

MINNEAPOLIS NEWS.

OFFICE—No. 6 Washington avenue, opposite Nicollet house. Office hours from 9 a. m. to 10 o'clock p. m.

MINNEAPOLIS GLOBELETS.

The real estate transfers filed yesterday aggregated $97,373.45.

About fifty notes of issue were filed in the District court yesterday.

The newboys and bootblacks enjoyed themselves at the city mission last evening.

Demurrer to complaint has been overruled in the case of Frank Irmen against J. E. Norstrom.

Another morning newspaper is projected. It is to be a four page, six column sheet, and independent.

The case of Cyrus W. Pickett, et al., vs. Charles H. Rowe, et al., was yesterday dismissed by the court.

C. W. Collins, the crook who purloined a clock, will partake of Jimmy Stoddard's bill of fare for fifteen days. He will fatten up.

Mayor Ames, in the News Letter, states that he will accept a re-nomination to the office of mayor, if tendered him by the Democracy in the regular way.

Thomas Murphy's residence on Seventh avenue southeast, caught fire in the roof yesterday, but the fire was easily extinguished without the aid of the department.

L. B. Sanford, the man under arrest for stealing P. D. Sander's horses, has been committed to await examination to-morrow morning in default of bonds in $500.

To a representative of the Globe, Manager Conklin expressed his regret yesterday, that Her Majesty's Opera company could not secure dates in St. Paul, and was sincere.

Dr. Hirsch, editor of the Free Press, will deliver a lecture at Turner hall to-morrow evening on "Washington and Incidents Connected with the Revolutionary War."

Thomas Doyle and Lena Gerham, the interesting pair who created a public disturbance by a war of words on Second street Saturday night, yesterday paid fines in five cases each for the diversion.

In the case of the Northwestern Manufacturing & Car company vs. Anthony Chesick, et al., the court yesterday afternoon was yesterday sustained by the court, but the motion for a change of venue was denied.

It is claimed that young Bartlett, who is under bonds to appear in the municipal court under the charge of embezzling Plant & Peterson out of $22, has jumped his bail. The authorities have been unable to find any trace of him.

The cases involving the Traylor-Fitts tragedy, were called in the municipal court yesterday, but owing to Traylor's low condition, the cases were continued to Friday, when bonds remaining the same. Traylor is unable to leave his bed.

Tom Sellers, the 'coon who burglarized Thomas' saloon and stole a large mirror and silver furniture, will be given an examination in the municipal court to-morrow morning. Awaiting that event he is held in limbo in default of $300 bonds.

The report circulated by Charles Eagles to the effect that alleged "body-snatchers" made overtures to him in an endeavor to secure his services as a "body-snatcher" was decidedly a hoax by the authorities. He may be a crank, or possibly the butt of a practical joke.

The city council committee on police renewed its investigation yesterday into the causes of absenteeism on the police force. A number of officers were examined, but the session was secret. A member of the committee stated that no conclusions had been arrived at.

The paraphernalia of Calfee's Wonderland saloon was yesterday attached by the deputy sheriff to satisfy a claim of Michael Breslau, the city bill poster, for $42.25. The wrappings were packed in the green room of the Grand Opera house when the officer took possession of them by legal process.

John Murphy, a worthless boy, was before his honor yesterday, and a sentence of fifteen days was the result. William Collins, up for the same, convinced the court that he was not a drunkard, and was discharged by the sweat of his brow, and promising to go to work at once, had sentence suspended.

The case against John Lyons charged with committing an assault and battery upon Grant Newton, furnished a peculiar decision in the municipal court yesterday. The defendant changed his plea from not guilty to guilty, and the court fined one cent and the costs of the action, which aggregated $2.85.

The following parties received marriage permits yesterday: Morgan Robinson and Annie Samuels; Joseph Lerscheld and Annie Offerman; W. F. Giebelman and Caroline Lerscheld; Joseph Schalek and Augusta A. Hensel; Patrick Broderick and Eliza Kennedy; Thomas G. Gearty and Jennie L. Conlin.

Judge Lochren has filed an order denying a motion for a new trial in the personal damage case of Ralph L. Bess against the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway company, on the ground that the case was fairly left to the jury at the last term of court, and that sufficient evidence had been adduced to sustain their verdict.

The examination of the "Hy" knickerbocker, E. G. Dietrich, who is charged with collecting $37 and appropriating the amount to his own behalf, which $37 was the proceeds of the sale of a piano, and a sewing machine agency, is set for to-morrow morning. Meanwhile the duce languishes in durance for want of the duce wherewith to recognize for his appearance at that time.

Prof. Dexter is meeting with such success in Washington that he may not return to this city as early as he anticipated. He writes this end of the GLOBE: "I have undergone treatment of the spermatic glands by Beck and five senators. I am also engaged to treat U. S. Grant in New York. He is not improving under his present treatment. I will send you several letters for publication in a short time."

In the case of the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway company against the City of Minneapolis, an action brought to restrain the city from opening the extension of Fourth avenue southeast across the railroad company's right of way, it was ordered by Judge Lochren yesterday that the demurrer to the complaint be overruled with $10 costs to plaintiff, the action to be allowed to proceed on payment of costs, and with leave to the defendant to answer the plaintiff's complaint within twenty days after notice.

MINNEAPOLIS PERSONALS.

Gen. Hatch has returned from Chicago.

Rev. M. W. Montgomery left yesterday for Sweden.

Dr. A. H. Hedderly and H. L. Gordon, have gone to Texas.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Sutherland, will give a party to-morrow evening at their home in Oak Lake, in honor of Miss Marie Hatfield, their guest.

The City Pastors.

The city pastors held their regular weekly meeting yesterday, at which Prof. Ofedal and Judge Young attended to present the needs of the bible cause.

Dr. Stryker, one of the committee appointed to confer with the publishers of morning papers, respecting the publication of notices of Sunday services, reported that one paper was disposed to publish the notices on Saturday and probably repeat them in the Sunday issue while another paper would not give any positive answer until St. Paul pastors were consulted on the matter. Rev. Mr. Fisher said it was nonsense to attempt dictating to newspaper editors in matters of this kind. Dr. Sample remarked that he had found the editors generally disposed to respect the demands of the ministry and offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That our committee be instructed to express to the publishers of morning papers our wish that our notices of Sabbath services be published in the Saturday morning papers, and our respectful request that they be not repeated in the Sabbath issues.

Rev. J. M. Bell, of the First M. E. church, read a paper entitled, "The Kind of Preaching Needed by the Times." As this was a commercial age, he thought the minister should take his sermons in a business like manner.

BOARD OF TRADE.

The Routine of Yesterday's Weekly Session - A Testimonial to Willard.

The weekly meeting of the board of trade was held in the rooms yesterday with a fair attendance. The committee on the jobbing trade, to whom had been referred the matter of the complaint respecting vexatious delays in express between Minneapolis and St. Paul, and the matter of the delay of the matter had been given an investigation, but that they found little encouragement while the trains ran as at present.

The committee on jobbing trade further reported an excellent field for two wholesale hat and bonnet lines in the city, with a capital of $150,000 each, with a rental of a store at $2,000 to $2,500 per annum.

Annual fees in $10 each were reported as paid by the following members: W. F. Bown, J. F. Barnum, C. H. Pratt, C. F. Harbut, H. C. Morton, J. C. Moore, M. Reeve, C. E. Lattner, George R. Lyman, F. S. Martin and S. C. Galla.

The board adjourned after the transaction of diverse other matters of no public importance.

A communication from Senator McMillan was read and placed on file. It stated that the senator had received the resolution of the board of trade concerning the silver quotation and promised his closest attention.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short time will suffice to show that though costly the hastening of the completion of the Northern Pacific was most opportune, the far reaching wisdom of his policies for the great corporations he so faithfully served and the incalculable debt of gratitude from the cities of the northwest, most especially from those upon whose prosperity the northacific in turn depends.

Mr. Greenwald offered the following testimony to Willard, which was referred to the committee on railroads:

Resolved, That if the Hon. Henry Willard, we recognize a character of the highest order, which can only be tried, not measured by gold or fame. That we most deeply sympathize with him, for his loss of health and means from his devotion to a great and good work, but rejoice that the man stands above the reach of Wall street power, and we are most anxious that he should secure the complete restoration of his health, resting in the full assurance that but a short