Loggers are leaving the woods hereabouts well satisfied with the winter's cut; and with the amount of snow lying in the woods the prospects are bright for a clear drive.

Mr. N. C. Foster, of this place, probably one of the largest individual manufacturers of lumber in the northwest, has in operation over fifteen miles of logging railway.

The Foot and Mouth Disease—The Symptoms and the Danger. To the Editor of the Globe: FORT TOTTEN, D. T., March 17.—As a matter affecting human life, permit me to occupy a short space in your largely circulated paper, relative to the pathology, symptoms and treatment of this dreadful pest, in order that cattle owners may be prepared, as from its highly contagious nature it may be in our midst at any moment.

THE CHOLERA GERM.—It is reported that the most interesting and important discovery has been made by German doctors who have been investigating the cholera epidemics of Egypt and India. In a water tank near Calcutta, these scientists have found microscopic organisms, or bacilli, which they had already proven to exist in all cases of cholera, and in no other disease.

THE ELECTRICITY OF THUNDER STORMS.—It has been recently shown, experimentally, that atmospheric electricity is not produced by the evaporation of water, as it was formerly supposed, but by the friction of air currents on the surface of the earth.

THE WORLD'S WATERS.—A work by Dr. Otto Krummel, of Gottingen, gives the following calculations of the extent of the different seas of the globe: Atlantic ocean, 49,429,468 square miles; Pacific ocean, 99,897,917 square miles; Indian ocean, 45,492,040 square miles; Arctic ocean, 9,481,294 square miles; of which an area of 663,249 square miles is covered by Hudson's bay and the White sea.

A Newspaper for El Mahdi. [London Letter to the Philadelphia Times.] The Afghan sheikh and philosopher, Gema Ed-Din, now residing in Paris, is said to be the right hand man for El Mahdi. He is there to found a newspaper printed in Arabic, to be distributed gratuitously all over the Mussulman world.

FATHER DE SMET.

The First to Successfully Treat With Sitting Bull.

His Narrative of His Council With the Unkapapas in 1863.

Sitting Bull a Chief of Warriors, and Not a Border Raider. To the Editor of the Globe: In 1863 the government sent a commission of distinguished officers to negotiate with the Sioux Indians for roadways through their country and for peace.

In 1863 the government sent a commission of distinguished officers to negotiate with the Sioux Indians for roadways through their country and for peace. The demands of the Indians, especially of the Unkapapas, among whom Sitting Bull was regarded as first warrior chief, though Four Horns and Black Moon then outranked him in council.

He would not have agreed to by the commission had they thought the government was able to send an army of 25,000 men into the country. No less an army, they believed, could subdue these Indians.

The treaty was accordingly substantially as proposed by Black Moon and Sitting Bull. The whites which had been established in the Unkapapa country were abandoned and the emigrant roads and surveys for railroads were limited to regions little occupied by the Indians.

Up to this time Sitting Bull's part in war against the whites had consisted only of instances of what he and his people regarded as invasions of their country—by gold prospectors and buffalo hunters. He was not a treaty Indian—he had never signed a treaty and he avoided all contact with the whites.

He did not attack settlements or in any way provoke war, except by the killing of a French trader in his country. He never took part in council or treaty with the whites save in the year 1863 when the Unkapapas were visited, on behalf of the peace commission, by Father De Smet, and on which occasion Sitting Bull was persuaded to agree to be represented at a peace council at Ft. Rice.

A treaty was concluded which was well enough observed on the part of Sitting Bull but which the whites did not intend to keep. It was broken by Custer's first Black Hills expedition and then by the advance of General Crook and his army, followed by the Terry expedition, when Custer and his immediate command were all killed.

Custer endeavored to charge an Indian village, to repeat scenes of massacre which have often occurred in our dealings with the Indians, and was met by a shower of bullets which he was obliged to retreat, every one. The subsequent history of Sitting Bull is familiar to readers of the GLOBE. He was a fugitive for years, more than ever distrustful of the promises of the whites, and when at last forced to regard his people as surrendering, he did not abandon his honest belief that he and his people owned the Black Hills country; but he yielded to necessity, and, giving his word, has done what no white chief had ever done with him, kept his word.

The man is ignorant according to our estimate, but he is not a liar. He has his own people. With Four Horns and Black Moon he outgeneraled and defeated Crook and annihilated Custer's little force. He was never guilty of the atrocities attributed to him by a late correspondent of your paper, but if he had been it might be said for his sake that he was a white warrior.

One June 19.—We left camp early on Sandy river, a tributary of the Yellowstone, and proceeded on our way. We traveled about twelve miles over high rolling prairie, and came in sight of Powder river, where we halted.
