THE CHRIST

By Charles Eugene Banks

Upon a circle of the sands
That front the roiled, desiring sea,
I sit alone with folded hands
Thinking on Him of Galilee.
How like a perfect lily grows
His love in this o'er-castle world;
Its glory no distinction knows
But is for all alike unfurled.
You trustful gull that rocking sleeps
Upon the heaving ocean's breast,
As closely in His heart He keeps
As we who have His name confessed.
The tiger in the jungle weaves
A perfect rondo on his coat,
And clear around the budding leaves
The wild bird spheres his liquid note.
The curving mountain ranges grace
The arching azure's magic rim;
And in the dewdrop's form T trace
The same perfection born of Him.
Enwrapped within its seed the rose
Awaits the word questioning
Cill everywhere the tombs unclose
In resurrection of the spring.
In Him is all the joy we know,
The way, the life, the final goal,
The fount of Love whose outward flow
Is never-ending birth of Soul.

Holy Week in Rome

Wonderful Easter Services
Held in Old St. Peter's

By
Dora Greenwell McChesney

Inexhaustible in its mystic significance, the Holy Week in Rome, however familiar to the memory or imagination, stirs always a renewed wonder in those who witness it.

Above all else Rome is a city of memories. The walls and arches of imperial days, the Renaissance palaces, and the churches which mark every step in the long march from primitive Christianity to papal supremacy—these stamp themselves on the mind. The incongruous modern elements are as transitory in their impression as is the whirling dust from a motor car blown past the tombs on the Appian Way.

The walls of Aurelian, the statue of Marcus Aurelius, benignant on the capitol, the august disarray of the Forum—these are actual and imperishable. So, too, is the spacious splendor of St. Peter's, with its solemn sequence of ritual, in which, as the Holy Week advances, so mystic and superb a drama of divinity is enacted.

There are many moods in which to approach the great Easter services in the great papal city, from that of the devote to whom the ever-burning lamps round the apostle's tomb mark a spot only less sacred than that of the holy sepulcher itself, to that of the casual sight-seer, who flutters his Baedeker unabashed through the awful mystery of the mass. Perhaps those do not see least of the significance who look on the magnificent ceremonies with a haunting consciousness of Rome's twofold greatness, and who never quite lose sight of the city of the Caesars in the city of the saints.

It is impossible even to approach St. Peter's, where most of us choose to see the services, in spite of the rival claims of the Lateran, mother of churches—it is impossible to reach the curving colonnades and mighty front without passing by memorials of an earlier, hostile life and creed. Perhaps in driving thither the wanderer may catch a glimpse of the immortal pair, the Great Twin Brethren, who guard in stone the stairs to the capitol. Or, it may be, the shattered, majestic columns of the temple of Mars Ultor have lifted for a moment their stern memorial of Caesar's death and Augustus' vengeance.

Once within St. Peter's, however, conflicting memories fall away, lost, as is all sense of minor faults in the building itself, in the impression of vastness, of an all-enfolding and all-reconciling hospitality. That hospitality is taxed by the crowds which gather for the services of Holy Week. Palm Sunday initiates the series of elaborate ceremonies with its beautiful rite of blessing the palms. A motley throng it is which streams up the wide steps and gathers about the altar above which glows in a golden halo the holy dove. There are the foreign sight-seers, of course, made evident by their camp-stools and red guide-books, but there are also soldiers in picturesque variety of uniform, priests wearing their black draperies in the classic folds which recall the toga, shepherds from the Campagna, bearded and wild-eyed in their sheepskins; pilgrims from far countries with the fixed visionary gaze of those who look on their sacred places after long desire.

Sacred indeed is the spot to those who hold the faith of Rome. In front of the high altar with its baldachin—the twisted bronze columns towering up superbly, yet dwarfed by the firmament of the dome above—burn the golden, never-dying lamps which mark the resting place, so tradition says, of the apostle.

But on Palm Sunday the attention is fixed on the altar in the Cappella Giulia, and the pressure of the eager people increases cruelly as the basins of palms are set down by the altar stairs and the canons slowly move to their places. The priests are in violet, the Lenten color. The deep hue brightened by wonderful interweaving of gold and silver, and the crucifix on the altar is also violet-veiled. There is no organ music, and the deep notes of the chanting swell with a strange solemnity through the echoing vaults. Slowly the brilliancy grows, the candles gleam out on the altar. The cardinal in his sweeping robes and scarlet cap advances among attendant priests and acolytes, the space before the altar is filled with figures white or purple-robed, showing in a vague richness through the clouds of incense. The long service goes on, with the monotonous priestly recitals, the responses of the people, occasional bursts of exquisite singing.

At last the solemn final word and gesture of blessing have been given, and one by one the priests lift and bear away the palm branches. Then the olive, which is given in their stead to the people, is brought forward in great sheaves, and a priest in gold-embroidered violet robe holds out the silvery branches to the hands which reach and clutch for them, till all the nearest of the throng have received their portion and pass on twigs to those behind. Peace and blessing is that olive to bring to those who reverently receive the gleaming leaves. The distribution completed, the cardinal and canons with their attendant train move in stately procession down the church, out into the portico, and so back to the altar. They bear aloft, with the tall tapers and the shrouded crucifix, the golden palm branches; not simple boughs such as were cast before Christ by the people of Jerusalem. These are fantastically dipped and twisted till they look more like furled standards, a significant touch in that church which is so ready to turn the martyr symbol into the conquering banner.

EASTER'S INDUSTRIAL SIDE.

The Church Holiday Gives Employment to Thousands of People.

From religion to business is a big jump in the lives of most men—too many people of this world trying to separate their religion as far as possible from their business, for the reason perhaps that some of their business methods might not measure up to their religious standards. However, that may be, Easter—like all church holidays—has a pronounced effect upon the business interests of the community. What with the great number of eggs eaten; the large number of new clothes worn, and the number of Eastern novelties placed upon the market, it is probably true that no holiday, religious or civic—not even Fourth of July—with the possible exception of Christmas, causes a greater amount of money to be put into circulation. That this is so is a blessing. Hundreds of thousands of people who would otherwise be without work are kept busy half the year making toys, hats and clothes for Easter and what at first appears to be a great national extravagance, conducted under the guise of religion, becomes in reality a marvelous boon to mankind.

NEWS OF MINNESOTA.

The New Cathedral.
Archbishop John Ireland of St. Paul will be the principal speaker at the impressive ceremonies connected with the laying of the cornerstone of the $700,000 pro-cathedral now being erected in Minneapolis at Hennepin and Sixteenth avenues. A monster demonstration is planned and when the event takes place May 21, it is expected it will be witnessed by from 75,000 to 90,000 persons.
Preparations are being made by the committee on arrangements of which L. S. Donaldson is chairman, to entertain fully 75,000 visitors from outside the twin cities on that day. The Catholic clergy and prominent men of the state to the number 1,000 will be on the platform, overlooking the cornerstone. Catholics from all parts of the state are coming, and special train service is being arranged to accommodate those living at a distance. Mathias Baldwin is to be marshal of the day and a mammoth parade of 45,000 or more is planned. Each parish in line of march will follow a designating banner.

Thousands of Acres Saved.
Washington—The supreme court of the District of Columbia has decided a case in favor of the secretary of the interior, the effect of which will be to turn over to the State of Minnesota several thousand acres of land, the timber alone on which is said to be valued at considerably in excess of $1,000,000. The case was brought by Gus A. Beaulieu, who, acting on behalf of the Chippewa tribe of Indians, sought to restrain the secretary from turning the lands over to the state. The Indians claim the lands should be sold and the proceeds divided among them. Secretary Garfield decided that the lands should be given to the state under an act of congress giving to it lands that were swamp in character.
The lands are located on the ceded Chippewa Indian reservation in Minnesota. On behalf of Secretary Garfield a demurrer was filed which set forth that the State of Minnesota was an essential party in the case, in fact a co-defendant, and that under the eleventh amendment to the Constitution a state cannot be sued by one of its citizens, and Beaulieu's petition for an injunction should be dismissed.

Powder Magazine Explodes.
Minneapolis—Exploding with a crash that was felt for miles around, the powder magazine at the University of Minnesota went off with a deafening report, completely wrecking the place, throwing debris high into the air, breaking many windows and sending a stream of flame heavenward. No one was killed or seriously injured.
Immediately following the explosion a tongue of flame shot up to a height of about 100 feet and the roof of the cave wherein the explosive was kept, and which consisted of boiler iron, was thrown some 300 feet into the air and came down in a crumpled mass.

The cause of the explosion is not known, though some boys started a grass fire earlier in the afternoon and that may have been the origin of the trouble.
Only a hole in the ground marks where the magazine was. All the windows in the assay building of the mining department were blown in and the chemistry and law buildings suffered similarly. There was no one in the neighborhood at the time.

Timber Cut.
St. Paul—There is a falling off of nearly 50 per cent in the timber cut in Minnesota during the present season as compared with recent preceding years, according to figures and estimates prepared by Forestry Commissioner C. C. Andrews. He says:

"The aggregate output of various kinds of timber and wood from the Minnesota forests this past winter, in round numbers, was: Pine, 800,000,000 feet; mixed timber, including ash, balsam, basswood, birch, cedar, poplar, pine, spruce and tamarac, 79,000,000 feet; number of poles, 213,025; ties, 3,565,750; posts, 1,754,500; cords of pulpwood, 151,800; cords of wood, 75,580; number of feet of mining timber, 500,000; number logging camps, 529; number of men employed, 19,575; average wages, $26 a month and board. These returns are probably 25 per cent below the actual output.

Shortage.
St. Paul—Public Examiner Anton Schaefer filed with Gov. Johnson the report covering the period of the incompetency of Fenton G. Warner as state oil inspector, which, he says, shows a shortage of $12,010. The report covers what is known as the Minneapolis division by the Standard Oil company, including Ramsey, Hennepin and twenty-nine other counties. The report is made by W. C. Heilbron, one of the deputy examiners, and covers about thirty pages, including a mass of figures.

Firebug Again Burns Mill.
Grand Rapids—Neumann Brothers' sawmill on Prairie Lake, four miles north of this city, was partially destroyed by fire; the fire being evidently of incendiary origin. The loss is estimated at $3,000. This is the second fire of the same nature in this mill, the other occurring one year ago under similar circumstances, but much heavier loss.

Minneapolis—After having been discarded for several days at the Hennepin county morgue as worthless, the coat worn by Carl Hult, who committed suicide at the St. James hotel, was found to contain $500.
