A Sift Foundation. Last evening the fire department received an alarm which brought them near Western avenue bridge where they discovered that the double two story building between Twelfth street and the bridge had caved in, with the exception of the front part which is yet standing. The buildings were erected during the winter by John Douglas, John Johnson, Hinek and Silas Moffitt, who were soon going to open them for grocery business. The center wall gave way and three-fourths of the double building fell with a crash on a rear lot owned by Mrs. Quinn whose daughter, Mrs. Walters, was slightly hurt about the face and neck by the falling debris. A little child, the son of Peter Quinn, who was standing under a tree at the rear of the falling building had a miraculous escape from instant death. He was hurled by the falling debris, and was thrown into the air, and was used for the support of indigent sewing girls.

tree, he would certainly now be numbered with the victims of sad casualties. He escaped comparatively uninjured, and will be all right in a few days. The building was resting on a slim foundation, and it accordingly sunk as might have been expected.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Senator Wilson on Railway Monopolies and Legislation Affecting The Same.

The House of Representatives Engaged on The Private Calendar, and Make Little Progress.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The chair laid before the senate a message from the house non-concurring in the senate amendment to the naval appropriation, with the exception of the amendment providing for an armament for the steel cruisers already in course of construction.

Senator Hale moved that the senate insist in its amendment, and appoint a committee on the subject.

The committee on library resolution providing for deposit in the Smithsonian institute the silk flag presented to the senate by Joseph Newman, California, being the first American flag made from American silk. Agreed to.

Senator Blair, from the committee on education and labor, reported favorably the house bill to establish and maintain a bureau of labor statistics. Also, the bill introduced in the senate to provide for the study of physiology and the effects of intoxicating, narcotic and poisonous substances on life, health and welfare among the people of the territories and District of Columbia. Placed on the calendar.

Senator Wilson addressed the senate on his joint resolution recently submitted, and several bills already introduced relating to interstate commerce. He said that while our material resources had been rapidly advancing, our science law making had not kept pace with our necessities. He had not been able to fit our laws to new conditions, hence the painfully felt jolt and friction of our onward movement. He was not unmindful of the great difficulties surrounding the question, but it was not exceptional in that respect. Every element of our extraordinary progress had involved great difficulties, but that fact only made more imperative the necessity of giving the subject prompt and intelligent attention. A conviction had grown up in the country that the time had come for the national government to exercise its undoubted power to regulate interstate commerce. This was not to be done in any revengeful spirit as public laws were not the repositories of resentment. He said that the government will not relieve Berber but will wait for the rebellion to spread to Egypt instead of crushing it at Khartoum.

The Gazette urges the despatch of reinforcements of 5,000 men to Egypt, or England's withdrawal from the country, as any other course would be madness. Serious Complaints Against Gen. Patrick, Governor of the Dayton Soldiers' Home.

Senate Bill Reported for Prohibiting the Importation of Contracted Laborers.

The Tariff Debate in the House to Close May 6—What the Committees are Doing.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Representative McCoid, of Iowa, in an interview upon the traffic question said: "Party lines cannot be drawn upon the subject, and it must be treated as a business matter. Railways, telegraphs, mutual intercourse, intermarriage, and commingling of states are bringing a unity of sentiment in favor of reasonable protection as a national policy, and it is a part of statesmanship to harden it by encouraging improvements, immigration, transportation facilities, and cheap and indiscriminate interchange of our infinite variety of products." Equitable protection, he said, would cheapen all agricultural implements and preserve the dignity of labor.

The house committees on postoffices and post roads, has directed a sub-committee, consisting of Rogers, Ward, J. M. Taylor, Bingham and Wakefield, to provide a bill providing for the contract system of postal telegraphy. The sub-committee will meet to-morrow.

John A. Walsh is subpoenaed to appear before the Springer committee on Wednesday. He will not appear until he has given testimony in the court in the Kellogg case.

The house committee on military affairs ask the appointment of a special committee to investigate the management of the Soldiers' Home at Dayton. General Patrick, governor of the home, has been charged with being overbearing and inhuman in his treatment of the inmates. One man, seventy-six years of age, writes a letter to Patrick, asking that he be put in the guard house for ninety days for a trivial offense. He concludes his letter: "This is strictly confidential, or Patrick will hang me." At the request of the committee, Representative Rogers asked the inmates of the Soldiers' Home, for Disabled Soldiers, asking him to investigate the complaint. President Franklin replied that the charges have been investigated and found groundless. He recommended a congressional committee be appointed to make
