Happy New Year.

What are you going to do in 1923 to make the "Happy New Year" your wish for all you greet in January 1st come true?

"What can I do?" is the natural answer.

Here is something you can do; you can interest yourselves in your schools. You can visit some of them. You can see for yourself whether or not your own children are being adequately cared for, properly taught, wisely made into real Americans.

"But I have no children," is no good answer. You have an American birthright. You have an American ideal. You believe in Democracy. You believe in freedom of thought, of religion, of the press, of action, within the law. You believe this is the best country in which to live. You believe that here, rather than in any other land, man has the greatest opportunity to be happy.

But you won't be able to believe these things if the generation to come after you does not so act that you can believe them. And the generation to follow you is not going to be truly and wholly American, unless its members are taught, now, to-day, this minute, in the fundamentals of the American doctrine.

You pay your taxes and comfortably leave the rest to a School Board, or a Superintendent of Schools, or a City Council. When you give an order in business, do you forget it, or watch to see if it is carried out? When a woman tells her cook to prepare dinner, does she rest satisfied regardless of how the dinner is cooked, or train her cook to better ways if it is ill-done, or get a new cook if the old one can not be taught? Well, which is most important; the order in business, the cooking of a dinner, or the education of children? You have given your orders, as a voter and a tax payer; it is your business to see that they are carried out. If you find them unexecuted, you can protest. But if no one looks to see, if no one protests, if no one takes an interest, not only the children, but America, your America suffers!

Farmers Losing Farms.

The farm census of Minnesota just disclosed by N. J. Holmberg, state commissioner of agriculture, is full of most impressive figures regarding the growth and magnitude of the agricultural industry in one of the greatest and richest of the states, but there are certain developments which should engage the serious attention of every one interested in the future of this commonwealth.

For instance, while the number of farms have increased since 1920 from 157,170 to 170,891, a truly remarkable gain, and the farm acreage from 26,859,526 to 27,934,179, there has been a disquieting proportionate increase in the number of farm tenants as compared to farm owners.

Farm owners increased from 118,707 to 120,360, according to Mr. Holmberg. During this same period farm renters increased from 38,463 to 46,583. While the number of owners increased 1,653 the number of renters increased 8,120. According to Mr. Holmberg's figures, which do not account for the present ownership of nearly 4,000 farms, the percentage of owners has declined from 75.5 in 1920 to 70.4 per cent in 1922, while the percentage of renters has increased from 24.5 in 1920 to 27.2 in 1922. At the present rate of 8,000 farms in two years, all the farmers in Minnesota would lose their farms in 30 years! Such a condition indicates the seriousness of the present crisis in agriculture, and the necessity for legislative and co-operative action to stop this alarming tendency.—Minnesota Daily Star.

A Contrast in Cases.
Charles W. Morse, New York ship-builder who is under indictment on a charge of conspiracy to defraud the Shipping board in connection with war-time contracts, is up to his old tricks. He has asked the District of Columbia Supreme court for permission to go to Rome to consult Professor Machiava, physician of the late Pope Benedict XVI. In his petition Morse declares that Professor Machiava is familiar with his alleged illness and can give him relief.

Morse was pardoned from the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., in 1912 by President Taft. He was serving a sentence of 15 years for violating the National banking laws. A White House statement issued at that time declared that Morse could not live another month in confinement and if released would die within six months. He has continued to live and has been active enough to get into trouble with the Government for his shipping maneuvers during the war.

H. M. Daugherty, present attorney general of the United States, was counsel for Morse at the time he secured his freedom and is credited with bringing it about.

The other day Ricardo Flores Magon, Mexican anarchist, died in Leavenworth penitentiary. "He was sent there," declares the Nation, "because in his little Spanish newspaper he expressed his philosophy which included opposition to the World War. (No other country in the world imposes such sentences for crimes of opinion). He had served five years. A year ago one prison doctor diagnosed him as sick with diabetes. Within a month another had reported chronic bronchitis.

"His friends had appealed to the Attorney General of the United States—who happens to be the very lawyer who for money got the robust banker-crook, Charles W. Morse, out of prison, on the pretext that he was ill—but Mr. Daugherty replied, with his usual looseness of statement, that Magon was a 'dangerous anarchist,' was not ill, and must stay in jail—his life had been 'one continuous fight against law and order.'" In Mexico they knew better. They recalled his long fight against the tyrant Diaz; when the news of his death came the Chamber of Deputies draped the speaker's rostrum in mourning; the labor unions organized a parade in his honor. Meanwhile, his fellow-editor Librado Rivera is still in jail. Will Mr. Daugherty keep him, too, behind the bars until he comes out in a coffin?"

Workers Fail to Benefit.
Workers in pottery plants whose owners are members of the United States Potters' Association have returned to their employment after having been on strike for two months in an unsuccessful effort to obtain an increase of 7 per cent in their wages. They go back to work at the former scale.

One of the arguments presented by the proponents of the heavy duties imposed by the Fordney-McCumber profiteers' tariff act on imports of pottery, was that these high tolls would "protect" American workers from competition with Czech-Slovakian and German operatives who receive only a small fraction of the average daily wage paid by manufacturing potters in the United States.

The manufacturers got the rates they wanted on more than 100 items in the schedule covering earthen and earthenware, and prices to the consumer have already begun to reflect the increases in the tariff. The workers not only have not benefited by this "protection" to their employers but are poorer by the loss of two months' pay as a consequence of their strike.

Must Welcome Massacres.
Representative Walter H. Newton of Minneapolis, stand pat Republican Congressman, declared in Congress on December 12 that if this country should let down the immigration bars to permit the Greeks and Armenians driven from Turkey to come in, the American nation might as well make up its mind that hereafter it will have to provide a refuge for all of the discarded minorities from all parts of the world.

No one who is familiar with Congressman Newton's line of reasoning would expect him to make any different argument than the one attributed to him in the above paragraph. There are thousands now in the Near East whose only hope for the future lies in the willingness of their relatives in the United States to provide for them. American generosity is now keeping alive many of these in the refuge camps in Greece and Asia Minor but this is no permanent solution of the problem.

We are faced with the alternative of spending money to keep people alive without giving them the means of rehabilitation or allowing at least those who have near relatives in America to come over here to normal home life and support.

Evidence is now accumulating that the quota law for immigration does not work. American public opinion will not tolerate a strict enforcement of the law that separates families. Again and again the law has been twisted and stretched to meet these situations.

When relatives in America are willing to accept unfortunate Armenians and Greeks who have been driven from their homes by the Terrible Turk, Mr. Newton and those like him would prevent their entrance into the country because an arbitrary quota happens to be exhausted. In the meantime these unfortunates must be kept alive in refuge camps by the flagging spirit of American generosity.

Such an attitude of mind as that displayed by Mr. Newton must welcome the Turkish massacres for they leave fewer unfortunates to worry about

A Home Products Dinner.
We have recently published two news items about Yakima, Washington, receiving our information from a magazine sent by E. B. Velkanje, who is an attorney at Yakima. Mr. Velkan-je writes us a personal letter which is not intended for publication but he tells of an activity of the Yakima Commercial Club, which may be of interest to New Ulm, and for that reason we are quoting a portion of his letter here.

"The Commercial Club here pulls off a stunt annually, which I think should be done by every community. A Home Products dinner; only home products are used and they are all donated to the club. We charge one dollar a plate which takes care of the preparation and serving of the dinner and usually leaves a neat little balance for the club. It has a good many surprises in store and is a good way to become acquainted with your home community. We have not been able to find a hall large enough to accommodate all those who wish to attend."

Progressive Conference Meets.
Senator Shipstead of Minnesota, Senator Wheeler of Montana and Senator Brookhart of Iowa were conspicuous members of the conference of progressives which met at Washington the first of the month. All fought their way to senatorships with scarcely any money or organization back of them. They were opposed in their respective states by almost the entire press and big business.

The conference which was called by Senator La Follette marked the first gathering of the newly elected Progressives. It displayed a fighting edge and a determination to make the Progressive program an actual fact.

The conference delayed until spring the formulation of a detailed program. By such a maneuver the Progressives blocked the possibility of the White House stealing any of their thunder and prevented their enemies from singling out any one proposal for attack.

Meanwhile the Progressives will do all in their power to defeat the indefensible ship subsidy bill and other Administration legislation.

From the complexion of the conference it is evident that the newly elected Progressives will constitute a heavy reinforcement to the liberal bloc in Congress. This bloc now appears strong enough to force the fighting in the next session despite the obstacles of party machinery and of the party organization of Congress.

KALNES WINS PRAISE FOR PITTY EDITORIAL

I. M. Kalnes, who edited the Review during the past summer, is at present attending the School of Journalism at Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill. Mr. Kalnes has won considerable note as a writer of liberal editorials, one of which is declared by Brunell of the Chicago Tribune to be a gem. This editorial which is headed "Moving the Milk Stool" is very short and pithy and we believe our readers will be interested in seeing it published in the Review:

"Moving the Milk Stool."

"The unspeakable Turk needs the rawhide of the world powers across the seat of his pants. Proof of this is unnecessary, for the powers admit it."

"The brutal Turk is committing a new atrocity. He is removing his seat out of reach of the cowhide."

"Withdrawing from Constantinople to Angora is a dirty trick. The powers invest billions in war boats. War boats are strong arguments in international conversation. By removing the seat of government to the interior, Kemal weakens the argument of the powers."

"The bolshevik Russ set the new example in the first place when he picked up his seat at Petrograd and sneaked back to Moscow, where he sits in impudent security. Moving of the milk stool also interferes with outsiders taking further part in the milking except by special invitation and under specified restrictions."

"And yet this idea of doing your own milking carries a rather alluring contagion. Wonder how far Washington, D. C., would have to be moved to keep the seat beyond the reach of John Bull?"

Thomas S. Griffing, acting chief naturalization examiner, found several persons when he conducted a naturalization hearing here for those who were qualified for citizenship in all respects except that they had a hazy idea of the fundamentals of government. There are five such persons whose petitions are now pending. There are also ten persons who attended the class last year and who are thought to be anxious to be members this year. School authorities point out that it will be necessary to have a sufficient enrollment to make the class worth while.

Free Text Books Provided.
All who enroll are provided by the government with free text books in history and civics. It is the earnest desire of Mr. Griffing, and the school authorities that the opportunity to take this course be not lost to those who desire citizenship because such a few present themselves that it will not pay to give the instruction.
