TEN LIVES LOST.

[Special Telegram to the Globe.]

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—This morning about 7 o'clock an accident occurred at the temporary crib of the new Hyde Park Water works, which resulted in the loss of ten lives. For some time past a gang of fourteen men have been engaged upon the new crib that is being constructed for the Hyde Park Water works about a mile from Chattenham Beach. At the mouth of the tunnel which leads to the shore and above the crib had been constructed a large platform about forty feet square supported by poles which were bound together by heavy chains. Upon this platform had been built a small cabin, in which the men slept and had their meals they having lived there for the past three weeks. The platform was supported by heavy timbers resting on the piles. This morning about 5 o'clock the sea became so heavy that portions of the platform washed away. The men awoke about 5:30 and found the spray with every wave washing the sides of their crib. They were not much alarmed, and proceeded to get their breakfast. The meal was eaten and preparations made for the day's work. The sea in the mean time ran higher and higher, and about 7 o'clock a huge wave struck the cabin, tearing it from its foundation and carrying it into the raging water.

Then followed a scene of the most harrowing description. Fourteen men were struggling in the debris of the building, and in a short time not a vestige of the wreck was visible. Twelve of the men succeeded in climbing upon the huge stringers that held the piles together and lying face down with their arms around the beam they awaited the arrival of assistance. Every moment increased their danger, and the waves with terrible force, tore them one by one from the timbers until only eight remained. These, with the sight of the assistance that was coming in the shape of the life saving crew of the Chicago station, clung with bleeding hands and waited.

In the meantime on the shore everything was being done for their rescue. The crew of the Chicago life saving station had put off with full sail and made for the scene of the accident. They arrived about 11 o'clock, and when they were within throwing distance a line was made fast by the almost drowning men to the timbers and made tight from the boat. Then each shivering man, with uncertain grasp, clutched the rope and hand over hand worked his way toward the boat through the surf. Out of eight men who made the attempt only four lived to tell the tale of the terrible hours that they had spent on the spars. The boat, which was then about a mile from shore, gave way, and in twenty minutes was landed safe on the shore, where hundreds of people awaited their rescue. Those who were saved from a watery grave are:

Peter Thies, Cook.
Martin Nelson, Laborer.
Hans Christianson, driver.
Robert Christianson, laborer.
Those lost are:
Lewis Ainsworth, assistant boss.
Andrew Ainsworth, laborer.
Will Han, superintendent.
K. Corbyn, boss.
Charles Manski, laborer.
Chas. Folk, mason.
D. Smith, laborer.
Otto Monocofski, laborer.
William Monocofski, laborer.
Klaus Clanson, laborer.

When the lifeboat, manned by as gallant a crew as ever rode the waves, drew near the shore, a crowd of men rushed into the water and almost lifted the craft upon the sand.

The cook, Peter Thies, who was the least affected by intense cold and exposure, told the following graphic story:

"This morning about 5 o'clock I got up to get breakfast for the fourteen men who constituted the party. After the meal was prepared we sat down to eat. Before this I noticed the sea was running at a terrible gale rate, but none of us dreamed of the terrible thing that was to befall us before long. The meal finished, I went into a back room, which was partitioned off, and began washing dishes. It was then about 7 o'clock. I had finished my work and was just about to go out when I heard a loud crack, and in a moment the building in which I stood careened and I was in the water surrounded by my companions, who struggled to free themselves from the timbers. I climbed upon one of the stringers and helped to get several others out. Then began a scene which I hope never to see again. Every wave that came struck us with such force that the flesh was torn from our hands, and we saw several of the poor men yield to the terrible power and loosen their hold. When we first reached the water, Bosses Han and Corbyn grasped a large timber and were washed away. They may have reached the shore in safety. When we first saw the life boat about half a mile away new hope was given us, and the eight then on the timbers hung on until a line was thrown and we tried our luck at reaching the boat. Only four of us were successful, and a man more

CLOTHING.

The Man Who Reads

Our advertisements always obtain information that, in a pecuniary sense, is valuable to him. For instance, we are selling a line of Men's Grey Webster Cassimere S. B. Sack Suits at $15. The Lot of those suits is 6801. We were induced to advertise them from the fact that we noticed one of these suits (it was not made as well as ours) on a gentleman in our store. We asked him where he bought it. In reply, he told us at a store where they were selling out, and he paid $20 for it. We showed him our suit, marked $15, and he asked us, in a joking way, "if we paid anything for our goods?" This is a fact, and we are ready to give the name of the gentleman, and his word is never doubted.

It is safer to buy from a house that WILL PROTECT YOU ON GOODS AND PRICES, rather than buy where you get no such guarantee.

thankful for his life than myself cannot be found."

There is a rumor current this afternoon that one of the ten men reported to be lost had been rescued. He had clung to a timber and was driven ashore near South Chicago. The men who were rescued say that the structure was not considered safe and that they had protested against staying over night, but they had been assured that it was perfectly secure and that water would never reach it.

Hans Christenson, one of the survivors, told the story of the terrible night, as he sat toasting his feet in the kitchen of the chief engineer's house.

"When the storm came up we had no fear for our safety, but when the storm increased we began to think we were doomed. About daylight, when the waves were rolling against the sides of the shanty, we left and had just got out when a huge billow struck it broadside and swept it off. We clung to the chains as best we could, but it was hard work. After Han and Corbyn were carried off twice the waves took me off, but I hung on to the chains and pulled myself up again and stayed until the life boat came and took us off."
