SPECIAL FEATURES IN OUR

Cloak and Suit Dep't

A Decided Cut in Price on All Garments

Our late opening, and a disordered department caused by painters and carpenters has made it necessary at this season of the year to adopt these measures. We will take our loss cheerfully and you will profit thereby.

You know our methods; we have only one price, and when we advertise we mean business.

You are absolutely safe in buying and making this your trading headquarters as every one is treated alike. The price is the same to you or your neighbor. We do not resort to unbusiness-like graft or ask an exhorbant price, and when refused chase a customer to the door in a vain attempt to sell.

Willson's Orchestra furnished music for the Elk's Banquet last Saturday evening at the Fay Hotel, and the remark was passed by some of the Duluth members of the audience that they did not see why Virginia should ever send outside for orchestra music when they had just as good at home.

The new Hibbing fakir of the News Tribune range department has just heard the rumor that a company is talked of to organize and establish a range street car service. The rumor is decidedly aged, but whether or not it is based on fact is a question. However, obsolete ordinances affecting the proposition have been repealed in some of the range cities.

M. Steinberg, of The Fair Store, returned Monday from an extended western trip, having been looking after work on the properties of the Montana Overwhich Company, of which he was the original owner. Mr. Steinberg reports everything in good shape at the properties, and exemplifies his faith in their eventual value by deciding to close out his business at this point and in future devote his entire attention to their development.

Messrs. Edward Berg and I. A. Fossum, both well known young men who have been employed at the store of S. Oberg, on Saturday concluded a deal for the purchase of the stock and business of Mr. Oberg and continue the same under the firm name of the Cash Mercantile Co. The new owners already enlarge the stock and propose keeping a first-class establishment in every respect and will make of the store an inviting spot. They will appreciate a portion of your trade.

Thomas Bonds and Billy Blackburn, who killed the huge black bear at their camp north of Mt. Iron ten days ago mentioned in these columns last week, brought the carcass into the city on Wednesday, selling same to Joseph Karl. The boys relate that they had an exciting time with Bruin. Mr. Bonds first shooting the animal in the lower jaw and arousing the ire of the brute, which came forth from its hole and prepared to show fight. A second shot, from the trusty rifle of Mr. Blackburn, however, laid the animal low. The bear is one of the largest ever killed in this section, and the fur is fine.

George A. Shea, an uncle of W. H. Shea, Jr., the attorney, was in the city Wednesday for a brief visit with his nephew. Mr. Shea has but recently returned from a trip of several months to Alaska, making his headquarters at Nome, and had with him some novelties in the shape of a large piece of whalebone and the skins of a number of white fox. He has been extensively engaged in mining in Alaska during the past several years, and reports that during the past summer a former Virginia postmaster, Ed Burke, had also entered the Nome mining field and had made good on a mining claim. Mr. Burke also owns much Seattle property.

THERE'S A REASON

For everything and there is a reason for the continued success of our store, a store where an individual usually gets what is desired; a store that don't depend upon luck for something to happen.

We stand on our merits and our ability to give you better quality, newer stock, larger assortment, lower prices and the best treatment than is possible for you to find at other stores.

We do not ask for your trade upon our merits of the past, but upon our merits of today, tomorrow and all time.

We endeavor always to please our customers and give them the best goods that the market affords.

We are the only store in the city who keep the best exclusive stock of Ladies', Gents and Children's Furnishings, Ready-Made Garments, Boots and Shoes.

Wolves Reported Plentiful.

Hunters who have been out establishing camps for the hunting season in the bush to the north of the range report wolves very plentiful, so numerous in fact that the deer are being driven from the country. A party of Virginians who prepare to spend the hunting season at a point some six miles north of Mt. Iron had an exciting experience with a pack of the animals on Friday last, but succeeded in making camp. A similar experience is reported by a party on the Sturgeon, north of Hibbing, where the wolves followed the men to their cabin and kept them company throughout the night.
