

THE CITY.

CITY GLOBULES.

The procession was twenty-one minutes passing a given point. There is said to be a duke in this city who bangs his eyebrows. The oyster saloons are beginning to show up again with stews and fries. Sitting Bull and party leave for New York at two o'clock this afternoon. There were thirty eight flags in the procession to-day and twenty bands of music. John P. Young, an ugly intoxicated, made the police a good racket at the corner of Seventh and Washburn yesterday afternoon. The streets were remarkably quiet last evening, after the congregation of such a crowd of people as thronged the city yesterday. Among the many beautiful badges worn by the different societies, that worn by the Still-water society was especially elegant and noticeable. The Astoria, formerly the Hotel Livingston, on Washburn street, will be open to the public under the management of Mr. John Baugh, the popular hotel man, on Wednesday at noon. C. P. Byam, in the Ramsey county jail for claimed fraudulent transactions in lands, was visited yesterday by his father from Rochester, N. Y., and by his wife and child from Duluth. Capt. Jackson, of chemical engine No. 2, will act as the assistant of Mr. Hildebrand in the fire department during the absence of Chief Brock at the convention of the engineers of the world at Chicago. The appearance of the detail of sixteen police officers, under the command of Sergeant Walsh, at the head of the procession yesterday, was very fine. Their perfect step, drill and line was the remark of every one. A still alarm was received at central fire hall at 9:55 yesterday morning, caused by steam from a sewer hole on the premises of D. Lundford, 292 Olmstead street, occupied by J. Dodge for a dwelling. A big scare over nothing. Mr. James F. Angell, of East Seventh street, returned with his bride, nee Miss Wakeman, of Utica, N. Y., last Saturday. They were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents in Utica about a week ago, since when they have been on a wedding tour. Wilbur F. James, the elegant gentleman who went through Third street merchants like a dose of salts, and got away with several thousand dollars worth of portable property by means of worthless checks a few months ago, has been heard from at Louisville, Kentucky. On the 3rd instant he swindled Wm. Kendrick & Sons, of the latter city, out of two diamonds valued at $1,500. He represented himself as connected with the big distillery house of Tarr & Co., of Lexington, and a forged draft on that firm in payment for the goods. The St. Paul merchants, whom he honored with a call, may seek consolation in the fact that he got away. Mr. I. Laird, New Baden, Robertson county, Texas, was cured of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, the wonderful pain annihilator. Fifty cents a bottle. The Murphys, father and son, speak to-night at the Central Presbyterian church. Turn out to-night and hear these grand temperers.

PERSONALS. Sheriff C. P. Stogey, of Moorhead, is at the Merchants. Count de Sturz, of Basle, Switzerland, is a guest at the Clarendon. H. A. Hartard E. S. Anderson, of Mason, are guests at the Merchants. W. L. Lightner and Wm. Deetz and wife, of Portland, Oregon, are guests at the Merchants. T. H. Tilston and daughter and J. F. Shuett, of Duluth, are guests at the Merchants. H. Cove, of England, and E. B. Williston, of Denver, were guests at the Metropolitan yesterday. Hon. Wm. McDougall and Louis N. McDougall, of Ottawa, Ontario, were at the Merchants yesterday. C. H. Schackel and C. S. Clarke, of the Illinois Central railroad, were guests at the Merchants yesterday. Dr. Ambler and wife, New York; A. D. Halsh, Webster, Dakota; W. F. Schrogge, La Crosse, were guests at the Clarendon yesterday. The following were guests at the Windsor yesterday: C. W. Voak, of Lisbon, and Job Voak, of Sargent, Dakota; W. H. Wulk and wife, Brainard; James McAfee and D. Flaherty, Shakopee. The following were guests at the Merchants yesterday: R. B. Griffith, Grand Forks; Dr. A. C. Ramsey, St. Cloud; Thomas Kelley, Winnetka; J. A. Johnson, Fargo; Alfred Myers, Montana; Jas. D. Wach, Ft. Benton; Charles Collins, Sioux City; J. H. Marshall, Council Bluffs; and Robert Mitchell, of New York. The Murphys, father and son, to-night.

What John Bright Thinks About It. The following letter from John Bright—one of the first advocates of free trade and himself a manufacturer—in reply to a gentleman who asked him if he did not think it better to return to protection as in America, is very much to the point and characteristic of the writer. "Sir: If you inquire into the condition of protected countries—the United States, France, Germany or Russia, you will find them suffering more than we are. You will find that in America there is short time worked, lower wages, and that bankruptcies and failures have largely increased of late years, whilst in this country failures have decreased of late years from year to year. I should say largely decreased. With some local exceptions now, working classes never were so well off during the time of our protective system as they are now. Mr. Blaine speaks for the protected manufacturers who have their hands in the nation's pocket, and are unwilling to take them out. He talks as foolishly as our Tory statesmen and landowners talked forty years ago, and with as little wisdom and truth. As to France, the 'most favorable nation' clause is as good as the treaty, and it springs from Mr. Cobden's treaty of 1860. Protection inflicts upon France the evils it inflicts everywhere. France is said to pay a bounty on her shipping amounting to near a million a year, and yet her mercantile marine is small, and it is to a large extent unemployed. France does not receive $40,000,000 of our money. We have a scarcity of money, and we send no gold abroad to pay for our imports. We tried protection up to 1848. After a long trial we condemned it. It will have no further trial in this country. I am astonished that you should be so unacquainted with the facts of the matter on which you have written to me. I think you know no more than an ordinary conservative country gentleman knew before 1848, or than some of them know now. Forgive my plain speaking, and believe me, respectfully yours. JOHN BRIGHT, One Ash, Rochdale.

Concerning the Seats in Rice Park. Yesterday's Globe contained an article referring to Rice park which allusion was made to the seats being occupied by men during the concert to the exclusion of ladies. The article referred to the police jurisdiction over the park and certain unjust strictures were made on Chief Clark, the writer of the article intimating that the seats could be cleared at pleasure for the accommodation of lady visitors. In conversation with Chief Clark on the subject yesterday the latter very justly objected to the article, the fact being that neither he nor any other city official would be at all justified in compelling male occupants to give up their seats as long as they conduct themselves in a gentlemanly manner. As a matter of fact the law expressly states that the park shall be free and open at all times to citizens, and it was in this spirit that it was dedicated to the public. It is true moreover, that any action on the contrary on the part of the police would be overt and contrary to law, and in ejecting any well behaved person from his seat the officer would be liable for damages. Furthermore, it is well known that the park has been kept free from disrespectful persons, and not a single instance of any lady being insulted has been reported for years. For this reason the explanation given, in justification of charges for which there was no foundation, and which were fetched and unjust when made.

A UNIQUE SERVICE. Plymouth Church at the Grand Opera House Sunday Morning. "Christ and the People," Dr. Dana's Theme.

The Plymouth people have been waiting with commendable patience for the completion of their sanctuary. But the delay seems to have promise of continuance a little longer. Hospitably accommodated in Unity church for the past month and more, they were yesterday without provision for a place of worship. After hasty arrangements, through Dr. Dana the Opera house was secured, and with necessarily imperfect notice, the regular morning service was held. A large audience was present, and all the exercises were deeply interesting. The double quartette made the service of song exceptionally good, and their anthem "Abraham's Prayers" was rendered most impressively. The responsive lesson and Gloria, and the congregational hymns added to the popular effectiveness of the service. Dr. Dana was at his best, and without notes spoke on the theme "Christ and the People." The following is a brief abstract: Mark 12:37. "And the common people heard him gladly." This is one of the note-worthy facts connected with Christ's life sometimes overlooked. It has great significance for our times, for it indicates what should still be the report concerning our Lord as he is presented to men. The text suggests, though delicately and indirectly, that there were class distinctions existing then, and that by the great body of the people, aside from those priestly officials, they were regarded as "the people." The love of earth has so long looked at them that it has grown Divine, and the thought of the age has so long studied them that it too has grown reverent. Christ's grand hold still is on the plain human heart, unmasked by fictitious influences. If we ask why this singular hearing, and following were accorded him of old and now, many are the answers that come to the lips, each of them constituting chapters of thought. For first CHRIST WAS OF THE PEOPLE. He was on his human side, the humblest of mortals. He was born amid lowly circumstances, a plain Galilean he lived, sharing the lot of a working man, and the scornful query was raised about him, "How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?" What sympathy this gave him with average humanity can hardly be suspected. He knew personally of its sorrows and hardships and stood closely related to every struggling man. No one can deeply move men who does not know them through an experience akin to their own. Only they can sympathize with others who have felt what they have felt, and Christ's sympathies were those of the universal man.

HE SPOKE FOR THE PEOPLE. Their rights against oppressive classes he maintained, and was fearless in rebuking the proud, the rich, those whose religion was only a form, and who made it a burden to the weak. He incurred the hostility of the priestly classes because he showed up their hypocrisy. He pled for a religion of love and mutual happiness, and antagonized in consequence those who made religion to consist in a routine ceremonial, purely external, and upheld only by man-made traditions. What consideration he demanded for the lowliest, and how plainly he laid all gifts of power under the divine law of service.

THE POWER OF HIS FELLOWSHIP was transforming. No influence is comparable to that which arises from friendly recognition and co-operative effort. This made the public feel he had in him, not a censor but a friend. It led the sinner to seek him, because he had only loving words for such. Association with him was a divine education, men after comparison with him were marvelously altered. His winsome life, his inspiring discourse acted like a spell upon those who came within the range of his fellowship. He was felt to be too good for him, nor separated from him by any exclusiveness of character or creed. The greatest benefactors of the race have wrought most through fellowship their gracious reforms. Howard, shared the prisoners' fare and punishments, and then spoke of their condition to a surprised and till then un pitying world. Octavia Hill moved down into the worst districts of London, that she might by example and contact win their decisions to a new life. Now Christ is to-day all that He was when the text was penned. If He has been misrepresented by clerical or ministerial, that ought not to affect the relations of the people to Him. He is still their friend. He calls to them where they live to follow and trust Him. He is on the side of the weak and poor. He gives in His gospel the principles of a socialism all can adopt with safety. He works in His teachings against monopolies and caste, and offers the peasant as much as He does the prince.

THE PEOPLE NEED CHRIST. Now as of old He is the inspirer of all noble virtues, the creator of the most abiding philanthropies. No man is so strong as he who has this patience and magnanimity. No one finds a sweeter solace for his sorrows than he who rests on Christ's love and gracious promises. The church of the latter is larger than any organization the cure for the injustices and hardships of the people is to be found in making Christ and His gospel supremely authoritative. What fraternity is like that which Christ creates, when he summons men away from their tyrannies and selfishness, and says impartially on all the duties of brotherhood. And can men realize their best liberty and largest happiness until they yield themselves to the leadership of Him who seeks to have them live as brethren, to bear one another's burdens, by love to serve each other. Him the people, who bring to human kind the revelation of a new social state, and creates in the breast of man the filial heart that will lift him out of despair and unbelief, into conscious sonship to the great Father, even God.

Try It Yourself. The proof of the pudding is not in chewing the string, but in having an opportunity to try the article yourself. A. P. Wilkes, Seven corners, John Boyden, 233 East Seventh street, F.
