to ride.

Talking about an economic conference, many important ones are being held in St. Johnsbury when the women get together to discuss the bargains announced in The

EDITORIAL
THE GIVING SPIRIT
Many people feel that the custom of Christmas giving has been carried to a great excess, and that a vast amount of money is wasted each year on useless presents. While there is a lot of this foolish expenditure yet a great deal of it would be put into equally senseless use if the custom were abolished. The majority of people make useful gifts that add to the comfort and satisfaction of families and friends, and often save the recipients from spending money for the same purpose.

The splendid side of the custom is that it makes people think of the happiness of others. During most of the year people go driving ahead on their own affairs, never thinking much of the welfare and the happiness of others. But once a year, old Christmas comes along and tells people to out this self-centered life, and think a bit on what they can do for others. The world needs more of the giving spirit not less.

"FOLLOW ME"

Over two thousand years ago the Master, whose birth we celebrate on Christmas Day, called to the fishermen who were to be his disciples, and spread the glad tidings to all people.

Down through the ages the call has come to all mankind, joyfully accepted by many.

It has been the custom of this Company, as these days of wonderful significance approach, to pause in its busy career and wish for its many patrons a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

These seasonal greetings we repeat with much earnestness and sincerity, confident that all who heed the call "Follow Me" will experience the most joyful Christmas and enter upon a glad New Year, fraught with the most wonderful possibilities—a message the world's acceptance of which means a universal brotherhood of love, a precursor of—
