

Treat Your Seed Wheat

Wheat Diseases

There are three serious diseases: Smut, Scab and Rust. Rust cannot be prevented; the other two can. Damage from rust can be partially avoided by selecting a good quality of Marquis seed and by early seeding in order to get an early maturity.

We can also cut out the Barberry bushes which harbor the rust spores in the winter. Smut and scab are easily preventable. Blow out with a fanning mill as many of the smut balls as possible and sow only the plumpest grains.

The simplest and most successful method to treat seed wheat for smut, is to mix one pound common commercial formaldehyde with forty gallons of water.

Provide two tubs or half barrels; raise one of them on a box higher than another which may be on the ground. Fill the top tub half full of the solution, then pour wheat in last. Stir it around until it is all thoroughly wet and the smut balls, trash, shriveled kernels and many weed seed float to the top.

Skim Off the Floating Stuff and destroy by grinding it and feeding it to chickens after it is dry. Do not feed it whole, because many weed seeds being indigestible, will find their way back to the fields.

After skimming, take a short piece of hose, fill it in the top tub and quickly throw one end of it over into the other tub. This will act as a siphon and draw off the solution. When drained, dump the moist seed from the upper tub to a clean canvas or platform. Reverse the position of the tubs and proceed as before.

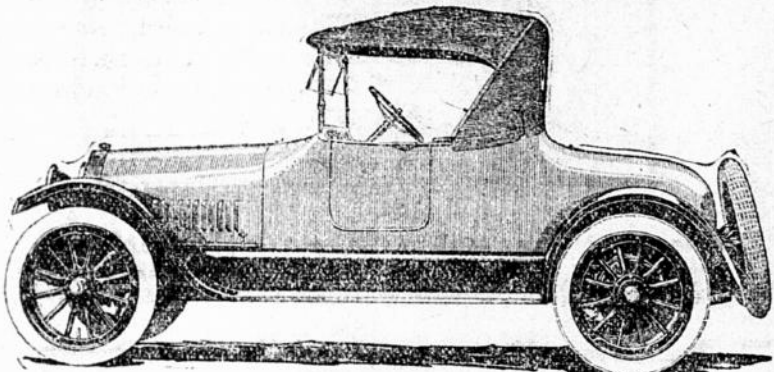

Cover the treated seed with sacks or blankets or another canvas which have also been treated in the solution. Leave covered for several hours or over night. Don't let the seed freeze while damp.

The method of sprinkling the seed with a sprinkling can and raking it over is also good, or you can treat the wheat in a tight wagon box, driving along after the seeder in the field, sowing it wet. Be careful that you do not clog your seeding spouts.

A substantial gain is made from use of formaldehyde owing probably to the fact that grain is affected by other seed borne parasites than smut and scab and which are as effectively checked by the formaldehyde.

A Real ONE MAN Plowing Outfit

HEIDER "C" 12-20 Rock Island Power Lift Plow Attached

Whether you are farming 100 acres or 500, don't fail to come in and see the Heider Model "C" 12-20 with the Rock Island No. 19 Power Lift Plow attached.

This is a one-man combination that means ease of handling and more work in the course of a day. With this plowing unit you can back right up to the fence corners, plowing every usable foot of soil. It is built strong and rigid, and gives you a clearance of from 8 to 10 inches when raised. This means ample clearance for transporting from one field to another.

No levers to operate, your foot controls the plow—your hands guide the tractor.

7 Speeds Forward—7 Reserve

Remember, the Heider is the famous Friction Drive tractor, which means 7 speeds forward—7 reserve, all with one motor speed and one lever for either traction or belt work.

Transmission gears, bevel gears and clutch are eliminated. All three units are in one—no transmission gears to put in mesh—none to strip.

EBERT GOVERNMENT IS OVERTHROWN

when the revolting troops marched in and Kapp and von Luetwitz took control, is variously reported to be at Dresden or Stuttgart, and from his point of security is calling on the Socialists and working classes generally to stand by the old government and to use the strike weapon so that the counter revolution may be promptly suppressed.

Brief Revolution Predicted.

The conviction has prevailed from the start among men not identified with the present revolution that it will be short-lived, as it is outwardly without the support of the conservatives or the reactionary leaders, and it is viewed in many quarters as a "trial balloon" which will collapse shortly.

The most immediate danger is recognized as a general strike throughout Germany, which has already been proclaimed in many of the principal cities, including Berlin. In the meantime the old government is recovering its nerve, and seems to have very liberal support from the federal states in the south.

Sanguinary encounters between workmen and troops have occurred in Frankfurt. During the fighting in Frankfurt 15 persons were killed and a hundred wounded. The police were compelled to leave the town in consequence of the mob seizing an arms depot.

In an attempt by workers to invade the barracks at Frankfurt one man was killed and four men were badly wounded. There also has been considerable fighting between adherents of the old and new regime at Dueseldorf.

A general strike was called for Monday in Breslau, Magdeburg, Nuremberg and Frankfurt.

In his appeal for a general strike Gustav Bauer, chancellor in the Ebert cabinet said:

"This is the sole weapon at the disposal of the workers for twisting the neck of the new government."

Southern Germany Backs Ebert.

In Southern Germany the governments are reported to be combining to oppose the revolution. Bavaria, Wurttemberg and Saxony have refused to acknowledge the new Berlin government, denouncing the movement as a crime against the German people, that the progressive development of the Southern German states should be disturbed from Berlin. These states announce their recognition only of the national assembly. The troops of Bavaria and Wurttemberg have declared their allegiance to their respective governments.

Kapp Denies Revolt Is Reactionary.

There has been constant official iteration of the statement that the new government is not reactionary; that it does not desire the restoration of the monarchy, but that it has come into office so that Germany may be rehabilitated. Chancellor Kapp, in a statement to the foreign correspondents, said that the conditions of the peace treaty would be fulfilled, so far as they could be reconciled with German honor and Germany's economic condition. He added:

"The government takes its stand on democracy. We have raised the black, white and red flag to its place of honor and we will suppress any attempt at a general strike. At Leipzig the trial of war criminals will proceed, and the censorship will be relaxed."

August Winning, governor of East Prussia, and General von Esthorn, chief in command of the first Reichswehr, have telegraphed Chancellor Kapp the contents of a manifesto issued by East Prussia recognizing the new government and declaring that "we of East Prussia who are surrounded by enemy neighbors must welcome any development promising our province a chance of peace and work."

A semi-official statement issued today says that the Allied commission at Berlin has "agreed" to the new government.

A bloodless revolution thus far has characterized the movement in Berlin, where the people are viewing events with that serenity to which they have been accustomed by the occurrences of recent years. There is, however, an undercurrent of anxiety because barbed entanglements have been thrown up in front of the great public buildings.

Near Unter den Linden and Wilhelmstrasse, cannon and machine guns are posted at the cross streets and other points of vantage, and heavily armed guards are stationed throughout the city. This is an ominous sign of possible clashes when those opposed to the counter revolution marshal their forces for future action.

A dispatch from Weimar says an attack lasting several hours was made on Saturday night with rifles and hand grenades on the general post office, occupied by the public security guard. The building and a number of private houses were damaged, but the post-office remained in the hands of the security guard.

Meanwhile one of the great figures in the German national life, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, has kept himself in the background. His former close associate, General Ludendorff, credited with being the brains and moving spirit of the German army in its belligerent days, has had a conference with the new chancellor. What passed between them is, of course, not known.
