journey this structure was entirely overhauled and enlarged to a size worthy of its object. It is still simple and democratic in appearance, but is no longer an architectural joke.
