The Convention—the Platform—the Candidate—The Eve of Political Revolution.

[Telegraphic Editorial to the Philadelphia Times.]

CHICAGO, July 11.—All great revolutions are born in violent throes, and the desperate battle just closed in the Democratic national convention will stand as a memorable illustration of this truth. It was the most heroically contested struggle I have ever known, in thirty years as a witness of presidential nominations, and every element of ambition and jealousy, of meanest hatreds of struggling spoilsmen and of both petty and majestic individual rivalry was an intensifying factor in the conflict. Only a supreme cause high over men could have withstood the repeated shocks of the fierce assailing hosts. No national convention ever stood like the rock-ribbed shore against the angry surges of the spoilsmen's storm as did the convention of to-day. It was held in anarchy for an hour in the midst of a ballot by the cunningly devised strategy that suddenly burst a Hendricks hurricane on the body, which appealed to the inspiring sentiment of historic justice. Neither Grover Cleveland nor any greater man could have withstood such a cyclone. But the cause that he was made to represent with such distinctness alike by friend and foe, so strongly appealed to the intelligent and considerate judgment of the body that its members stood like a wall of adamant as the tempest raged in the wildest fury around them.

It was the most thoroughly deliberate convention that has met since the organization of the present parties, with the single exception of the Lincoln convention that started the Republican revolution in this city nearly a quarter of a century ago. It was not wedded to Grover Cleveland; it was not for him as a man; he had fewer personal acquaintances in the convention than had any successful candidate since Lincoln. He had no factious support outside of his battle with spoilsmen in his own state; he had no sectional sentiment or interest to rally under his flag. But from east and west, from north and south the most conservative and resolute supporters of honest government united to nominate him as the fittest and best leader of the revolution that public profligacy and debauchery so imperiously invite.

The battle in the Republican convention was unsuccessfully made to rescue the party from its spoils system and to elevate it to purer aims and efforts. The great popular leader, with the proclaimed methods and expectations of the spoilsmen, commanded the appeal to the approval of the Republicans, but at a fearful cost in the loss of able and self-sacrificing men who revere the yet fresh traditions of Republican fidelity to public integrity and lustrous patriotism. They followed the soiled Republican flag long after its leaders had betrayed and forgotten the great revolution that called it into the strife and gave it victory, but they made their final appeal for reform here a month ago and were defeated. In despair of Republican reform, they asserted the highest and noblest right of the citizen. They revolted and pointed as with one voice to Grover Cleveland as the one Democrat above all whose record commanded their hearty support. Then, and not till then was Cleveland a prominent, a possible candidate for president, and the battle for his nomination has been made upon issues so clear and distinct that none can misunderstand them. He was nominated to-day not only because he was earnestly and honestly championed by the best men and the best aims of the Democracy, but also because he was vindictively opposed by all who believe in the mockery of professed reform before elections to prostitute power to plunder after elections have been won.

Let none misunderstand the issue of the great conflict that is upon us. It involves a sweeping political revolution—not merely the transfer of power from one political party to another, but the revolutionary overthrow of the worst methods and purposes of both parties and the triumph of the best inspirations of every political faith. It is not simply whether there shall be a Republican or a Democratic president, nor is it a struggle to make James G. Blaine or Grover Cleveland the chief magistrate of the republic. A revolution has dawned upon both parties and it has been born of supreme necessity. Its seeds have been lavishly strewn by the Republican abuses and Democratic follies of the past half generation, and they have been watered and nourished and grown to apparent harvest time by the distinctly opposite men and measures declared by the two Chicago conventions of 1883.

Cleveland will lose many Democratic votes for the single offense of typifying practical, honest administration. The blatant demagogues who hang on the edges of every hopeful party by turns will decry him and the leprous jobbers of all parties will make common and exhaustive battle against him. But more than one hundred thousand men of sincere Republican faith in the debatable states will openly espouse his cause and press the result to successful revolution. New York will be desperately contested, but the more desperately it shall be fought the more signal will be the Cleveland victory. Connecticut and New Hampshire promise to be Cleveland states and Massachusetts will tremble in the balance between the Plumed Knight and the man who is known only as a resolutely honest publis servant.

The conflict will be one of the most violent and exhaustive of our political history. The Republicans have their ablest leader. His undiscovered resources are vast and will be employed in desperation. His party has boundless means of political warfare and they will be summoned to the uttermost. There will be money for the venal, honors for the ambitious, plunder for thieves, promises for the weak and flattery for fools; but the very desperation of the strife will multiply and crystallize the forces of reform, and only some monumental Democratic folly can hinder the election of Grover Cleveland.

The platform, when sifted of the regulation clap-trap that is inseparable from all modern party deliverances, is sound, sensible and patriotic. It is honest for the protection of industry, for the maintenance of our manufactures, for the strict enforcement of public economy and for the reform of our debauched and debauching profligacy by the reduction of taxes to the economical necessities of the government. On these vital issues the great protective industries of the land have commanded frank and manly tribute from the supreme tribunal of Democracy, and free trade has been eliminated from our party conflicts by the heroic revolt and victory under the lead of Samuel J. Randall. There is no idiotic theory in the Cleveland platform to breed revolt in 1884 as it was bred in 1880, and the plain issue of honest, economical public administration comes with revolutionary tread to restore free government to the purity that is its life-blood and to crown with dignity and power the noblest government of men. Capture of the Basile.

NEW YORK, July 14.—To-day is the ninety-fifth anniversary of the capture of the Bastile and the French societies celebrated in an appropriate manner. At the French consul's office, the consul was serenaded. M. Lafairve, minister plenipotentiary, stated he received from Jules Ferry a dispatch that Charles Renauld, president of the French benevolent society, of this city, was decorated with the cross of the Legion of Honor, for efforts in behalf of his countrymen in the United States.

Butler Will Run.

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 14.—B. W. Terlinde, of this city, secretary of the national committee of the Greenback party, who accompanied Gen. Butler from Chicago to Buffalo, says Butler stated distinctly to Gen. Weaver, himself and others, that he had accepted the national and anti-monopoly nomination and would run. He will probably concentrate his work in New York.

ALEXANDRIA, July 14.—Three cases of cholera to-day, one fatal.
