To be the largest furniture house in the world is a distinction which the John M Smyth Company, 150 to 166 West Madison street, Chicago, enjoys. An idea of the magnitude of the establishment may be gained from the fact that the building contains seven and one-half acres of floor space and that during its third of a century of business it has furnished nearly three-quarters of a million homes, or more than the entire population of some States. One of the business principles of the firm is if goods are not as represented they be returned and the money will be refunded. FARM AND GARDEN.

A Buuch of Sheep on the Farm. Very many farms, and farmers, too, would be benefited by a flock of sheep, says George McKerrow of Sussex, Wis., in writing to Farm, Field and Fireside. I believe I may be permitted to claim that I say this from experience, having kept a flock without intermission for kept a flock without intermission for thirty years or more. I invested my first savings, while a boy in my teens, in savings, while a boy in my teens, in sheep, and have never regretted; t. Why will the farm be benefited? Sheep will clean it up; but you will say, can good sheep be reared on weeds and brush alone? To which I must answer, no; but good sheep can be grown on clovers, or no other comparation where a lefalf. grasses, corn, oats, corn stover, alfalfa, rape, cabbage and roots, and this rotation of crops will make clean land and produce good mutton and wool and you will find that sheep being well fed on such rations as the above-mentioned will also such rations as the above-mentioned will be such as the strength of weather than the strength of the strengt also surprise you by the amount of weeds and tender browse they will take as des-

A small or moderate-sized flock will glean a good living most of the year from foods that would, on many farms, where natural advantages are the same and no sheep are kept. In proof of this I beg to refer the reader to many dis-tricts in Ontario, Vermont, Pennsylva-nia, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, and to scores of farmers in these districts who have often told me in these districts who have often told me they would not farm without sheep. How can sheep benefit the farmers? First, by increasing their revenue. Dur-ing the past thirty years I have kept pretty close account of our flocks and in the worst seasons have found the balance on the right side and in the good seasons it has been well up on the right side. With sheep and clover, grasses, corn and roots to feed them I have been corn and roots to feed them I have been enabled to buy worn-out grain lands, pay for them and bring them up in condition and value, and I am not alone in this. I know of others who have done this. I know of others who have done and we are no luckier or it was very familiar with the case it want on I expected to be charged Sheep are easier cared for than any other class of stock. The farmer without experience can begin with a small flock and as his flock grows his experience will also grow until he will soon have some knowledge of animal life that will aid him in handling other lines of stock. You must remember the large flock requires proportionate skill to hanthe it well.

The mutton for the farmer's own table is one of the most important and profitable items. It saves butcher's bills, gives health and strength as no other meat diet can. I know of several farmers who have from five to twenty. farmers who use from five to twenty-five sheep or lambs annually on their tables, according to the size of their families, and all are loud in its praise as a healthful and economical meat food. The question of cheap fencing is one constantly brought up. In these days of cheap woven fences this is pretty well Many of these make settled. Many of these make quite good movable sheep fences, as we find from I will not say every farmer should keep sheep, but am safe in saying there should be at least four flocks where one is now kept. The increase in most cases should come by more flocks rather than should come by more nocks rather than larger flocks.

Low, wet farms are not suited to sheep. Small farms that are paying well as dairy farms will, in most cases, be as well without them, who does not like sheep sho them, but most others should. If your decide to start into the sheep business (or any other line) you must make up your mind that it will have both ups and downs, and if you are to get profit from it you must stick to it, up hill and down hill, and you will thus he on top of the wave part of the time. be on top of the wave part of the time. Feeding Smutty Corn.

Whenever you come to a smutty ear of corn put it in the fire. This should have been done at husking time, but some smut may have been overlooked then and developed since. If all farmers would stamp out the corn smut wherever found the disease could soon be eradicated. Feeding it to either cows or hogs as is often done is the readiest way to send it to the manure pile, where it to send it to the manure pile, where it will propagate very rapidly. Besides, it is a serious danger to the animals to which it is fed, especially if they are bearing young .- American Cultivator.

Bean Straw for Feeding Cows. While sheep take naturally to bean straw and to the grain itself, there are many who grow beans who do not keep sheep. With a little care in giving only sneep. With a little care in giving only small amounts at first, and when the cow is hungry, she will eat bean straw and soon come to like it for a change, as well as the hay or corn stalks which are her regular diet. Bean straw is very nutritious, and as it causes wind on the stomach, it should be given with caution to breeding steel eater. on the stomach, it should be given with caution to breeding stock, either ewes or cows, lest it should cause abortion. The refuse beans that are often thrown away may properly be ground and mixed with cornmeal as fed for hogs. They are very nutritious, more so than corn.

Cows Not to be Fed Alike. All cows should not be fed alike. Each All cows should not be fed alike. Each should be fed according to her individuality. The amount should be proportioned to the amount of milk she can be made to produce. If she is inclined to "all go to milk" and run down in flesh, she should be fed more carbonaceous food to keep her flesh and strength. Another cow that is inclined to put on flesh should be fed more protein food. Three things the feeder must watch; watch to see that the cow eats up all her food clean with a good appetite; watch the excrement to see that she digests it, and watch the milk pail and the cow's back to see what she does with it.

A cow should have as great a variety of food each day as it is practical to give her. She craves a variety and will eat more and digest her food better when eat more and digest her food better when she has it. She needs a variety as much as human beings. She should also be fed with perfect regularity as to time as well as amount of food. She should never be allowed to fret and worry be-cause her food is late in coming to her.

and no amount of working or tempering salt, or even distribution of salt when added, will change the conditions. They do not work up, consequently do not take salt, hence the fine, threadlike streaks in salt, hence the fine, threadlike streaks in the butter. The manner in which the water is introduced into the churn is responsible for the large mottles or seeming lumps of white butter throughout the mass. In the majority of creameries throughout the country the water is pumped directly into the churn, either through a hose or a pipe. Now, when the water strikes the butter these granules become hard and solid as in the first case, only that these hard granules are not broken down at all, and the large mottles are the result. The wash water should be tempered to within two or three degrees of the churn temperature.—New York Produce Review.

THE BOY AND HIS TRADE.

He Should Begin His Apprenticeshi so as to be Through When 21. "Seventeen is the preferable age for going to a trade, but in many cases 16 is not too young, nor 18 too old," writes Barton Cheyney in the Ladies' Home Journal. "But, all conditions being favorable, it is well for a boy to arrange his apprenticeship so that he can faish glean a good living most of the year from foods that would, on many farms, go to waste without them. I recently met a German farmer in northern Wisconsin who told of his little flock of ten ewes that had brought in a $60 income in 1895, when sheep products were low. When I asked him what it cost to keep them that year, he replied: "Dat cost nothing." When pressed for an explanation, he shrugged his shoulders and said: "Dey run in der brush in der vinter. Come to der haystack, eat a little hay, dats all." This was practically true; they only cost him what hay they are in the winter.

"The hoof of the seep is golden," is an old Spanish adage; nevertheless a true one. Every sheep pasture becomes richer. No class of stock improves the soil as does the sheep. If you will go with me to the districts where sheep husbandry has been intelligently followed, in conjunction with other lines of farming, we will find better farms than in localities where natural advantages are the same and no sheep are kept. In proof of this I beg to refer the reader to many disconsiliations being farmed as a general constant of the districts where sheep husband and no sheep are kept. > Senator Hoar's Vindication of Jame G. Blaine. I was myself a member of the judiciary committee of the House, to whom the investigation was committed. The witnesses were examined by a subcommittee. But they were almost daily compelled to report the questions which arose for decision to the full committee, as it went on. I expected to be charged with the duty of preparing a minority report in case, as was almost certain to happen, the committee found the charges sustained. I had no reason, so far as I then knew, or now know, to be prejudiced or biased in the matter. Mr. Blaine had treated me with courtesy during my service in the House, as he did everybody. He had, as speaker, never assigned to me any place on committee. body. He had, as speaker, never assigned to me any place on committees which was specially agreeable to me, and had put persons, whom I thought less entitled to such distinction, into the chairmanships of the committees of which I was a member. But he was undoubtedly embarrassed in this matter by doubtedly embarrassed in this matter by the large number of representatives from Massachusetts who had been long in the service. So I had no just cause either for gratitude or for complaint. But I had expected, if he were nominated, although these charges had been made public, to give him my scalous and ear-nest support as a candidate for the presidency.

I had, as I have said, occasion to pos I had, as I have said, occasion to possess myself thoroughly of the evidence against Mr. Blaine when it was produced. I reviewed it carefully during the campaign which preceded the election of 1884. I have reconsidered it again more lately. I did not think at the time, and have never thought since, that Mr. Blaine was guilty either of actual corruption or of a willingness to be corrupted. I do not think he was guilty between the corrupted and the said of the ruption or of a willingness to be corrupted. I do not think he ever sold his official influence, or ever received or desired to receive any compensation for any exercise of his official power. I think the spirit and manner in which the charges against him were pressed and argued before the people scarcely, if at all, less disgraceful than would have been Mr. Blaine's own conduct if the charges had been true.—From "Four National Conventions," by Senator George F. Hoar in Scribner's.

W. C. Brownell's Opinion of Thackeray's "Newcomes."

As for "The Newcomes," it is an epitome of human life in its manifold variety of social and individual phases unmatched, I think, in fiction. Its range is extraordinary for the thread of a single story to follow. Yet all its parts are as interdependent as they are numerous and varied. It is Thackeray's largest canvas, and it is filled with the greatest ease and to the borders. It stands incontestably at the head of the novels of manners. And it illustrates manners with an unexampled crowd of characters, the handling of which, without repetition or confusion, without digression or discord, exhibits the control of the artist equally with the imaginative and creative faculty of the poet—the "maker." The framework of "The Newcomes" would include three or four of Balzac's most elaborate books, which, compared with it, indeed, seem like studies and episodes, lacking the large body and ample current of Thackeray's epic. And its epic scale is preserved, not in mechanically assembled examples of different kinds of mere existence, high and low, savage and civilized, but in a picture of life itself flowing variously in varied characters and circles and communities, closely connected by the cousinly bond of the humanity they possess in common.

Taken as a whole, it is true, Thackeray's "Newcomes.

Taken as a whole, it is true, Thackeray's human comedy is less comprehensive than Balzac's, with which alone it is to be compared in the world of prose fiction. Taken as a whole, it lacks that appearance of vastness and variety which Balzac's has, and perhaps the approximation of the number of the second of the which Baizac's has, and perhaps the appearance in such a matter answers as well as the reality. Considered, that is to say, purely as a world of the imagination. Thackeray's is the more circumscribed. But it is born of less travail; it is constructed with the effortless case of greater spotteristic themselved. scribed. But it is born of less travail; it is constructed with the effortless case of greater spontaneity, its preliminary simplification has been carried farther; and, if less complicated and ingenious, less speculative and suggestive, it is far more real. Its philosophy is more human, more winning, more attaching, and in a very deep sense more profound.—From "William Makepeace Thackeray," by W. C. Brownell in Scribner's.

Gutta-Percha and Cables Gutta-Percha and Cables.

In connection with the Pacific cable a very interesting question arises. From where is the gutta-percha for this gigantic cable to come? Every whisper of the construction of a transpacific line sends the gutta market at Singapore up by leaps and bounds. The ruling price of the gum is the highest that has ever obtained. It it stated, on what authority it is hard to say, that the visible supply of gutta is sufficient for the task, and it is hard to say, that the visible supply of gutta is sufficient for the task, and that if this cable is laid it will be the last—the last with a gutta-percha insulation, at least. While this pessimism on the part of the gutta producers savors somewhat of a desire to stiffen the market, there is yet a sufficiently-reasonable foundation for it in the wanton destruction of the gutta forests. It will be interesting to see the outcome of the situation. If the United States acquires an island in the Carolines the building of the cable line seems possible, though expensive. If they do not find a landing place the operation of the cable seems to require a prohibitively costly plant. And meanwhile there is a question of the disappearing gutta tree.—The Engineering Magazine.

Fame is becoming notoriety. The stranger finds becoming notoriety. The stranger finds that the so-called Rialto, which he had imagined the haunt of fashion and the magined the haunt of fashion and the promenade of respectable pleasure-seekers, has degenerated into a lounging-place for sleek, well-dressed, disreputable loafers. These leisurely persons work for their living in the peculiar fashion known as "by their wits," and it is out of the question, when taking an afternoon stroll, for the visitor to evade them. They have thousands of plausible stories and schemes for raising the ernoon stroll, for the visitor to evade them. They have thousands of plausible stories and schemes for raising the wind, to which many passengers can testify, and their apparent carelessness hides schemes for money-getting that are as unscrupulous as they are keen. But in the face of all this these gentry dwell in absolute security and are never molested by the police.

The shirtwaist girl will be in her el ment more than ever next summer. Al-ready the up-to-date store windows are bristling with attractive varieties of the bristling with attractive varieties of the comfortable and catchy garment, and all the genuine vitality of the shoppers these days are centered about the shirtwaist counters. White, in cambric and lawn, seems to have the preference over the colored gingham variety. Wide-spotted ribbons, lengths of soft silk and white lawn are all materials for the new ties, and nothing will be considered more fitand nothing will be considered more fit ting with a pink-striped shirtwaist than a tie made of white or cream point d'es-prit, knotted in a very liberal front bow

An uptown photographer discovered a "Klondike" and is working it for all its worth. He has hit upon a plan to please his patrons, and, incidentally, to fill his coffers with rich pay gold, or its equivalent. In his studio he has a stuffed horse, posed in the gallop attitude. The animal is affixed to a platform, the surface of which is well concreted. A Central park scene is in the background. Young and old women, but particularly Young and old women, but particularly the former, who are anxious to give their distant friends the impression that they are well up in equestrianism, come to the studio in battalions and have themselves photographed in the act of taking their morning or afternoon canter through the park. The artist has all sizes of habits on hand to accommodate his naturals.

"Cholly Knickerbocker" criticises Olg: Nethersole for not wearing hoopskirts in her costume production of "Camille." He says: "The reason for this hoopskirt abstinence on the part of Miss Nether sole is, I am told, the impossibility of fainting gracefully in it. How the ladies in 1840 managed to swoon in their crino-lines nobody seems to remember. They must have done it, for fainting was even more popular then than it is now

Mrs. William C. Whitney will be brought to her new home at Fifth avenue and Sixty-ninth street in a few days. She is much improved—so much so that her physicians think she may safely be moved from the Whitney country home. A $100 shirt that is well worth the money to the man who wears it, is the latest acquisition of certain New York "hold-out" purposes and is called the "hold-out" purposes and is called the "hold-up" shirt. It has a false sleeve and cuff and a metal clamp, which catches a card and causes it to vanish in between the two cuffs attached to a cord which runs up the sleeve across the body and down one of the wearer's legs. It is easily operated, and tenderfeet who are fond of "draw" should fight shy of this modern invention in the big games that flourish in some of the best New York

Mr. Carnegie says the report that he is to build a million-dollar dwelling for himself in this city is nonsense. It will not cost a quarter of that sum, and will be a plain, roomy brick house. His family needs more room and more sunshine. especially the latter, according to the doctor, and that is what they are after. The garden is the sunshine spot Mr. Carnegie intends to make a feature of his premises, because, having speut so much time out of doors, he and his wife, they wilt when cooped up too much. they wilt when cooped up too much.

Thomas Nevins, a rich contractor of East Orange, once heard a fortune teller say that if sisters marry on the same day one will end her life in the poorhouse and the other will be rich. His two daughters had arranged to be wedded on Wednesday, but he suddenly remembered the superstition, and one ceremony was postponed. Lilian Esther Nevins became the bride of John Frederick Nestor of Detroit at St. John's Catholic church, East Orange, yesterday. Today her sister, Catherine Deering Nevins, became the wife of Nicholas Doyle of Wexford, Ircland, in the same Patriotism broke loose at the meeting of Sorosis in the Waldorf-Astoria. The subject was "American Traits as Revealed in Current Events," and our new work in the Philippines gave plenty of inspiration to the speakers. Mrs. Philip Carpenter, who was down on the programme for an address on "American Enterprise," had said only a few words bearing indirectly on this subject, when she broke loose with: "A half day's work, and Dewey gives America an Oriental empire—I had almost said an Oriental baby, for I never knew of any baby kicking harder at coming into a new world when the passage of the treaty was announced." Sorosis promptly forgot to be dignified, and nobody cared if she did ruin her pretty gloves.

Staten Islanders on their way to New York were amused the other morning to find cash registers attached to the vari-ous boxes used by the bootblacks on the ferryboats. The man having the conferryboats. The man having the con-tract or privilege for bootblacking on the ferryboats had suspected that his em-ployes were getting the best of him. In consequence of this he had adopted the cash register plan. Beneath a piece of glass on each of the boxes was a sign which read as follows:

The bell referred to was attached to the corner of the box, and each time the blootblack collected 5 cents he operated the bell. Until recently the bootblacks were in the habit of charging 10 cents for a shine, one-half of which went to the boss and the other half to the bootblack. black. Now the customers pay only 5 cents, and the bootblack must drop this into a slot and ring up.
