Shot in the Mouth.

[Special Telegram to the Globe.]

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 27.—About 10 o'clock this evening Robert Kenney and Mitchell Barnum, brakemen on the Milwaukee road, got into an altercation in a saloon near Short Line Junction, when Barnum pulled a revolver and fired at Kenney, the ball entering his mouth and passing out through his right cheek. The injured man was brought into the city and his wound examined. It was found that the injury is not serious, as the ball only shattered a couple of back teeth and made a hole in the man's face. Barnum made his escape, and up to midnight had not been captured. Kenney is about twenty-five years old and lives at 2713 Seventeenth avenue south.

MINNEAPOLIS AMUSEMENTS.

Frank Mayo.

Down deep in the deep sea buried The wonder city lies, And the spirit of these rising years The spectral form arise.

He feels with a ravishing terror The glow of the phantom fire— As the spirit of these rising years Weaves joy of a sad desire.

Even so from our souls uplifteth The vision of the great fair, And they who behold thy specter Are caught in that fatal snare.

Love cruel and yearning, yet hopeful, Love rending the art and brain— As the ghost of the sunken city Breezes joy from the joy of pain.

O Vision who hopes lie hidden Be one in your mystic thrill! O Vision of love! 'Tiseta! O The promise of love's thrill.

The lovers of romantic dramas have enjoyed a delightful treat the past week in the presentation of Frank Mayo's new play, "Nordeck."

"Nordeck" is the dramatization of Werner's famous novel of Vineta, and it is the work of Mr. Mayo and Mr. John T. Wilson. It shows the conscientious and painstaking labor of an intelligent actor. Mr. Mayo's experience before the American public has been wide, and he has studied diligently the pleasures and displeasures of his audiences until he knows just what style of a play is certain to succeed, and what is doomed to become stranded.

His reputation in "Davy Crockett" is well known, and the popularity of that play has been great, but in "Nordeck" he is as much the superior as in "May Blossom" superior to most other Madison Square dramas.

The scene was laid in Poland, and the denouement based upon a revolt of the people of that turbulent country. Unlike most plays it is almost devoid of the unnatural elements. Its romance is poetic in an admirable degree, and the tale of love it unfolds is tender, pure and devout. The language is choice and elegant, and the blind patriotism with which noble Polish blood is bound to the country is depicted strongly, and in that many of the principal climaxes of the play are wrought up. The novel furnished one of the most entertaining plots, and the dramatist has made the most of it possible.

The first act consists mainly in telling, as briefly as possible for the auditor to arrive at a clear understanding, the history of the various characters to the play, and ends with the uniting of the deserted son "Waldemar" with the unnatural and rigidly cold mother, the "Princess Zuleski." The Princess had been twice married, the first time to a German, the father of "Waldemar," and the second time to a Pole, the father of "Prince Leo." Toward the first husband the Princess entertained the bitterest hatred because of his nationality, and upon "Waldemar" visited that animosity in scarcely less degree, while upon "Leo" was lavished the love of a devout mother.

"Leo," of course, is a scoundrel while "Waldemar" is a hero, brave, unconquerable, yet absolutely just, in rapid succession and kind. The second act goes somewhat slowly, picturing mainly routine domestic life, but closes with a thrilling climax, which never falls of an encore. Now the play goes fast, and interesting and exciting situations and climaxes follow in rapid succession, until Nordeck wins back his mother's love and the hand of the lovely "Countess Wanda."

The company which supports Mr. Mayo is especially strong, and includes a number of actors who mark as stars in the companies of the better class. The presentation, consequently, under the direction of Mr. Mayo, is exceedingly artistic.

Mr. Mayo is seen at his best in the title role. It is a quiet, artistic interpretation of the bold Polish, but German character, he rises grandly to the emergency. Throughout it is nearly faultless.

Rachel McAuley is starred on the bill, and presents Countess Wanda. While she acts with artistic finish, even emotion and striking power, it must be confessed that were she younger, it would be an improvement. That is, she does not look the character, and in that alone does she fail. She is an actress of note and has starred for several years with good companies.

Herbert is a perfect Prince. Cool, collected and determined, she sacrifices everything in her mad devotion to her country, only to realize her mad folly in the end, and to relent, forgive and be forgiven. At first she is a cruel, unfeeling mother. Her son, who has German blood in his veins, she intrigues against in her endeavor to place her Polish son in the supremacy, but at the last she finds in her German son all that a mother could love, and her pent up love is given full scope. The other members of the cast deserving of especial mention are William H. Gorman, "Count Morynski," brother to the princess; J. B. Taylor, "Wild" uncle and guardian to "Waldemar"; Mr. Pope Cook as chief forester and the murderous villain; H. Thompson as "Prince Leo," and Edwin Mayo as "Herr Fabian," tutor to Waldemar.

Nordeck is weak only in comedy. Although there is a comedy vein running throughout the play, it utterly fails to excite any merriment. There is not one important role, and that a play of its length should, in so short time, have been pruned, polished and reconstructed until there is scarcely anything to be suggested in the way of improvement is a matter of no ordinary surprise. "Nordeck" is unquestionably the greatest success of Mr. Mayo's life, and it should draw to his coffers a goodly hoard of gold.

Pence Opera House.

The Davene & Austin combination has drawn fairly good houses the past week at Pence Opera house.

To-morrow night Madam Gerard Gyer's Novelty and Statuesque combination will open a week's engagement. The company is said to be composed of clever specialty people. One of the principal novelties is a new kind of a one-liner, something very different from anything ever before seen in Minneapolis.

The Comique.

While the other theaters complain of hard times and unprofitable business, Manager Brown smiles happily. The Comique draws good houses each night. The principal attraction has been in the turns by the great Muldoon quartette. Although the cold weather nearly knocked them out, they never fail to make a hit.

The Misses Hamilton and Blake have continued to charm their auditors with sweet duets, and they will close their engagement here on Saturday night. The Misses Baker and Ross will do a very clever turn each night, and their popularity is far from on the wane.

The management make the following announcement for this week: The acrobats, Messrs. Baker and Jones; serio-comic vocalist, Miss Sybel Spencer; Miss Alice Massford, operatic vocalist.
