A Runaway.

Coming down College Hill early Sunday morning Henry Stueber of Sigel met with a serious accident. While driving down the steep hill just opposite the monument the hold-back strap of the harness broke and the horse becoming frightened started on a run down the hill dashing into the buggy of Geo. Helget, also of Sigel, which was some distance ahead of the run-away horse. Helget's buggy was upset and the four occupants were thrown out. A twelve year old daughter of Mr. Helget was injured about the face. Mr. Stueber's buggy was quite badly smashed. The horse was caught on Minnesota St. and had escaped all injuries.

Respect Your Neighbors Rights.

A number of complaints from different parts of the city have been heard to the effect that certain people allow their chickens to run astray thus allowing them to make unwelcome calls at the neighbors' gardens and yards. In several instances, we are told, lawns and gardens which by much diligence and labor have been put in splendid conditions and showing the premises to a good advantage were "badly scratched up" by these fowl tramps. Now, we don't care to publish the red hot communications and protests received at this office against the unneighborly owners of the chickens, but we do hope, that this little reminder will serve as a timely warning and, simultaneously, be an earnest appeal to those who carelessly permit their chickens to run at large. Respect the rights of your fellow men and conduct your own affairs in such a manner that it will not become obnoxious and injurious to your neighbors. In all instances apply the Golden Rule.

Speaking "Through the Nose."
We remark that such a one "speaks through the nose," when, as a matter of fact, the queer disagreeable tone is produced when the nasal passage is closed. Hold the nostrils and prove it.

Vegetable Sentiment.
We prefer the cabbage for its heart, the cauliflower for its head.
