Could it have been with malice aforethought that the Pioneer Press, in its announcement of the sale of the Tribune, used the word "founder" instead of "founder"? At any rate, whether intentional or an error simply and solely, the application is good. To shame the devil, it appears to us that the sale, for the good of the Tribune and the good of the public, was not made any too soon. For a religious weekly A. B. Nettleton would be a good man at the helm, but as manager and editor of a daily paper to live in it is N. G. (no good).

THE FLOUR MILLING INDUSTRY.

The Flour Mills for the Week at the Fall. The Northwestern Miller will publish the following resume of the milling business for the past week in its issue of Friday.

The platform presents a decidedly lively appearance this week. There will be only one mill out of the twenty-two that will not be able to report something of an output, while the majority will get in six days of quite steady work.

The total flour production of last week amounted to a total of 76,040 bbls averaging 13,773 bbls daily—against 32,575 bbls the preceding week. This week it will undoubtedly be swelled to over 100,000 bbls, and next week to even larger proportions.

There were two or more of the larger sized mills that did not start up until two or three days had been lost on the current week and there are some others that have hardly got fully regulated and prepared to strike out for heavy work; but by another week the mills, with ample power of wheat at their command, are expected to produce big results.

The market shows no improvement whatever, though old flour is undeniably strong. This term practically embraces the entire crop of wheat, and mills are not using a very large percentage of the wheat, several of them having run steadily on old up to date. Washburn, Crosby & Co. are running one mill well, making most excellent flour. The wheat on hand is not so bright as it was last year, hence milling results are more satisfactory. Prices show a lower range.

The following were the receipts at and shipments from Minneapolis for the weeks ending on the dates given:

An Odious Case. On Monday Mrs. Edith Cole instituted proceedings against her husband, Ismael Cole, in the district court, to answer a decree of absolute divorce.

The complaint alleges cruel and inhuman treatment as the grounds for the action. If the allegations sworn to by Mrs. Cole are true, her affinity is a brute. He is charged with clubbing and maltreating her until wedded life became an unendurable burden.

Now the hubby, who is quite an ordinary personage, retaliates. Yesterday at his instance the wife whom he had taken a solemn vow to love and protect, was arrested and dragged before the police court upon the charge of adultery. The complaint alleges that the defendant, Edith Cole, had formed an unlawful liaison with one E. Clark, with whom she was criminally intimate on the 14th of July last.

To the reporter the husband related a lengthy tale, replete with sensation and wickedness, stating that he had proof positive of the sinful deportment of his wife.

The woman is girlish in appearance, and gives her age as twenty-one, although the clerk observed with her in place of over sixty years. She was plainly dressed, and her appearance goes far towards confirming her statements. She says her husband compelled her to take in washing to help support him, and that he had variously abused her in place of the tender protection upon her to establish wicked relations with men for the purpose of gain, and when she refused him, he cruelly beat her.

Mrs. Cole was arraigned in the municipal court yesterday afternoon and her examination continued at the instance of E. Worth, counsel, Mr. Goss, until Friday, in $400. In default of the bail the defendant was taken to the county jail last night, but she will find sureties to-day.

Building Permits. Building Inspector Purdie issued building permits as follows yesterday: O. H. Armstrong, addition to wooden dwelling, northeast corner of Eighth avenue and Third street, cost, $900.

Chas. Hahn, two-story wooden dwelling and store, on southwest corner of Twenty-eighth avenue and Washington, cost, $500.

John Maddock, summer kitchen on Lincoln street and Twenty-second avenue, cost, $100.

C. A. Pillsbury & Co., one-story machine shop, opposite Pillsbury A mill, cost, $500.

THE LOYAL THIRD.

The Campaign Auspiciously Opened in the Third Ward by a Rousing Meeting.

John W. Willis, the Silver Toned Orator from St. Paul, Dilates upon the Mulligan Letters.

He Declares for Protection Only, and Speaks Argumentatively.

An Enthusiastic Cleveland and Hendricks Club Under Full Sail.

The Third ward Cleveland and Hendricks club is the largest and most enthusiastic one in the city. It held a weekly meeting at the Plymouth avenue headquarters last night, with a large attendance.

President Daniel Watt presided. John W. Willis, of St. Paul, who was the Democratic candidate for the office of attorney general, was the orator of the evening. His address was illustrated by numerous quotations, and was spiced by many appropriate and humorous anecdotes. The speaker was frequently interrupted by applause.

He opened his address with reading the famous Mulligan letters, and then went on to explain the relations of Mr. Blaine with the Little Rock railway, and also recited Blaine's conduct and political career, which was branded as most infamous. He went on to explain how Blaine who had promised "not to become a deadhead in the enterprise" really did become a dead head by sending his telegrams to Mr. Fisher marked "D. H.," and these telegrams related directly to the enterprise.

The telegram in question read: "I will be electing such a man to the highest office in your gift, but I cannot believe a sufficient number of conscientious voters can be found who will prostitute the nation by electing James G. Blaine to the presidency of the United States." Mr. Willis called attention to the present condition of the country. He read accounts of the sufferings of the laboring men in Ohio and Pennsylvania. The strikes in Pittsburg were related in eloquent words. The reason that the strikers were not successful is simply because the bottom has dropped out of business. From the strikes and the struggles of the laboring men to get a daily subsistence the speaker spoke of the wheat production. The farmers of the north-west are this year compelled to place their wheat in the market at much less than the actual cost of production. So the country is becoming impoverished. The trouble is the country is overburdened by taxation, which aggregates 45 per cent. The government has placed custom houses in every port and only to collect a forty-five per cent tariff on every article imported. The laboring men are compelled to pay this tax. The theory of the tariff is said to be to protect home manufactures. That is, it collects forty-five per cent. on foreign clothes, so that the home manufacturer can get just forty-five per cent. more than it is worth. They claim that the reason that these goods can be manufactured in foreign countries by pauper labor is such a small sum that the home manufacturer cannot compete with them.

Now this is a fair claim in its main essentials. England is the only European country that has free trade in vogue, and it is an uncontrollable fact that the labor in England is better paid than in any of the European countries. All other European governments impose a tariff, as all their statesmen and theorists claim, to protect them against the high priced labor in England. What an inconsistency! Now I claim with reason that the American manufacturer can successfully compete with any foreign manufacturers, because the American manufacturers employ men of brains. In this country one man does more and actually accomplishes more than four men can in European manufacturing.

Statistics were read to substantiate the claim that while labor wages had been advanced under the protective tariff, the cost of provisions and products have advanced far in advance the cost of provisions and products have advanced in the last ten years two per cent. more than has the wages of the laboring man. And here is the curse of the tariff system to the laboring men. There is no tariff upon the importation of laborers. We read in the press daily accounts of the places of laboring men who cannot furnish their wives and babes with bread sufficient to satisfy their hunger. We read that their places are taken by foreign laborers at reduced wages. In one of the Pennsylvania mines 150 men were arrested for formulating a strike and 150 Italians just imported took their places. The farmer is obliged to sell his wheat for 45 to 50 cents whereas he should get $1 or $1.25 a bushel, and a pall falls over our nation. The tariff system stares us out the face. This is because of the high protective tariff which we should have a tariff for revenue only. What has become of our once vast shipping industry, which gave employment to thousands of our laborers? What has become of the large navy yards which gave employment to thousands of shipbuilders? It is a thing of the past. We can no longer hear the music of the hammer and the saw. It is dead, killed by the system named a tariff for the production of American industries.

Like the Irishman on his horse, the only reason that Ben. Butler, who flashes up before you his diamonds and jewels, can give us for not fattening up on free trade, is that we are so weak we cannot carry any such a heavy burden. He who claims that Blaine will give us a vigorous foreign policy. By reading his record I will show you that his foreign policy is as vigorous as were his connection with the Mulligan letters honest. [Applause.] The little island of Ireland is in serious trouble. The sympathy of the civilized world was enlisted in behalf of the oppressed and patient inhabitants of that unfortunate island. Scores of American citizens were arrested and cast in prison at the instance of the English government. Mr. Lowell wrote Mr. Blaine in the case of Mr. Mahoney, who was arrested, and asked protection from this country, that in his opinion the American government could not interfere in case the subject had violated the English laws. Blaine refused to make a demand for the relief of a single American suspect in English prisons, but his successor without hesitation made the demand, and the prison doors were thrown open forthwith and each and every suspect walked out a free man. The Irish were not deceived by the appeal made by the Republican party. They are naturally and truly Democrats. The Republican camp has been open to them for years but they have found themselves more comfortably situated in the Democratic camp. A minister visiting a dying parson and said, "You are going to a happier and better world. Are you not willing and anxious to go?" The dying man replied in a doleful voice, "Oh, yes, I am ready to go, but I had rather stay where I am better acquainted." This is the case with our Irish citizens. They had rather stay in the Democratic camp where they are better acquainted. A lady who was a devout spiritist lost her husband. She called up his spirit one day and asked: "John, can you hear me?" Three raps, signified in the affirmative. "Are you happy then in this world?" "Yes," was the reply. "Where are you, John?" "In hell," rejoined the spirit of the departed.

Now the question arises, will the Irish be happy in hell with Blaine? [Cheers.] At this point the speaker paid a glowing tribute to the National Democratic ticket.

Against political oppression, political jobbery and race-hatred, we have nominated for

THE THREE LANKS.

Yesterday's session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge was devoted principally to either matter of no public importance or to matter which they do not wish to be made public.

The morning session was called to order at 9 o'clock and the first business transacted was the presenting of new bills and ordering them printed.

The matter of appeals was taken up and discussed at length. One appeal came from Ohio and was as follows:

A law was passed which allowed a member of twenty-five years' continuous membership to present his name for membership in another lodge without previously withdrawing from his old lodge. Under that rule an Ohio member presented his application for membership, and was elected to the new lodge. He then came on his withdrawal card from the former lodge, after which, but prior to the filing thereof in the new lodge, his action on his admission was rescinded. This left him without membership. The case was submitted to the Grand Lodge of Ohio, which sustained the action of the lodge to which application for membership was made. Owing to the importance of this question, it was recommended to-day to the committee and will be further considered hereafter.

The matter which was discussed was a case where a member died who was in arrears for dues to the amount of two cents, which was not known to the wife of the deceased, who always paid her husband's dues. The wife was assisted in her view of the case and was allowed to pay the dues.

The session adjourned at two o'clock until eight o'clock in the evening.

IN THE EVENING. Routine business occupied the attention of the lodge exclusively. Reports and appeals were heard, but nothing of public interest transpired.
