Only a Funny Story

An ex-farmer who was running a thrifty little bank was asked by a friend how he happened to go into the banking business. He explained as follows:

"Well, I just rented a vacant store room and put up a bank sign. First day a fellow came along and left a couple hundred dollars with me. Next day another fellow left a couple hundred and by that time I had enough confidence in it that I put in a couple hundred myself." We have confidence enough in this community to invest all our capital and surplus here and we try to earn the full confidence of the entire community by being square and fair in all our dealings.
