MR. DANIEL, who is associated with Mr. St. John, had no idea it was a lion's den.

The latest note is that Ben Butler was educated for the ministry. This must be an invention of the enemy.

The Blaine men are lamenting that Steve Elkins, "while fully as unscrupulous, is lacking in Dorsey's resource and audacity."

The Louisville Times has an item regarding the editor of the New York Sun, quite suggestive:

It becomes a matter of interest to know what Ben Butler has done for the Government. Cleveland bought his amnesty by refusing Paul Dana a position on his military staff, and the country knows how Grant lost his favor.

Garfield being a poor man, and somewhat in debt, the rich men of his party not only supplied him with an abundant campaign fund, but especially provided for the payment of his personal debts.

Ben Butterworth, of Ohio, was very much disgusted two years ago when he became a defeated candidate for Congress, and President Arthur, in the abundance of his good nature, made a place for him as a Commissioner of Patents.

When the campaign first began the doubtful states were counted as New York and Indiana. Those were the ones upon which every one supposed the contest turned.

The Republicans now find that Ohio, Michigan, Iowa and Kansas are doubtful, and that only sharp work and lavish expenditure can save them. Indiana is practically conceded to the Democrats, and having expended their efforts in the other states named, leaves them little chance for work in New York where they had expected to concentrate everything.

Mr. Halstead, who is editing the Extra annex to the New York Tribune, established with the expenditure of $50,000 by the Republican committee, is introducing the boorish style of assault upon Gov. Cleveland that he used in 1876 upon Mr. Blaine, and for whom he had expected to concentrate everything.

Miss Maud Howe, daughter of Julia Ward Howe, has written a dramatic sketch entitled "Golden Leashes," which is publicly to be read by a professed ecologist for the special delight of Newporters at their Casino next Monday.

The September Manhattan exhibits what reports to be a new poet in the person of Mr. Charles D. Dacey, but poets, from time immemorial have been, and this particular daisy has previously blossomed as class poet of Harvard college, in 1881.

Since Mr. Conkling has declined the anxious and frantic overtures of the Blaineites to take hold and save the day for them, as he did for Garfield four years, Blaine has set his organs on fire to make various supposed sarcastic remarks. One of these brilliant things appears in the Albany Journal.

Mr. Halstead, who is editing the Extra annex to the New York Tribune, established with the expenditure of $50,000 by the Republican committee, is introducing the boorish style of assault upon Gov. Cleveland that he used in 1876 upon Mr. Blaine, and for whom he had expected to concentrate everything.

Blaine, evidently has not been taken into the secrets of Republican management upon the Atlantic side of the country. The Argonaut sharply condemns the Republican campaign of slander, and concludes an article on this topic as follows:

There is no reason why this campaign may not be conducted upon a higher plane than that of slander and libelous personal defamation. For ourselves we admit the very high political character and honorable public career of the Democratic candidate for the presidency. We claim for Mr. Blaine that he possesses all the requisites of high statesmanship, that he is personally above reproach. The election of either gentleman will secure for our country a good president as the condition of their respective parties will allow.

ROOM AND TO SPEAR. There are some alarmists who are constantly urging that it is time that some check be given to emigration into this country for the reason, as they assert, that the country was soon to be filled to its limit.

The reason for the trouble of collecting some statistics which will prove that, for some time, at least, there will be no crowding. Figures show that in Europe, as a whole, there is one person to each seven acres of territory; in the United States, there is one person to each sixty acres. Should this country become populated to the same density as Europe, it would contain a population of four hundred and twenty millions.

As the rate of increase in this country for the last eighty years has been, in round numbers, only about six hundred thousand per annum, it follows that it will be a good many years before we shall attain the density of Europe. Suppose that we shall increase at the rate of a million a year, which is extravagant, it will still require nearly four hundred years for us to secure a population as dense as that of the old world.

The fear that this country will be possessed finally by emigrants from the old world, and that the children of the native population will be debared from the possession of the inheritance ought not to create anything in the nature of a panic. In fact, if by peopling of the country were left to the native element, the area would become a desert in the course of a century, as facts have long since demonstrated that the native or New England element is rapidly dying out.

We must have accessions from the outside; and there is yet plenty of room for them. Ireland and Scotland have one person to each four acres of land; Germany and France one person to each three acres; England and Wales, and Belgium one person to each two acres; while here, New York has one to each five acres; Illinois, one to each twelve acres; Wisconsin, one to each twenty-seven acres; and Minnesota, one to each thirty-five acres. The latter named state were populated as densely as France or Germany, for instance, it would have a population some eighteen times greater than its present one; and if as dense as Belgium, it would have forty times as many as it possesses at the present date.

Europe support one person to each seven acres of its area, and this in view of the vast amount that is withdrawn from use as parks, estates and city sites. Let us allow that we can support one person for each ten of the population. This will give us an ultimate population of nearly three hundred millions. If by the time this density is secured there is demand for more room, we will annex British North America and Mexico, which will give us room for several hundred millions more. Meanwhile, the regulation of the entrance of outsiders so as to prevent the country from being taken up prematurely on by not less than two centuries. It may be added that if this country is to be managed for a couple more decades by the Republican party the immigration from the country would far exceed the emigration into it. Let the alarmists take heart; there is no immediate danger.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 24.—Chas. A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, has just received word from Cleveland that he has been chosen to succeed Dana as a position on his military staff, and the country knows how Grant lost his favor.

On account of the inclemency of the weather there was but a small audience at yesterday afternoon's temperance exercises at the House of Representatives, conducted by Bishop Whipple, the lord bishop of Rochester, and the Rev. J. H. Graham, of the Anglican Christian Temperance society, nevertheless the Sabbath school, to which the service was more especially addressed, was out in force both in regard to teachers and pupils, and the exercises of fully an hour's duration were of unusual interest.

In an introduction of the lord bishop, stated that as he grew in the years bringing him nearer to the grave he recalled more vividly the playmates of his youth than ever before when he looked upon groups of childhood wherever gathered. He loved children, even in the spirit in which children are loved, and he had many lambs. He lately addressed the convicts in a state prison, among whom were thirty persons who had committed the terrible crime of murder and other atrocious deeds, and as he looked upon them he could not help but think that every one of these once lay a baby boy upon a mother's bosom, and that he had seen them in the condition they were in by taking in boyhood the wrong path in life. In reply to his inquiries of the warden as to what had caused their departure from innocence to crime, he had told him that fully two-thirds of these owed their fall to indulgence in intoxicating drinks.

TEMPERANCE SERMONS.

In the Episcopal Churches of St. Paul Yesterday.

By Rt. Rev. Dr. Thorwald, "The Temperance Apostle" of England, And Addresses by Bishop Whipple and Mr. Graham.

A large congregation assembled at St. Paul's Episcopal church yesterday forenoon, to hear the address of the Rev. Dr. Thorwald, lord bishop of Rochester, on the subject of temperance.

The Rev. Dr. Thorwald, lord bishop of Rochester, England, addressed a large audience at St. Paul's Episcopal church last night on the subject of temperance. The exercises were opened with appropriate music, followed by prayer, led by Rev. W. C. Pope, of the Church of the Good Shepherd, after which the Rt. Rev. Bishop Whipple, in a few appropriate remarks, introduced the lord bishop of Rochester to the church.
