

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

He Gave Her Up. Dwell my lady in a castle high. Where I, a knight, who heard her cry, & knew for me arose a sigh, & were these ye dates of old, Despite ye feudal sword & lance, My steed shold'nt' her case mentrance, & with grimme death I'd take my chance & all her warriors bolde.

But her fortress is of modern bricks, & I'm a modern swaine love sick; My weapon's but a walke-stick; I'm daunted by her mother. So, lyke a lover out of date, Thus borne by centuries too late, I yield myself to bitter fate, & her—untoe another.

Hughson, daughter of the gentleman above named. The nuptial ceremony was enacted by Rev. W. H. Harrington, of this city, according to the brief but impressive ritual of his denomination. Only the relatives and immediate friends of the two families were present. After partaking of an elegant and sumptuous repast the happy couple, accompanied by the Stillwater guests—consisting of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Easton, Mr. and Mrs. Will E. Easton and Ned, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Masterman and Miss Gertrude L. Easton—returned to this city by the 9 o'clock train, replying to the kind wishes of the friends. Third street, where the bride and groom will occupy comfortably equipped apartments during the coming winter. Although no formal invitations were extended, yet the social standing of the wedded couple in their respective localities, was such that this important event in their young lives could not be allowed to pass without suitable recognition, and accordingly they were thoughtfully and kindly remembered, by their many warm friends in this city and St. Paul. The congratulations were exceedingly numerous, appropriate, unique, useful and elegant. The most valuable and highly prized as any, were from "friends in the office." A gorgeous clock with mechanical illumination—all done in shining brass; many cases of solid silverware, and highly wrought and richly caparisoned furniture, are among the more prominent of the many gifts bestowed. The happily united pair commence life in their new sphere, under the most favorable auspices, surrounded by hosts of friends, and followed by the best wishes of all.

Turner Hall Concert.

The sixth series of Sunday evening concerts, at Turner hall, will commence next Sunday evening, Oct. 19. The orchestra is again increased this season, and will be under the personal direction of Mr. George Seibert. Mr. Seibert is keenly alive to the requirements of the public, and is continually striving to meet them by presenting such an orchestra and such a grade of music as will be acceptable and within the reach of the instruments that the business of the city will sustain. Musicians cannot live on wind, and their wives and children have to be clothed the same as those of other men. All of which costs money. To get this music the orchestra must have money. To say that St. Paul ought to have and must have an orchestra of sixty men when there is not business enough to support more than twenty-five is to say we will ruin and bankrupt instrumental music in St. Paul. If this city cannot give an orchestra of more than twenty-five men a support she must be satisfied with that number till she can do better. Again, a small orchestra is limited as to the music it can handle. It cannot present the music that sixty performers can, and is compelled to limit itself to the selections that are within the scope of the number of instruments employed. The director who would attempt music that is out of the reach of the instruments under his direction would demonstrate his incompetency. It is largely, and almost wholly owing to Mr. Seibert's level head, good judgment and abundant patience and industry that we have as good an orchestra as we have. He is gradually introducing new musicians and new instruments. Six years ago he commenced these concerts with ten musicians. At the next concert he will present an orchestra of twenty-five. This demonstrates what he has accomplished, and gives evidence of further improvement in the future. The following is a list of the instruments: Three sets of first violins, three second violins, two violas, one cello, two basses, two flutes, two oboes, two clarinets, two French horns, two cornets, two trombones, one fagott, timpani D drum. This orchestra will undoubtedly do the best work that has ever been given at these concerts. The larger number of instruments will give a larger scope to the selections, and we have no doubt the efforts of Mr. Seibert and his orchestra will be duly appreciated and liberally patronized.

Miss Mabel Davidson.

This young lady is creating quite a sensation wherever she goes by her roller skating, and engagements are coming in upon her at a rapid rate. She has engagements for two weeks ahead. She appears at Morris tomorrow, at Browns Valley Tuesday and Wednesday, at Benson Thursday, Willmar Friday and Litchfield Saturday. The Grand Forks Plaindealer of the 3d inst. speaks of her as follows:

Miss Mabel Davidson was greeted at the rink last night with a very large audience, who had assembled to see her perform. She surprised even the most sanguine. Her skating was simply magnificent, equal in all respects to Prof. Crocker. She skated all the figures that he did, and many others that he did not. It is a constant surprise to every one who watches her glide over the glossy surface of the rink floor so gracefully how one so young could possibly become so proficient. Many who saw her last night will not forget the pleasure of seeing her again to-night in her new novel figures, and all who have not seen her certainly do not wish to miss her exhibition of gracefulness.

They Told Her Out.

She went to the roller skating rink, And put the rollers on; A strap or two about her shoe, And then she's off and gone. She slid, she glided, she glid, she glode, Unheld by fear or fetter, But at last the gentle maid was "thrown," And the roller skates upped her.
