The report of the committee on credentials showed that 21 towns were represented in the convention. The committee on resolutions brought in the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted, to-wit:

"We, the Democrats of Marshall County, in convention assembled, do hereby renew our faith in its principles as set forth in the national platform adopted by the Denver Convention and pledge our best efforts in support of our chief standard bearers, Wm. J. Bryan, and his able associate, John W. Kern.

We point with pride to the fact that of all our chief executives, our two Democratic governors have made the best records and will go down in history as among the ablest executives of our time.

We favor increased appropriations for drainage purposes and road making.

We favor legislation looking to the control and eradication of noxious weeds, which are becoming a menace to our farming industry.

We favor wise temperance legislation for the control of the liquor traffic and endorse County Option as a step in the right direction.

C. A. Tullar,
R. D. V. Carr,
R. W. Frazee,
Committee on Resolutions."

to be seen living in a typical natives village at the great Minnesota State Fair, Hamline, and a fine opportunity will be offered to visitors to study at close range, the most remarkable primitive agricultural people in the world.

For generations untold the Igorrotes have lived their simple tribal life, untouched by outside culture, and are to-day as wild as weeds. Fierce hunters of human heads and constantly at war with their neighbors in surrounding towns, they are true children of nature. They are of Malay origin, and have superb physiques which their scant attires display to fine advantage. They are gifted with a great sense of humor, unusual intelligence, are highly industrious and generally of excellent moral and physical fibre. They are pagans, who have grasped the idea of one god, and are agriculturalists from necessity, terracing the mountain sides and growing their rice under irrigation.

The village will be complete with all the various types of houses, and all their crude industries will be in operation. There will be a spirited exhibition of their war dances, tribal songs, spear throwing, mock battles, and other sports and pastimes.

The village comes to Hamline, with the high endorsement of the press where it has been shown, as well as of exposition and public officials, and is an educational exhibit of so high a character that every man, woman and child should visit it and learn at least one of the hundred customs which the Spanish-American war laid on our shoulders.

The tower of the fighting men of the warlike Bontoc Igorrotes, with their women folk and a cute boy baby, from the remote mountain fastnesses of the Philippine Islands, are
