Northern Notes. In Hamlin county eight geese an hour is regarded as a fair average for hunters.

The Reporter looks up $75,000 of improvements in Webster, in Day county, this season.

The Chamberlain hose company have challenged the Sioux City hose company to run 800 yards for $200, at Mitchell, Nov. 8.

The Catholic fair at Fargo is in good running order this week, and promises to gather scrip for the church purse to a large extent.

It is expected that the Evening News at Moorhead will suspend after election, but there should be enterprise enough to sustain it and may prove to be.

Mrs. Curtis, who has a claim near Chamberlain, has been held to the grand jury in $100 on charge of starting a prairie fire which did a good deal of damage.

In Moody county a majority of the Republicans are Norwegians, and yet no one of them was nominated on the county ticket, which will probably be beaten.

The cheapness of vegetables in Dakota will be seen in this instance: Thomas Fietler, in Moody county, this season raised 10,000 bushels of fine turnips on soil at an expense of only $3, besides sowing them.

J. M. Brundage, in Kidder county, made affidavit that his fifty acres of wheat threshed thirty-eight bushels to the acre. It was all No. 1 hard, and such yields pay at the lowest prices.

There is a large Scotch population at Dell Rapids, and many of the young men are going to Scotland this winter to select wives. They propose to supply their young friends for a moderate commission.

An advertiser of a farm in Pembina county, adds this as a leading attraction: "Come some of you bachelors and take this, for in addition to the many good qualities of the farm there are young ladies living all around the neighborhood."

The Jerome marbled hunting party from Massachusetts spent a day in Fargo on their homeward route, and had themselves and gorgeous carriages and traps, with their ladies and hunting trophies.

Rev. F. M. Wood, the Presbyterian superintendent of missions of north Dakota, claims that he has established eleven churches in the north in the past six months. Some paper had it five, and the gentleman should have credited.

Citizens of Redfield have made bond to give seven and one-half acres of land and erect a handsome court house thereon if the people will vote it the county seat next week. The cost of that is estimated at $10,000 building. Spink is a large, fine county.

Stark county, out in the neighborhood of the Bad Lands, claims to have earned the ribbons on vegetables. Mr. Lennerville has grown a seven pound potato on soil and a cabbage weighing fifty pounds. It would be an objection to the county if these articles are in the habit of growing so inconveniently large.

The editor of the Grand Rapids Journal, who is a man of fine sensibilities, thinks the coldness of the winters is the great incentive to matrimony, which is said to be almost an epidemic at present. He would not explain the matter, but says: "Novelists tell of marriages in blooming May, blushing June and rose crowned August, but the Dakota almanac should read after the autumnal equinox: 'If you are not married by this time, marry at once!'"

There is a red hot fight in Brule county over the county seat, between Chamberlain and Kimball. Pitkwan would take it as a compromise, but the main fight lies between the other two points. Each charges the other with all sorts of doings not lovely and of good report, such as shipping beer by the keg to voters and giving away town lots.

There is hardly anything more trying to legislators and voters than a county seat fight. About half of the counties have them on hand or in prospect.

Political Scrap. A big fight has sprung up against Pettigrew for the legislature in the Sioux Falls district, and it is running run to election to-day against him. It is hardly likely that he can be elected, however. It is noticeable that the bitterest opposition has sprung up in each district to the old wheel horses, La Moure, Wahler, Steele, Richardson, Nicholls, and others, are being run down by guerrillas. But they are all hard men to beat.

Canton appreciates honors bestowed upon its citizens. It ovated Gifford, and last week when O. E. Rea was nominated by the Democrats for the council, all parties turned out with the band and gave him a grand ovation. He is a young man, bright and popular, several times a county officer for the Republicans, and will make an admirable member of the legislature.

Hon. J. N. Wilson spent a day in Fargo this week and at night a large audience greeted him and the first straight out, true blue Democratic meeting ever held in Fargo was had. Col. Guttriph, the terse wit and famous singer, introduced the meeting with a crisp, spicy speech. Mr. Wilson made an excellent impression in his short speech and struck a happy note. He reported the Democrats organizing all over the territory, as never before. The trouble had been that too many of them had been posing as Republicans for revenue, Col. J. D. Benton of Fargo, closed the meeting with an impressive exhortation, and hit several nails on the head. It was a fine success—the meeting and speeches.

W. B. Locklin, who was nominated for the legislature as the exponent of the new county scheme, has become alarmed and publishes a card apparently pledging himself to oppose the measure. He is a lawyer, however, and it is thought leaves room to crawl back through technicalities. It is clear of the class who, when in office, draw their pay with great ability.

The Aberdeen Pioneer, whose editor was assaulted by Judge Spence on account of a newspaper attack, reports that the judge, who was a candidate for probate judge, skipped out in female attire, to escape indignities for assault with intent to kill. Col. Drake, the editor, appears from his own concessions, to be much the better man of the two, and able to disarm and floor Spence.

A convention in Judge Gifford's legislative district instructed its members to vote against any appropriation for the benefit of the capitalist at Bismarck. If glibness and chairs are needed for the members they will have to furnish them under this instruction, as Bismarck will not furnish the rooms of course.

Republican papers are urging all who have ever worn that party name in Dakota to vote and be sure to vote for Judge Gifford, in order to show the country that this will make the strongest Republican state in the Union. Simply as partisans there is nothing unusual in such advice, but under the peculiar circumstances it is the worst of policy. The territory asks of congress division and the admission of one state at once and a second at an early day. The Republicans in congress are committed to these measures and cannot recede. The present congress has seventy-eight Democratic majority.

The congress cannot possibly reduce this northern one-half. The senate will for years remain about equally divided. The Democratic majority will be far more likely a grant the measure desired if there is a strong Democratic vote in Dakota. As a result of policy it would be good for the friends of division to vote for Wilson for congress. His election is not expected, and it will be no damage to the Republicans to give him a big vote.

A Woman's Bill. The editor of the Webster Reporter claims

FRONTIER WEAPONS.

The Cowboy's Taste for First Class Pocket Artillery—The Sheriff's Shotgun.

It was in El Paso the other day, having gone up in the stage, as the line between the Cruces and El Paso is washed out. While I was on the stage, I dropped into a large store on El Paso street, which enjoys the reputation of selling more arms than any other house in the city.

While your correspondent was inspecting the glittering array of pistols of all kinds which filled half a dozen show cases. A young fellow of about 23 entered. He was dressed in approved frontier style, sombrero it would take three days to walk round the rim of, white handkerchief tied loosely around the neck, blue shirt, pants stuck in his boots, and large Mexican spurs upon his heels, jingling as he walked. He wished to buy a "gun," in the expressiveness and laconic tongue of the frontier a "gun" is a revolver, a rifle is called by the name of the maker, and the weapon of the sportsman, uncurtailed of its fair proportions, is known as a shotgun.

Selected, so that your correspondent solemnly mounted 45-caliber revolver, the clerk said: "How would you like this? It is the newest thing out—a double-action forty-five."

"Ain't worth a row of beans. No man 'cept underfoot wants that kind of a thing. Give me an old reliable all the time. Ye see, a man that's used to the old style is apt to get fooled—not pull her off in time—and then he'll be laid out colder 'n a wedge."

"He was handed out a single action of the same make, which he carefully examined before he proceeded to cock and examine the pistol around his forefinger and cocking and pressing the trigger the moment the butt came into the palm of his hand. After some little "chick" about the price the weapon was paid for and the clerk returned to the counter.

"There are few men," observed the clerk as his customer left, "that can do that. I have been ten years on the southwest frontier, among the worst classes, and don't know more than half a dozen. 'Bill the clerk' could do it. He is a former sheriff of Lincoln county; so can Dan 'Buck' deputy sheriff of Deming. Curly Bill could do it the best of the lot, and that is how he killed Sheriff Will at Tombstone."

A TRACHEUS TRICK. "How was that?" queried the correspondent.

"Well, you see, Curly Bill was trying to paint the town red, and White headed it, and going up to him covered him with his six-shooter and told him he had got to give up his gun. Bill handed the gun out but first, but kept his finger inside the guard, and as the sheriff turned to leave he gave it that peculiar twist you've seen, turned her loose, and the sheriff passed in his checks."

"Do you sell many of the bull-dog pistols?"

"Yes. They are chiefly bought by railroad laborers, and some of the men who are used to the country either by hand or on horse or carry a 44 or 45 in a shoulder scabbard."

"What is that?"

"Well, it is a pistol scabbard with a strap passing over the right shoulder and supports the pistol in a double-barreled fashion. It enables you to draw while a man is thinking that you are only looking for your handkerchief. The bull-dog is a poor pistol, shoots wild and can't be depended upon for over fifteen feet. The great trouble with all these pistols is that they have a heavy trigger. The boys get over this by having the catch filed down. The pistol of the cowboy is as fine as the trigger as were the hair triggers of the old dueling days."

A SPECIAL WEAPON. "I want to show you a kind of shotgun that has a limited use," continued the clerk, and he led the way to the back of the store where about half a dozen double-barreled shotguns were standing in a rack. They had all been cut off short, the barrels being only about two feet in length, but otherwise they were perfect.

"The gun is a prime favorite with sheriffs, deputy sheriffs, and other law-abiding officers of the law generally, and when they get the drop on you with one of them it's a case of throw up your hands, no matter how much sand you may have. They are very handy, and you can take away under a buggy seat with ease. Well, Fargo men, they all carry them, and at a short range they beat rifles and six-shooters all to hades. It was armed with one of them that Horn, who was deputy sheriff at Lordsburg, took in Curly Bill, and the other day Sheriff Horn and Horn had strolled out of the corral door-post. As Bill rode out he covered him and called to him to 'throw up his hands.' Bill only glanced at the weapon and up went his hands. Had it been a six-shooter he would have taken to his heels, but foot went and rode through the dining room in the railroad hotel at Deming flourishing his pistol and frightened the lady passengers bound nearly into fits. Dan Tucker found the fellow up the street, covered him with his revolver, and the fellow, who was a idiot made a motion for his six-shooter. Dan filled him chuck full of buckshot. He failed to get there El and now peacefully sleeps beneath the daisies."

BUT FEW ACCIDENTS. "I notice that you have few accidents from firearms in the west than we have in the east, which, considering that every man carries a 'gun,' seems extraordinary."

"It is not," the men who are always handling firearms in the west, "but you are careful with them. I'd like to see you point a pistol or shotgun at a cowboy, and he'd make you drop it so quick 't would make your head swim. There used to be a good many accidents, though, a few years ago, when the cowboy was in the habit of carrying the full six loads in their guns, and trusting to the safety catch to avoid any danger. Sure as the gun dropped on the ground, off she went. A hunter got shot this way. He nearly ever lunge carries one chamber empty. One day he was out with a party of much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in weight of 48 lbs. Call at Lambie & Bethune's drug store and get a trial bottle of this certain cure for all lung diseases. Large bottles $1.00.

Teacup Fortune Telling. I have a friend who is quite renowned for her success as a fortune teller through her skill in shaking and tapping a teacup until the grounds or tea leaves in the bottom of the teacup assume in a rude way certain shapes or forms representing people, animals and various other images which she professes to understand as referring in some way to the person whose fortune she happens to be telling at the time. I was present one when she told the fortune of a young lady. The prophecy and the method of making it seemed to me to be very vague; but the gist of it all was that in a short time a young gentleman of extremely prepossessing appearance would arrive, and that he was, in unexplained way, to exert a powerful influence on the future prospects of the young lady. Pondering this forecast, I was in the cup to warrant such a forecast. I obtained possession of the teacup, and I saw that the leaves had assumed a form which with a little aid of the imagination could be made to represent a very spare, delicate and altogether delicate young man. With the aid of a teaspoon, and using a few other grounds of leaves that were lying on the bottom of the cup, I quickly changed the young man into a disagreeable looking fellow, with a big grumpy nose, a thin mustache, and a pair of diabolical looking bulldogs. Then I awaited the result. Presently the young lady whose fortune had been told, took up the cup, with a flush of pleasure to examine the contents. "Well, that does not seem to be so good as anything I have heard of," she said in a plain, unassuming way. "What a horrid old fellow!" Then there was a great commotion, which was only quelled when I acknowledged my guilt. But I had learned my lesson, and was with a little management, and a few more grounds of leaves, kind could be made in a tea cup.—November 1st, Nicholas.

NICKNAMES OF GENERALS.

One Way in Which Soldiers Express Their Estimate of Their Leaders.

"Every general of prominence had a nickname bestowed upon him by his troops," says a writer in the Century. "Some of these nicknames were of a sarcastic nature, but usually indicated the confidence of the men in their leaders or their admiration for them. Gen. Grant was commonly known over the watch-towers in the army of the Potomac as 'Old United States,' from the initials of his name, but sometimes he was called 'Old Three Stars,' that number indicating his rank as lieutenant-general. McClellan was endeared to his army as 'Little Mac,' Meade, who wore spectacles, was delighted to learn that the soldiers had named him 'Four-Eyed George,' for he knew it was not intended as a reproach. Burnside, the colonel of the 1st Rhode Island regiment, rose to the dignity of 'Rhody' when he became a general. 'Hooker' never liked the sobriquet of 'Fighting Joe,' though he always lived up to it during his career in the field. Pope was sardonic with the title of 'Saddle-Bag John,' in memory of his famous order about headquarters being changed to 'Pack up your traps and get ready to move your headquarters moved pretty suddenly. Sigel, the German general, was known in the other corps as 'Dutchy.' Hancock won the brevet of 'Superb' from a remark made by Gen. Meade at Gettysburg, when the 2d corps repulsed Longstreet's men. Humphrey, being a distinguished engineer, was invariably styled 'Old Mathematics.' The Pennsylvania reserves used to call Crawford 'Physica,' being a surgeon at the beginning of his military career. Logan, with his black hair and prominent nose, was called 'Black Jack' with his men. Sheridan, the cavalry leader, was 'Little Phil,' and Sherman's troops spoke of him as 'Old Tecumseh.' The sterling nature and steadfast purpose of Thomas earned for him the significant and familiar name of 'Old Reliable.' Alexander McDowell Cooke like Hooker, was called 'Fighting' McCook. The New York city regiments in the 5th corps changed Sigel to 'Skysay.' Halleck was derisively nicknamed 'Old Brains,' and Rosecrans had his name shortened to 'Rosey' by the soldiers. 'Louis' to the soldiers under his command; he was a great favorite for his fighting qualities, and the soldiers adopted the inappropriate name for want of a better. Kearney, who had left an arm in Mexico, was invariably known as 'One-Armed Phil.' Butler was styled 'Cockeye,' for obvious reasons. Kilpatrick was nicknamed 'Kill,' while Custer was called 'Ringlets,' on account of his long, flowing curls; and so the catalogue might be prolonged indefinitely.

Among the nicknames of families, nicknames were not so common as with the federals. The soldiers of the army of northern Virginia usually spoke of Gen. Lee as 'Bob Lee.' Little Mahone was best known as 'Skin and Bone.' Early was called 'Bad Old Man,' and Jackson will live in history as 'Stonewall.'
