DAKOTA & MONTANA. Collected and Forwarded by Telegraph to the Daily Globe.

Fargo Special Telegrams November 4 to the St. Paul Globe. Northwestern Notes. The new Catholic church at Medora was consecrated last Sunday by Father Martin, of Medora.

A real estate man at Lisbon the past week asked $200 on his faith in the election of Cleveland. The Aurora Times says: A great deal of hay will be used for fuel this winter, it being considered by many a good substitute for coal, and much cheaper.

Greatly to their surprise, some of the regular candidates in this county now have occasion to say: "Since I am soon done for, the wonder is what in the dickens was I begun for!" One of the sights at Medora is the burning coal field near that place. Just at the edge of the mountains can be seen this great bed of fire, working continually until the bed of ashes is left behind in the shape of bad lands.

This local item, found in a south Dakota paper, failed to reach the Fargo papers, and is perhaps wrongly located: A sight in Fargo recently was a band of cow boys with guns, knives, revolvers, and 1,500 head of cattle.

Lisbon Herald: Wheat raising still appears to be profitable in Ransom county, even though the price is low. Mrs. A. Bagrun, in township 135, range 7, raised 970 bushels of No. 1 hard from twenty-two acres of land broken last year.

The county of Hand has just recorded its second suicide, in the person of B. A. Ayer, a respected gentleman who was suffering from Bright's disease and demented. The first was a young man by the name of Macomber, who had committed a murder.

Judge Francis holds his first term of court in the district at Bismarck, Nov. 11. The counties in the district are: Burleigh, Emmons, McLean, Stevens, Sheridan, Wells, DeSmet, McHenry, Rolla, Teton, Blaine, Wynn, Renville, Mountrail, Flannery and Buford.

At social gatherings in some of the newer districts the favorite entertainment of the young men and ladies is to blow soap bubbles through clay pipes, when two sent up by lovers meet in the air, it is regarded as an excellent augury. There are numerous other features that interest the romantic participants.

The Blunt Times says: Jas. Ketterly, of LeBeau, when informed that people doubted his having made sugar from box-elder, says there is no ground for the doubt. He made ten gallons from fifty trees, boiling his sap over an ordinary cooking stove. He will put in a regular evaporator next spring to make sugar and syrup from his 600 native trees.

The young men of Blunt are wildly enthusiastic over the grace and beauty of the broom brigade of the place that has recently given public exhibitions. It is stated that they go through the evolutions like veteran soldiers. There are twenty-six of them, twelve brunettes and fourteen blondes, each class being in rank by themselves. They are the prettiest and best formed young ladies in town, and half of them are really handsome.

This item has renewed illustration in the county just now: "The baby has got a new tooth, but the old lady is laid up with a cold in the head," remarked a gentleman to a seated candidate. "What do I care?" was the reply. "Well," said the gentleman, "before election, I would take my medicine and ask how my family was coming on, and I've been hunting you all over town to tell you, and that's the way you talk to me. But it don't make any difference, I voted for the other candidate, anyhow."

The Cooperstown Courier, in noting the passage through the town of a delegation of Indians, says: "The delegation in civilized ways in this: No, they drove up, Blue Horn and family, in a Milburn wagon with a pair of horses attached; Heart of Oak with his family in a platform spring—simply inquired the price of votes, smiled sadly and passed on to the lake to assist in the election Nov. 4th, having left the Sisseton reservation about the 1st inst., where they had been attending missionary services."

Judge Adams, of the Courier, says of the productions of Griggs county: Wm. Glass' potato, which is a fair sample of a hundred bushels, weighs five pounds, less two ounces; and yet Pennsylvania is alive with excitement over one little tuber which weighs three pounds one and one-quarter ounces. The poor deluded clay-eaters are going to send the mealy thing to New Orleans. Wm. McCulloch, of Lake Jessie, brings in one tuber which weighs three pounds, and apologizes for bringing in a little thing, and explains that his buggy was loaded down with other truck.

The Walsh Times is puzzled over so plain a matter as this: A granger was so unfortunate as to reach a Walsh county (not Grant) elevator after the shades of night began to fall. He was told by the competent and experienced youth who has been selected by the wheat growers of Minneapolis to rule and ruin the farmers of the northwest that he should not go to the elevator, as it was a little lighter, so he could see the team and driver, he might be able to grade the load higher. No public notice has been given yet as to what kind of team or what kind of clothes a man should have.

H. S. Harcourt, the veteran journalist and general rustler, who some time since sold out the Lisbon Clipper, having been enjoined by the court from entering anything to do with the newspaper business, is not being able to shake off entirely the fascination of the life long vocation for him, has engaged a room adjoining the office of the new paper the Lisbon Herald and opened up in the rush for Dakota dirt he almost unconsciously accuses him of hermiting items into the paper, as he would be a newspaper man, and when he is absent the newspaper devil steals them and they are run in the paper just as it written for it. Mr. Harcourt complains that this puts him in a doubtful situation in relation to the entering anything to do with the newspaper business. Much injustice is evidently being done him.

According to the reports received by the St. Albans Herald, the late Mrs. Ely, who was a very strong grip on the throat of the great rustler, is now in the hospital. Two of the moral and religious lights of Lisbon recently came to Fargo on alleged business, and met at their hotel at night an early hour each took a room and became very sleepy. Both stated their purpose to at once retire to bed, and bid each other good night and pleasant dreams. About the midnight hour the one, having made the rounds of various resorts of hilarity, entered a house where virtue has no recognition, and among the first objects observed was his good and staid townsmen interspersed with bottles, glasses and a very low table. There was a mutual astonishment at the remarkable coincidence, and both concluded to forget for the night their home standing as pillars of the church.

One of the coincidences that follow even the truly good was observed recently. Two of the moral and religious lights of Lisbon recently came to Fargo on alleged business, and met at their hotel at night an early hour each took a room and became very sleepy. Kind Hearted. "Well, which party do you sympathize with?" "Why, the one that gets beaten, of course. The other doesn't need any sympathy."

Indian Training School. The Pierre Press says: It may not be generally known, but it is expected to have an Indian training school established shortly on a portion of Pierre University grounds.

A committee composed of gentlemen deeply and specially interested in the work among the Indians, two of the committee belonging in Montana, recommended that the proposed institution be put in the hands of the trustees of Pierre University, and the synd of Dakota endorsed the report. The plan is to give the Indians their elementary training in that school necessary to enter the lowest preparatory class in the college, and to admit them fully into the main institution. It is believed that no difficulty will be experienced either in securing a good building for that special purpose or funds to maintain the teachers necessary. The Indian ministers belonging to the Presbyterian church connected with Synod of Dakota and their reports of church work was one of the most interesting features of the meeting of that body at Huron two weeks ago.

SUICIDE AND SLEEPLESSNESS. Choral, Trombone and Other Quieting Draughts Discussed, with Their Effects. [The Lancet.] The circumstances attending the death of the Dean of Bangor, albeit they are entirely distressing, present no novel features, reverend gentleman was a man of considerable intellectual "power," which is the same thing as saying that he was constitutionally liable to intervals of mental depression. All highly intellectual men are exposed to this evil. A pendulum will always swing just as far in one direction as it does in the other. Great power of mind implies also great weakness under certain conditions. The marvel is not that great minds occasionally become deranged, but that they so often escape derangement. Sleeplessness means not merely unrest, but starvation of the cerebrum. The brain cannot recuperate, or, in other words, it cannot rest. Physiologically, recuperation and rest are the same thing. Sleep is simply physiological rest.

The only cause for regret in these cases is that the burden should ever be committed of supposing that a stupefying drug which throws the brain into a condition that mimics and buries sleep can do good. It is deceptive to give narcotics to a case of this type. The stupor simply masks the danger. Better far let the insomniac patient exhaust himself than stupefy him. Chloral, bromide, and the rest of the poisons that produce a semblance of sleep are so many snares in such cases. Sleeplessness is a malady of the most formidable character, but it is not to be treated by intoxicating the organ upon which the stress of trouble falls. Suicide, which occurs at the very outset of the derangement, and is apt to appear a sane act, is the logical result of a failure of courage, and not of want of sleep. It is curious to note how a sleepless patient will set to work with all the calmness or forthrightness of intelligent sanity to compass his death. He is not insane in any technical sense. He has no delusion. He does not act, or suppose himself to act, under an "influence." He simply wants to die, and, perhaps, not until after he has made an attempt to kill himself will he exhibit any of the formulated symptoms of mental disease.

Good-Looking Women. [London Truth.] There are some women very successful as such, who are not at all good looking unless when animated by pleasurable excitement, an eye which, on a sudden meeting after a long absence, beams out a joyous recognition has more witchery in it than the visage of a Mrs. Langtry, expressing only indifference or self-consciousness could have. The feeling that a new and pretty bonnet is as becoming as it can be often transmutes a common commonplace young face. Some roses and lilies only charm in country environments. There are English girls who are paragons of loveliness as they return to Brighton, after a campaign in the downs, but who merely pass muster in a town where there is no only absence of the glow of youth, which only shines at night. I know a yellow-skinned, thick-lipped, pug-nosed being who has distanced some of the handsomest women of Europe and America at festive gatherings and merry little parties. But she could only achieve this feat in artificial light, which stimulates and gives her a peculiar power of fascination. One then sees that she has the finest eyes in the world, and a set of teeth which in laughing brighten up her dark face. Skobeloff's sister who is married to the Czar's cousin, is as far removed as Cleopatra or Salome from the modern American type of classic purity; but she is the incarnation of all the graces, and physiognomy is eloquent in expressing poetry of feeling. Anne Boleyn had many plastic defects. The Duchess of Burgundy, who lit up, in the old age of Lew the Quaker, the court of Francis I, and neutralized the morose influence of Mme. de Maintenon, had a grottoous neck and decayed front teeth; yet she was proclaimed a beauty, even by the bilious and censorious St. Simon. Marguerite de Valois, with whom most of the prominent Frenchmen of the century were at some time or another desperately in love, had heavy cheeks like a monkey's, two prominent eyes, which were often congested, and a thick hanging under lip. She had not the vices of the ladies of her morning, but she was not less successful in her efforts to make conquests for the pleasure of showing she had power to conquer. It was this royal coquette who first resorted to the expedient of receiving company sitting up in bed, with black satin curtains drawn round her, and the noise of her bust and arms. Her gallantry used to say that had she been a shopkeeper's spouse, without any of those rich accoutrements which are brought into her portraits, she would have been every whit as potent. I do not know of any other woman who so hardly ever love their queens or women of princely rank, a king's daughter who enjoys flirtation is sure to turn the heads of all her sine's courtiers. The last Duchess de Berri would not have been allowed to so much as compete at a beauty show had she presented herself incognito. Sir Walter Scott was close to her at mass in the Tulleries Chapel, wrote in his diary that she was very plain, and that her eyes were not follows.

While coming back to the hospital we found Ike Green of my company, hanging across the fence dead. He gave out while we were on the skirmish line, and he was not able to get into a wagon. After getting rested I suppose he started to hunt us up, and while climbing over the fence he was struck with a bullet and there he stopped. The ball passed through his stomach and spine. He was no coward, else he would have faced the other way when he had such a good chance. Several dead men have been found in hollow logs or behind logs or rocks, as though they had been wounded and crawled in there to protect themselves. One poor fellow sat behind a big tree with a Bible in his hand. He had been passed a dozen times and more during the day by ambulance drivers and burial squads, but they had all thought that he was alive. He had been shot in the thigh and he had gone to this tree for protection, taking his Bible out, he thought, no doubt, that he would find consolation in reading it. At one occasion he was a diamond reported on the back of the neck deep enough to break the spinal cord. His head dropped forward a little and there he sat. Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Beginning and End [Boston Herald.] Blaine and Fremont are travelling together. They are the two old men of the Republican party. Fremont was the first old man and Blaine is the last. Both are unworthy. Fremont was caught up to get votes for the party in its early days. He was not fit to be President, as his subsequent history abundantly proved. Blaine represents the decadence and corruption of the party—he is the representative of all that is bad in politics. Fremont was an error of the party's youth. Blaine is the fruit of its corrupt and aged party ends with a folly similar to that of its beginning, but worse.
