

SING GLADNESS AND PRAISE

Carols Have a Distinct and Beautiful Meaning When Rendered at the Easter Time.

It seems as if the Easter time was a particularly appropriate time for the caroling out of our joy. The spring has come, the birds are singing again after the long winter of ice and snow, and we mortals wake to joy again with them. Let us see how the people of ancient times observed Easter. "Carol," the word which we use in speaking of Easter music, means a song of praise, between a hymn and a ballad, a song which was used first to accompany a dance. One of the most beautiful of these old carols had its origin in the southwestern part of France, and is called "The Carol of the Flowers." It runs thus:

Come with us, sweet flowers, and worship Christ the Lord;
Let your perfume hover round the Babe adored.

Modest violet, hiding in the grassy shade,
Thou canst say how humble He is made.

Lily fair, low bending in the sun's warm light,
Thou dost tell that He is pure as thou art white.

As thou, pansy, shinest forth in bright array,
So doth He his majesty display.

As thou, rose, wide opening, do thy scent impart,
So His love expanding, draws each sinful heart.

Easter time seemed especially the season that the ancient people were moved to compose folk songs, which were not written down as music is written now, but which were sung, from generation to generation of people. In this way they were kept alive, as surely as if they had been printed, or written on parchment, according to the custom in ancient days. These folk songs depicted scenes in the garden of Gethsemane where the Saviour walked, or of the women who went to the tomb bearing precious spices, of their finding the empty tomb, of the white-robed angel, and of Mary, the virgin mother.

One of the most beautiful of all the songs which have been written of this event is Handel's "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth." This has been sung on Easter for many years, in churches.

All wise people use the Sheaf as their advertising medium.

An Easter Carol by Minna Irving

Awake! A shaft of heavenly fire
Has touched the cloud and tipped the spire.

The frosty clod no more is cold,
The violet stirs beneath the mold,
For this is Easter morning!

Arise! The buds begin to swell,
From bush and brake and field and fell.

A clear and joyous anthem floats
From scores of little feathered throats,
For this is Easter morning!

Behold! The soul of man today
Casts off the sepulcher of clay
And, crowned with lilies, mounts the skies

To walk with God in paradise,
For this is Easter morning!

Watermelon Chemistry.
Commercial chemistry, applied to the watermelon, now plays a large part in delivering melons to the northern consumer at a reasonable price. The chemistry expert, says the Scientific American, is used in making a certain paste that the shipper applies to the stem end of the watermelon. Before the paste was invented whole carloads of watermelon frequently decayed. Now the shipper takes two copper or enamelware vessels, and in one of them dissolves four ounces of bluestone in two pints of boiling water, and in the other three ounces of powdered alum in one pint of water. To the solution of powdered alum he then adds four and one-half ounces of rye flour, and mixes the whole until he has a smooth paste. When the bluestone is dissolved that solution is poured into the paste, and the mixture is thoroughly stirred. The paste is then boiled for five minutes, cooled and strained, colored with pistachio green and sealed in air-tight jars.

Where He Did His Reading.
Hampton—What did you do last night?
Wickham—Oh, I read for a couple of hours.
Hampton—I thought you were going to the cinema.
Wickham—I did go. And 90 per cent of the films consisted of subtitles.—London Answers.

Made Me a Well Man

Mr. Louis Young, 1652 Clifford St., Rochester, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for thirty years with chronic bowel trouble, stomach trouble and hemorrhages of the bowels. We bought a bottle of Peruna and I took it faithfully, and I began to feel better. My wife persuaded me to continue, and I took it for some time as directed. Now I am a well man."

Suffered thirty years with stomach trouble and hemorrhages of the bowels.
