Parties wanting plowing to do call on L. Lamberson.

Thor. Skavien, the jeweler, transacted business in Oslo a couple days this week.

Mrs. James McDunn and children went to Barnesville, Minn., last Friday for a visit.

I have some choice boar pigs to sell during the month of October. L. Lamberson.

This is a splendid fall for plowing. Dry plowing always insures a good crop the following year.

Miss Della Magladry commenced teaching a term of school near Eckvold postoffice on Monday this week.

Two new freight engines have commenced doing service on the Soo line, and freight will henceforth move faster than ever.

Bernard Swanson, of Minneapolis, arrived last Friday to visit his brother, Hans Swanson and other relatives, for a week.

I have employed a first class shoe maker and can do all kinds of shoe repairing. Fred Swanson, West Side Harness Shop.

The mother of Mrs. Rev. Lundell, who has been here on a visit, returned to her home at Hallock on Tuesday morning.

Miss Mary Larson, of town of Numedal, Red Lake Co., came to the city Monday to take a course in dress making.

Dr. Aug Gronerud, of Kennedy, was in the city Tuesday night. He brought down a patient for treatment at the hospital.

Licenses to wed have been issued by clerk of court Mork to the following couples: Wilhelm Wagner and Ida Paetznick, John H. Bengtson and Esther A. P. Johnson.

Read carefully the advertisements of the Warren merchants in this issue of the Sheaf. They offer some exceptional bargains. When you come to town call at their places of business.

Mrs. J. C. Mork returned last evening from Ramsey and Walsh counties, North Dakota, where she has assisted in threshing and will leave this evening for her home in New Solum.

A. M. Lovik, of Oslo, made the trip to Warren and back on his bicycle last Friday. Said he wished the Soo would run so as to enable people out his way to make the trip to Warren in one day.

The Rebeccas gave a farewell banquet to Mrs. Louise Bennewitz, and daughter, Miss Clara, on Tuesday evening. They will soon leave for Longmont, Colorado to make their future home.

C. W. Nelson, of Viking, was in the city Tuesday and ordered some auction sale notices printed. He has recently sold his farm to Frank Anderson, of Sibley county, and will go to Longmont, Cal., and other places in the southwest to look up a new location.

According to the Crookston papers, Fargo people want to have the schedule of the St. Vincent train changed so as to leave there in the evening. If any change is made we think it would be better to reverse the schedule so as to run from St. Vincent to Fargo and back during the day.

John Branson, one of the pioneer farmers of Viking, was in town Tuesday. He told the Sheaf that he had sold all his farming interests and would soon be looking around for a new home. We hope he may find one near by, as our county cannot afford to lose so good a citizen.

Ye editor acted as body guard to banker Louis M. Olson when transferring some funds from the Swedish American bank in this city to the State Bank of Alvarado last Saturday. No robbers were encountered on the trip. This was our first visit to this prosperous little, burg only a year old, and we were pleased to meet many of its enterprising business men. At another time we shall give a more detailed write-up of the place.

A few good farms for rent. L. Lamberson.

Peter Julin, of Newfoiden, was a Warren visitor this week.

Albert Gustafson, of Alma, was in town yesterday and remembered the Sheaf with a pleasant call.

A South Dakota farmer recently underwent an operation for appendicitis brought on through an error of a clerk in a mail order house. Last spring he sent for some of his favorite pills and in the same letter his wife ordered some sweet pea seeds. With the peas came the direction to take one before and two after each meal and with the pills came directions for planting. When the farmer had taken several "pills" he became very sick, and his case was diagnosed as appendicitis. An operation was performed two weeks ago and several sweet pea seeds were found lodged in the appendix. But the liver pills which the wife had planted never showed any signs of life. That is what some people get for patronizing the catalogue houses.

Soo to Build to Seattle.

New York, Oct. 1.—The head of the Canadian Pacific pool, Congressman Levy, has made the definite announcement that the Soo road will be built to Seattle. This is in accordance with the Canadian Pacific announcement of some time ago, that for every mile of road J. J. Hill built in Canada the Canadian Pacific would build two miles in the United States.

By the Swedish Farmer Man.

Aye ban a yust gude farmer, for more as sixteen yare.

Aye raise some wheat and corn, and fat some hogs and steer.

Aye watch that farmer business close for where da money gits.

And aye find it coming kwickest when you ban "pulling tits"

Dam falla wat ban raising grains and hauling dem to town.—

Hay got no money in da pocket—hay ban broke da whole yare round.

Dem falla wat ban fattin stock, ban rich, and den ban poor.

Some time hay make a plenty money—some time hay losin' more.

But dem falla wid a brindle cow, hay got bully ting, you bet.

Hay never loose hims whole yare's crop, if aroud ban dry or get to wet.

Ven hail ban striking down da crop, and yus ban raising fits.

At night, hay call dem brindle in and yust ban "pulling tits."

Hay got dem separator what makes lots of cream.

Hay got da money comin' in yust like pleasant dream.

Hay got money in da bank; hay got money in him mitts:

Hay ban no Rockafallow—hay yust ban "pulling tits"—Farmers Mail & Breeze, Kansas.

Devore Parmer as "Romeo."

In the production of "Romeo and Juliet" which will be presented at the Warren Opera House, Monday Oct. 8, the role of "Romeo" will be enacted by the young, romantic actor, Devore Parmer.

Mr. Parmer's place in his art and the esteem of the public has been won neither by fortuitous chance nor by one swift leap to eminence, but by the sure, steady growth of power and its recognition, which alone can build the fame that lasts. Beyond the story of his progress from the unknown stripping of a boy who first challenged criticism with his characterizations of classic heroes to his present rank among the foremost of our romantic actors, there is nothing more instructive in modern stage annals, since it is the rise of genius, hard work and courage. The range of his gift of expression, from tragic passion to delicately shaded comedy; through many parts of widely differing motives, played with equal facility, shows his unusual endowment. Nor has he ever been content to rest with "well done", since to each of the many parts played he has added something with each performance. "Romeo", wholly different from anything he has ever done, is conclusive and memorable proof of his resources as an actor.

Juvenile Literature.

The old lady editor of a magazine for children talked fluently from her rocking chair on the piazza of a seashore hotel.

"I would never print," she said, "a story with an unhappy ending, a story that would bring tears to little children's eyes."

"Then," sneered the unsuccessful contributor, "if Hans Andersen had submitted 'The Tin Soldier' or 'The Ice Maiden' to you you'd have turned him down, eh?"

"Most assuredly I would if those stories ended unhappily."

"Humph!"

"Aside from its sadness, too, much of our juvenile literature is vicious and degrading," the editor went on. "Take, for example, Perrault's tale of Bluebeard. Why, the tale drips with blood. There is more murder in it than in murderers' row in the Tombs. Take 'Cinderella.' What does it teach us? Why, that housework is dishonorable, and that balls and parties are the highest things in life."

"Dick Whittington" is a story that incites a low form of worldly ambition. The 'Arabian Nights' are simply indescribable in their debasing moral effect. Neither Hans Andersen nor Perrault, nor the Grimm brothers nor the 'Arabian Nights' writers, whoever they were, would be allowed, should they return to life, to contribute to the children's magazines of to-day."

IN LEARNING TO WALK A CHILD MUST BE HELPED

How many parents help their children to habits of thrift and saving? These habits ought to be trained into a child at an early age; nothing can add so much to the happiness, contentment and character, as learning to live within one's means, with a sum laid aside in case of necessity. No matter what the income, a person is rich who has learned this truth. Open an account with us in your child's name. The child will find more pleasure in adding pennies to this account, than in buying sweets.
