Awakening.

With the passing of the winter months old Dame Nature slowly wakes from her long sleep, takes stock and vigorously prepares for a busy season ahead. The winter may have been long, late frosts may frustrate her efforts, but she struggles on to an ultimate triumph. She has been dormant a long time, many months have passed since the accomplishment of anything worthy of mention in her line, but her efforts are redoubled and the temper of her disposition is reflected in the babbling of cheery brooks, the evening song of the meadow lark and the ever increasing warmth of the sun.

Business, to a large extent, has been lying dormant the past few months after the hurry, bustle and speculation of the summer of the past few years. Financial conditions have been said to have been bad of late. Money is claimed to have been extremely tight. According to reports coming in from financial centers, there is an awakening in the offing. Business is shaking itself, small transactions and ever increasing activities denote a return to life. There will be reversals no doubt. The path will not be smooth, yet with one end in view, one common cause, the past inactivity should be agreeably left behind and normal conditions again resumed.

Sitting back with one hand on the bank roll and within the other a re-entrenchment tool, will not burst the early buds of the business spring time. Brooklets of circulating money will never start while their sources are still frozen. The sun rays of buying and selling, exchange and consistent spending, is all that will thaw the frozen pools of finance and start the cheery little brooks of finance, prosperity and normalcy.

For Better Understanding.

Appreciation of the farmer's problem by the consumer and the appreciation of the consumer's problem by the farmer are urged for the better welfare of the nation by C. S. Barrett, president of the National Farmers' Union and chairman of the National Board of Farm Organizations. He urged that the city man become acquainted with what the farmer has to contend with and that the farmer should know as much as possible about the consumer of his produce. The aim of society, which oftentimes prevails at various conferences and meetings which have to do with the general welfare, is also condemned by Mr. Barrett. He also maintains that the suppression of facts concerning the farmer is misleading the city people and giving them to believe many untrue and belittling things about the farmer. He says in part, "One of the things I would like city people to know is that the farmers of this nation, as represented through their organizations, are not seeking to overthrow or destroy commerce and trade. On the contrary they are largely developing both. The history of agricultural co-operation abroad and at home shows prosperity and happiness, increased production, the development and extension of commerce and trade, the introduction of efficiency and economy, the elimination of waste, the improvement in the standards of grades in the farm products they produce. Of this Denmark is but one example abroad, and in the United States those sections are most prosperous, with enhancement of values and business prosperity to those who dwell in the cities and towns surrounded by the farm co-operators."

MANY VISITORS ENJOY ITASCA PARK SCENERY.

More than 200,000 tourists and other pleasure seekers from over the entire United States visited Itasca state park during the past summer, announces W. T. Cox, state forester, being visited by more persons than any other similar region in the Northwest.

The park covers an area of more than 30,000 acres and within its borders more than 1,000,000 feet of timber valued at more than $1,000,000 not including the value of land and some improvements. With those additional values the valuation of this tract of beauty is more than $2,000,000.

The timber found on this land is varied and consists of pine, spruce, balsam, tamarack, birch, poplar, oak, ash and other varieties. The larger portion of the timber, however, Mr. Cox said, is pine.

The park is the only place in the state where scientific forestry is applied, the forester said, and the result is that thousands of small trees are planted every year to replenish areas which were "logged over" and "burned over" years ago before the tract was acquired by the state as a reserve.

As a game preserve, Mr. Cox said the park is not surpassed anywhere in the United States. The elk were introduced in 1918, from Jackson Hole, Wyo., now numbers more than forty head, and it will be necessary to liberate some of these soon on account of the large amount of hay needed for feed during the winter months. Deer are very plentiful and often afford the amateur photographer an opportunity of obtaining a "close up" exposure.

The beaver in the park have increased so rapidly that it is necessary for the department to trap a certain number each season to remove the danger of a food scarcity.

The Lutheran Brotherhood of America will hold a state convention for Minnesota at the Curtiss Hotel in Minneapolis on April 20, for the purpose of effecting a permanent organization. Dr. J. A. O. Stub, pastor of the Central Lutheran church of Minneapolis, is president of the committee of arrangements. He is also the President of the Lutheran Brotherhood of America, which is an organization that includes all Lutheran church bodies in this country.

POLITENESS CONTEST WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Ethel Pihlstrom and Chester MacArthur are Chosen as Most Polite Warrenites.

Ethel Pihlstrom and Chester MacArthur were announced winners of the politeness contest of the M. E. Sunday school last Sunday, which covered the past month. The reports of the detectives who shadowed Warren children during the period are as follows:

The task to find the most polite girl among those of High School age has been difficult. There are many very polite girls in Warren. If one but observes at social gatherings, on the streets, in the places of business, at home and at school and church, one will see politeness in varying degrees, and manifested in various ways. There are a few things that everyone admires in a girl of this age and there are things which almost everyone disapproves. For the politeness prize I would not choose one who was disrespectful to her parents or teachers or associates. Nor would I choose a girl who is careless or reckless in her manners. I could not vote the prize to a girl who spends much of her time walking the streets. A girl that we would really admire we would expect to see diligent at her school work, willing to do her part in the home—in fact being a source of help and good cheer wherever you found her.

Your detective has gone to considerable trouble to investigate the home life, school life, and street life of several girls under consideration. One would lose because she did not apply herself to her work at home or at school. Another loses because she is selfish. Another loses because she walks the streets too much. Another because she is not reverent at church. And still another because she is impolite to her teachers.

During the month I have observed with the above ideals in mind. In some girls I have been disappointed as I have watched them closely. In others I have been agreeably surprised as I watched them with the politeness prize in mind. At last I have decided that the most polite girl, among those of High School age, is one who is a good student, respectful to her teachers, sympathetic and cordial with her friends, attentive to her duties at home, ever bearing that loyal, cheerful spirit that we all admire. Her name is Ethel Pihlstrom, and I take pleasure in recommending her for the politeness prize.

Most respectfully,
Your Detective.

In trying to decide regarding the politest young man, I have had a rather serious task, for the reason that I have found so many that were simply fine, that it has been difficult to choose the one most deserving. However, there seems to be different motives that prompt a courteous demeanor in those we meet. We find one who is polite because his home training has been such that he can't well be otherwise.

Another seems to be governed somewhat by policy, while another is polite provided his associates are. But the motive that appealed to me is one that seems to be prompted by a feeling of kindness and happy good will toward all.

Back of such a motive is usually good thinking and good living and thus politeness to such and one is natural and not forced.

We all enjoy these sunny dispositions that meet their daily tasks with a smile, be it ever so hard, for we seem to have a better taste in our mouth for having met them, and when we find this disposition in a young man who is just starting in life, we are inclined to take our hats off to him and bid him God speed.

The young man I have chosen seems to be governed largely by such a motive and without any reflection on others but rather in appreciation of him I take pleasure in naming Chester MacArthur.

Very respectfully,
Your Detective.

FIRST COUNTY SCHOOL CLOSED.

The first school in Marshall county to close its doors for the summer vacation was the school of district No. 101, which concluded the 1920-21 school year's work last Wednesday. Miss Anna A. Johnson, who taught the Jevne school in East Park township, submitted her yearly report to the superintendent of schools of Marshall county and has returned to her home in Vega. A number of other schools were scheduled to close their doors for the past year the first of this month, according to David Johnson, county superintendent. A large number of schools will have finished the year's work by the first of May and the remaining will close the latter part of that month or the first of June.

SPUDS 10 CENTS A BUSHEL.

H. H. Hoel, of Frazee, shipped a carload of 600 bushels of potatoes last week to Iola, Kan., and when he got his returns he received $134.39 for the 600 bushels while the railroads got $261.61. This car of potatoes was No. 1 stock, packed in new sacks, and were in fine condition. Mr. Hoel paid the farmers 65c a bushel last fall for these potatoes. He is out the shrinkage, the labor of handling and sacking and the cost of the new sacks, which leaves him about 10 cents a bushel for the potatoes and nets him a loss of 55 cents a bushel.—Fergus Falls Journal.

Prices on grain cleaners are the same as last year. Sizes we carry are from 30 inches to 48 inches wide.—Lundgren Wittensten & Co.

F. BAKKE,
County Treasurer.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS WILL HEAR TALKS

Lectures Will Be Given to Seniors of Stephen High On Vocational Subjects.

Talks to the girls in the graduating class of the Stephen high school this spring will be given by competent men and women of various vocations and businesses to give the girls an idea of the nature of work they wish to follow upon the completion of their high school course. These talks will be the result of a movement gotten under way by Miss Orma M. Eastman, principal of the Stephen high school. It is very probable that the work will also be taken up in the other high schools of the county.

Hitherto the large majority of the girls who graduate from the high schools in the county have become teachers without having considered any other line of endeavor. It is that the girls may know, to some extent, what other vocations and professions offer that the talks will be given. People prominent in various professions and vocations will be sought to speak before the high school girls, according to present plans.

The work is being advocated by large health centers throughout the county and bids fair to become a part of the schooling girls will receive in their fourth high school year. Miss Eastman has taken the initial steps in Marshall county and expects to have speakers before her pupils in the near future. Miss Elizabeth Hanson, R. N., county nurse, has been already engaged to talk to the Stephen girls on nursing and what that line of endeavor offers to the high school girl graduate.

A Belt Pulley that's a Wonder

The belt pulley of the Hart-Parr 30 is driven directly from the engine without passing through extra gears that wear out and give trouble.

It is clutch connected. You may sit on the seat of the Hart-Parr 30 and in a moment be lined up to the belt machine ready for work.

Cold fuel at maximum load gives 20 to 25 per cent more power than preheated fuel, but on light load, preheated fuel makes the engine run smoothly. Most tractors use one or the other all the time, but the Hart-Parr 30 automatically uses cold fuel at medium to full loads, and preheats the fuel at no load to medium load.

Runs steadier than a Steam Engine.

The Hart-Parr 30 doesn't gain ten revolutions when the load is cut off, because the Kerosene Shunt, and Governor automatically regulates the fuel. There is no misfiring, but an even steady pull regardless of the volume of the load.

The Hart-Parr 30 is guaranteed to burn Kerosene as successfully as gasoline engines burn gasoline—to develop as much power from it and use no more of it.

Call and see us or write for literature.
You must order early to get a Hart-Parr 30.
