GALLANT KNIGHT WINS FAIR LADY BY OWN EFFORTS

In Spite Of Opposition Of The Maid And Her Employer As Well.

NO MOVIES SUNDAY
DECEMBER THE THIRD

Concert Of German Singers
Instead. Fine Vaudeville Coming.

Who said times are dull and bad? You'll never believe it after you see "Too Much Business" at the Turner Theatre tomorrow afternoon and evening. This comedy drama is a scream without a single bit of slap-stick work. It is one of those really funny things that will get a laugh from the worst grouch. The hero sets out to win his lady love who really loves him but wants him to wake up and set the world afire with his energy. The hero, John Henry Jackson, is not a particularly ambitious young fellow but he wakes up when the sweet maid tells him there is nothing doing. He secures an option on the lady's favor by promising to double his own salary within thirty days' time.

An Unique Bargain. Both of the young people are employed by an old grouch who hasn't much time for John Henry but thinks the lady invaluable and he determines never to permit any young whippersnapper to interfere with his plan of retaining the girl's services indefinitely. Myra does not know how valuable she is to her employer but she does know he will do almost anything she tells him to do so she decided to secretly help her lover to make good on his proposal to double his salary and she goes to the boss and asks him to double John Henry's salary. The boss agrees but happening to catch the gleam of the diamond on Myra's third finger which had been placed there to bind the option, the old man throws a fit and before he comes out of it he has fired John Henry. The victim thinks Myra doesn't want him to make good and has been the cause of his dismissal and this rouses him to action. He swears to make good in spite of her and, of course, he does. The way he chooses to do it is where the fun comes in and we are not going to tell you about that. We will only say that an orphanage furnishes the "Too Much Business" that does the trick for the young man. It is thoroughly clean and wholesome, one of the pictures recommended by General Manager Hays as having an uplifting, happy effect.

Three Shows. Myra Dalton is most happily portrayed by Ethel Grey Terry and Edward Horton takes the role of the aspiring hero. The picture is taken from the Earl Derr Biggers story which ran last winter in the Saturday Evening Post. No better, happier way of spending a Thanksgiving afternoon or evening could be imagined than to take the whole family to see "Too Much Business." Matinee at 3 P. M., evening shows at 7 and 9.

Vaudeville Coming. There will be no movie Sunday, December 3, on account of the wonderful concert of the triple quartet from Baden. The following week the Vaudeville Supreme Co. now playing at the Auditorium in Minneapolis, will come to New Ulm under the management of Mr. Gould and will appear at Turner Theatre December 7, 8, 9, 10. This will be a wonderful attraction for New Ulm and everyone should plan to enjoy this special treat.
