FARMER'S GRANGE, No. 157, P. of H. Fri day, on or before the full of the moon.

LOCAL SUMMARY. By, by, 1883. Success to 1884. The SIFTER is the people's paper.

Mr. Hiram Taylor, the popular clerk at the drug-store, is off on a short va ca tion.

In turning the new leaf, SIFTER John finds nearly six hundred sub scribers. It is whispered (perhaps it is the "department") that it will soon be 1000.

Those sleigh bells at Winchester's will beat the "Crosby chime" all hol low.

A Sad Accident. Last Friday afternoon Mr. Solon Un derwood, a farmer, residing a mile and a half below this place, met with a serious accident. Mr. Underwood was cutting logs on a steep side hill, and one of them rolling another him, jam ming a leg against his leg and breaking the leg just above the knee.

Dr. N. P. Wood was immediately sum moned, and Mr. Underwood was soon placed in as comfortable a position as possible, where he lies apparently doing as well as could be expected.

Mr. U. is an honest, upright man in moderate circumstances. We learn that a paper is in circulation for his benefit. Let the contribution be a large one.

Card of Thanks. We take this method to return thanks to our friends and neighbors for their surprise visit on the 31st, and for the many and valuable gifts left by them.

We can only say that this is not a mat ter of form, but comes from deep down in our hearts. May Heaven bless you, every one, not only those present but others who, though absent in person, made their presence felt through their kind letters and valuable tokens of their love.

MR. AND MRS. E. F. RUGG. Remember that the SIFTER is the friend of all projects looking to the material, social and moral prosperity and advancement of its section, and is in sympathy with the intelligent masses on all the live issues of the day.

Sudden Death. Our citizens were shocked to learn, last Thursday, of the sudden death of Mr. E. A. Cole. Mr. Cole was in ap par ent good health, worked on the day previous, got up that morning and did some chores, and came in the house complaining of his head. His wife immediately fixed a place for him to lie down, where he soon became un conscious and in a little while was dead.

Invitations are out to the marriage of Hon. J. L. Martin and Miss Dewey, of Montpelier, at Montpelier, January 10.

Crystal Wedding. Why not December 31 as well as any other time. It was a pleasant evening and a pleasant ride, with Phi letus handling the ribbons. And it was no common sleigh, no, but a long trav erse, with a long wagon-box on it and some long straw in the bottom, and long robes to cover them, and then Phi. was some long, but it wasn't long before he pulled up at Elijah's, not Elijah the Prophet, but Elijah the just, who lives in the southwest part of town along with Hattie, the Rugg, and then John wanted to know what was up, and all the people said, this is the crystal wedding of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Rugg, and John said, amen. We know them well, and so do all their townpeople, and they are all their friends, because they are just and love mercy and sweet charity, and do not hide their light under a bushel. We will go in, and lo, that big house was full of intelligent, living, loving humanity, all brought together for one common purpose—to testify to their appreciation of this couple on this, the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage. Well, it is pleasant to be good, respect able people, and if John was not so old and didn't have to run the SIFTER, he would try to be good; he is going to try to make Harriet Ann good any way. But this wedding party. Did you ever? Where did they get so much to eat, tableful after tableful, and all in tip-top style. Isn't it astonish ing how some people will eat. Now there was E. Web—the SIFTER shall not be personal. But this thing ended after a long time, and then a large table was spread and filled with valu able gifts, a nice decorated china set of fifty-six pieces, a beautiful hang ing lamp and an elegant silver caster and piles of silver here and there, by way of variation, and—well, there was too much to enumerate, but there was enough to amply testify to the fact that this couple are highly appreciated by their townfolk. Then the minis ter, Rev. H. C. Leavitt, very appropri ately and feelingly voiced the senti ments and feelings of those present, and formally presented the gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Rugg, to which Mr. Rugg neatly responded, then there was some kissing—the SIFTER doesn't believe in kissing—John ran. Frank Fuller sang "My Old Wife and I," and after some time spent in jollity and general good feeling, the party dispersed with good wishes all around.

LONDONDERRY.

TRAVELLER'S GUIDE. Green Mountain telegraph line and tele phone offices at A. A. Curtis' store.

Post-office, Fred Leonard, P. M. Mail close daily at 8 a. m., for Chester, and at same time Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays for Factory Point, Peru and Landgrove. Daily at 5 p. m. for So. Londonderry. Mails arrive daily from So. Londonderry at 8 a. m., from Chester at 5 p. m., from Factory Point, Peru and Landgrove, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays at 6 p. m.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES. CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH—R. D. Metcalf, pastor. Every Sabbath at 11 a. m., and 6 p. m. Sunday school at 12 m.

SOCIETIES. WEST RIVER LODGE, No. 57, F. & A. M. Wednesday, on or before the full of the moon. LONDONDERRY LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. Open every Saturday afternoon and evening, Mary Bigelow, librarian.

At the annual meeting of West River Lodge, No. 57, F. & A. M., the following officers were elected: A. A. Curtis, W. M.; L. M. Bailey, S. W.; C. W. Whitney, J. W.; L. P. Sheldon, Treas.; P. R. Holt, Sec.; J. L. Sanborn, J. D.; S. Allen, A. W. Wilkins, Stew ards; B. S. Wait, Marshal; M. L. Sweet land, Chap.; D. A. Cooledge, Tyler.

Rev. Mr. Metcalf occupied his desk last Sabbath, preaching an excellent sermon, which the church would do well to heed and the community well to consider.

Our friends in Nasna prize the SIFTER very highly on account of its local news, this being their native place.

Charles S. W. has purchased a new sleigh, robes, etc. Stylish too. When he hitches up that pair of jet blacks we shall see a nice turn-out. Query: Who is to be the fortunate young lady to first grace that turn-out with her presence?

A Blizzard.—Charles Coleman, who drives the stage from this place to Factory Point, had a narrow escape from perishing in the wind and snow last Friday. He started out from this place with heavy baggage, consisting of 4 trunks, express packages, etc., and succeeded in getting along, with con siderable difficulty, to within about a quarter of a mile of Peru village, when he brought up in a huge snow drift, the wind blowing and the snow flying fearfully—as it knows how in no place better than in Peru. Here he broke one of his whiffletrees and was obliged to abandon his sleigh. By pulling down a wall he got his horses into the lots, and taking his mail-bag on his back, started for the village, which was in plain sight; but the storm was so severe that he was obliged to leave his mail-bag and give his whole atten tion to saving himself and horses. He had fears that both might perish. His horses would frequently turn their heads from the storm and open their mouths wide as if trying to get breath. He finally reached the village, but thinks it took him an hour to do so. After resting himself, he, in company with Mr. John Walker, went back, se curing the mail-bag, and finding one trunk blown from the sleigh and dumped in the snow drift. The inhab itants made a rally about 4 p. m., and after some hard work succeeded in getting the sleigh to the village, where he rested for the night, and started the next morning about 10 for Factory Point, which he reached about noon. He returned to this place at 7 p. m. the same day. Charley says, taking it altogether, it was the toughest time he ever saw.

Obituary.

Died in Troy, N. Y., Dec. 16, Orison Salisbury, aged 74 years. Mr. Salis bury was the second son of Deacon Barnard Salisbury, late of Townshend. The Troy Times says of him: "Mr. Salisbury came to this city more than fifty years ago, and was one of the oldest contractors and builders in Troy. The deceased was an upright and es teemed citizen. He is survived by a widow and four children." He has one brother living in Townshend, and two sisters—one in Wilton, Ct., and one in Byron, Ill.

LEON CRONSON, a drummer in the employ of Goldsmith & Kahn, diamond merchants of New York, it is alleged has absconded with $20,000 worth of the firm's diamonds.

The scheme for the revision of the French constitution, as proposed by M. Ferry, the prime minister, chiefly aims at the abolition of the office of life senator, and the restoration of the senate de lege system of voting. It is believed that the party of the right will support the latter proposition.

HERN BERT, the public executioner of Austria, was found dead in his bed at Brunn. Foul play is suspected.

Robin Redbreast.

On two days of last week a lively robin was seen in this village by dif ferent citizens. Harney says it came out of a mud-hole and went back to the mud-hole, and appeared to live in a mud-hole. Mud-holes are not plenty with the mercury at from 10 to 20 below zero, but Harney was there and knows. This may prove an important addition to our knowledge of natural history. Shall be glad to hear how robins act in other towns.

The Professor is an Orator.

On Christmas Eve, at close of the Cantata, Mr. M. L. Boynton, our popu lar station agent and vocalist, was called before the footlights and pre sented with a purse of about twenty-five dollars. E. L. Waterman, Esq., made the presentation in felicitous terms. The professor replied in his happiest vein. It was a deserved and graceful testimonial to Mr. Boynton, not only for his services in bringing the Cantata to a splendidly successful rendition, but of appreciation of his long and invaluable leadership of the Congregational choir.

Salmagundi.

We had no eye for details at the Cantata the other night. We were kind O dazed, perhaps 'twas emotion al insanity, but there is a lingering impression that the Professor was sort o struck all of a heap, when the squire jingled that twenty-five dollar cash token of appreciation of his services as a singer in his face. The squire did it pretty well, didn't he? Serious? O yes! The grim smile beneath that candid mustache—but that's a phantom of the brain. And the Angels, real ones—eyes like the stars from whence the came, and a kind of peach-bloom, rose-bud cheeks and lips—no use of wings—Angelic enough without.

What a sight was the band of boys and little maidens, and how they sung. They seemed inspired; they were in spired. And if the Professor and John the Bap—no, the Cong'st, and the rest of the bronzed and bearded fellows who think themselves some—are the men we take them for, they will gracefully retreat before the unbroken columns of the light brigade. Others are arising from their own households "to push them from their stools." And the Grace—ful devotion of Sophia "entertaining an Angel unawares," and the bird-like notes of Minnie—ha, ha, Oh, for sweet Charity's sake cul tivate the talent graciously given to bless the world withal. Hattie's! loral and the charm so charmingly rendered and presented, was justly due. O solitude! where are the charms that Sages have seen in thy face? But the charms of the Sage's "Faith and Hope" were not only seen in their faces, but dropped like pearls from their lips. And "now I lay me down to sleep"—'twas a scene to be remembered, carrying the thoughts back to childhood's hours, and filling the exile's heart with longings for home. But the evening wanes, as the angels of Love and sleep hover o'er the snowy couches of the inno cents, who dreamily murmur of visions of spring, and the May-flower, as lovely as a poet's dream.

Our Baptist society held a corn sup per last Friday night at their vestry, but owing to the bitter cold and bad traveling, fewer people got cor ned than ought to have been. There was hulled corn, corn bread, corn cake, corn dodgers, corn a-la-Jamaica, Baptist corn, corn of David, Ruby corn, Young corn, "baby Wayland" corn and c-o-r-n.

By general request the Cantata is to be repeated.

The thrilling and highly moral Dra ma of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" will be presented at our Opera-house about Jan. 10. A Shakespearian recitation from Hamlet will follow the Drama. Just count on your fingers and arrange your business for that important occasion. The moon will be high in the heavens and select talent has been engaged to hold the mirror up to nature. There's millions in it.

AT A POINT 20 miles beyond Fort Smith, in the Choctaw nation, Rev. Formed Andrews, while on his way to fill a religious appoint ment, was shot and killed by unknown par ties.

The dead body of an Orangutan was found in a bog hole, near Portlawn, county Antrim, Ireland. The deceased had been obnoxious to the people in the vicinity.

BRATTLEBORO.

Dr. Dearborn's son Charlie, who is studying civil engineering in Pennsylv ania, is at home on a vacation for a month or more.

The Reformer in its last issue says the Brattleboro house was insured for $15,000,000, and the loss by fire was $35,000. Rather valuable property that!

Pat Austin, switchman and crossing tender at the depot, imbibed too freely of the ardent last week Tuesday, and the result was a hand to hand en counter with several boon companions who were in a like condition. For their fun Pat paid $5.00, and one of the other unfortunate has gone to the work-house at Rutland to spend a few months, in default of not being able to pay this fine.

Repairs on the Brattleboro house have already begun. That the fire last week was the work of an incendiary there is no doubt. Gen. Lynde is to occupy the lower floor of the house for his grain and flour business, when it is ready.

Considerable excitement was occasioned in our village last Monday morn ing by the discovery of a man's body in a room in the old wooden building just back of Barrett's machine shop, and for a while it seemed necessary that the Estey Guard and Fuller Bat tery should be called out to disperse the frenzied crowd, many of which insisted that a terrible murder had been committed, but the appearance of two young medical students on the scene soon convinced them otherwise.

A two-day's meeting of the Farmer's Institute is to be held here Jan. 10 and 11. A number of interesting speakers are to be present, and the gathering will be one well worth at tending, it being the intention of the board to make it so. Railroads will extend the usual courtesy of half rates.

Tricks of Smugglers.

"We do not examine many innocent people, although occasionally a mistake is made," said a New York custom-house officer to a World reporter. "I have had seven women examined this week, and every one of them had smuggled goods concealed on their person. A woman who was caught a week or so ago had $9,000 worth of stuff about her. How did we come to suspect her? Why, you see, her movements were suspicious to say the least. She stepped on the gang-plank with a large bundle in her hand and a heavy cloak over her arm. Half way down she was met by a woman to whom she handed the things. All this might, perhaps, have been done without attract ing the attention of the officers had it not been for a certain nervousness displayed. She was requested to step into a room, and Mrs. F., the inspectress, was called in and asked to examine her.

"Yes," remarked that talented lady, "and you have no idea of the amount of goods I took from her. In the first place I found the lining of the cloak had been removed and between it and the outside were sewed row after row of the most ex quisite lace. It was marked 120 francs per yard. Next I found concealed in her simple bosom a lace shawl, several yards of lace and some fancy trimming. She had based on an undergarment more lace, but you should have seen her petticoat. It was a marvelous construction. Pieces of rich silk were folded into twice the proper length and passed over a heavy cord which encircled her waist. There were several pieces of silk put on in this fashion, the edges being tacked together, and more lace was sewed on this. She made a great fuss about being examined; said it was outrageous that her person should be so violated. Pretty smugglers always do this if they have anything on them.

"This making of the goods into a skirt is a favorite way of disposing of them. Diamonds and different articles of jew elry are easier to conceal. A woman and her nurse and child were sent in to me once. It was thought that their fig ures were too well rounded—and, indeed, the bodies of their dresses fell in some what looser folds after I had taken sev eral watches, with chains, pins and brace lets, from each of them.

"Did you hear of that very funny case we had," asked another of the officers, "where the man had a lot of diamonds so cunningly hidden? I have forgotten just how it was we came to suspect him, but I imagine it was because the gentleman was so remarkably straight. At all events, we had him searched and on his back, right next to his skin, and held on by a porous plaster, we found the stones. Another ingenious gentle man had diamonds sewn into his liver pad."

"Do you find women more clever at smuggling than men?" asked the reporter. "Well, yes, I believe they are; but some of the men are pretty sharp. The favorite dodge with the women is to sew lace on their soiled linen or to roll it up in it. The linings of their cloaks is an other hiding place. We found a woman the other day who had on no less than four wraps with the edges so neatly sewed together that the imposition was by no means easy to detect. The French women are the smartest, I believe. Many of them make their living by getting goods through the custom-house. They seem to know exactly what to do, and I am convinced they are instructed before leaving home."
