A light at each corner, with the long blocks, is insufficient, and strangers from other cities marvel as they stumble in darkness up our otherwise good streets and avenues. The "moon" system too, is rather imperfect, as that inconsistant orb has a constantly recurring habit of violating her contracts and re-fusing to give what light is expected of her. The sub-lunary contracts are not entirely up to the letter of the agreement, either, and during the past month the police reported three hundred unlighted lamps, in the "dark of the moon.'

The reason for her desertion can perhaps be conjectured when recollection is refreshed concerning the suit for divorce in which the present plaintiff was defendant. In September, 1862, he was married to Minnie A. Bowdish at Onondago, N. Y., both parties being forty years of age. In her complaint she charged that January 12, 1872, at Blooming Prairie he threw her down a flight of stairs; at Princeton, in June, 1876, he struck and kicked her in the breast; at Minneapolis, July 4, 1879, he assaulted her and injured one of her limbs; at Elk River, in 1879, he threw her violently to the floor, etc. She also charged him with various other acts of brutality, threats, etc During a portion of this time Bowdish was a Methodist Episcopal minister and while at Princeton and Giencoe hts acts were such as to bring disgrace upon himself and his family. Now I suppose you've got it all made up in your mind that the porter ran away with the wife—well that ain't it. The old gentleman happened to tell me one night that he was looking for a location, and in-tended to go into business somewhere in Dakota. The porter happened to hear the re-Dakota. What do you think the result was? The old gentleman gave him a half-partnership and signed articles to that effect. They went out and bought a stock of goods, and before they went the old gentleman gave him $200 to rig himself out with. They left yesterday for Roscoe, Dakota, and I'll bet they'll do well. Oh, it beats all how some people strike luck. THE BRIBAL COUPLE.

It was in the spring of 1882 that I made he acquaintance of the bridal couple about whom I am going to write. I made their acquaintance under very amusing circumstances. I was traveling from Berlin to Paris to visit some friends in the latter city. I had to change cars at Cologne. There was the usual bustle and confusion at the station Not being able to find the through train to Paris, I applied to a corpulent railroad official for information. He turned out to be the conductor of my train, and, pointing to the open door of a coupe, instructed me to enter and take a seat. I followed the directions. Standing in the coupe was a young lady with a pretty figure, dark hair, and eyes to match. She was looking over my head into the crowd evidently seeking somebody. She made no movement to permit me to enter the car, but on the contrary she said, blocking up the door, that all seats were taken. I begged her pardon, and once more applied to the conductor. He was somewhat impatient. He told me, angrily, to go right in and pay no attention to what any other passenger said. I did so, much to the annovance of the young lady, who said that there would be a gentleman passenger in the coupe. I understood the situation at once. The lady was a bride and the gentleman was probably her husband. Hence her prevarication and the unwillingness that anybody else should occupy a seat in the compartnent. It is very unpleasant to force yourself upon people, and if there had been room in any other coupe I should have allowed the young couple all the privacy they desired. As it was, I determined to withdraw into the most distant corner and be blind and deaf to whatever might occur. The young bride looked over at me and asked me if I lived in Cologne, to which I rep ied that I did not. "Are you going very far?" she asked, esitatingly.

"All the way to Paris." She heaved a little sigh, and then asked ne, rather abruptly: "Can you stand tobacco smoke?"

"The gentleman smokes very strong elgars," was her next remark. I responded that if the smoke was disagreeable to me I presumed the gentleman would give up his cigar.

She shook her head doubtingly, but just at that moment the signal for starting was given, and "the gentleman" sprang to the coupe. He was a sturdy, well-built man, somewhat older than his young wife. He had rather coarse features, was not particularly refined in his manners, and he made no attempt whatever to conceal his chagrin at seeing an other passenger in the coupe.

The conversation between myself and the bride had been carried on in German, hence I was somewhat surprised to hear the young couple converse in English, with which language they imagined I was not familiar. Said the bride, looking straight at me:

"I tried my best to keep her out, but she would come in." The young husband grunted somewhat in reply.

'I told her all the seats were taken, but she would not believe me." The man smiled.
"I told her that you smoked, but she said that she liked it." The man laughed and threw his eigar stump through the window, remarking:

"Maybe she is not going very far?"

"Oh, yes, she is. She told me she was going to Paris. I asked her." Well, I guess we'll have to stand it the best we can, but it's pretty tough," he re-plied with resignation, taking a seat along ide of her and gently squeezing her hand. It was not flattering to me to hear them sigh alternately. I was not accustomed to be looked upon as an altogether repulsive object. Moreover, their conversation annoyed me a little. For the first time in my life my mother tongue appeared to be in the way. Pretty soon they began again. "Is she young or old?"?

The gentleman glanced over at me and replied carelessly:
"She is not any too young."

"Rather pretty, isn't she?"
"Not pretty to hurt." "I wonder if she is married?" "Possibly she is," he remarked, placing his rm caressingly around her waist.

It was time for me to say something, so I spoke up and said in English:

"I am very sorry, but I am compelled to tell you that I am an American." They were both somewhat startled. The little woman said: "Oh, I beg your pardon," And for about ten minutes there was an impressive silence in the car, during which time they fondled each other's hands and exchanged loving glances. Presently the bride

"What blue eyes she has got," replied the usband. I remarked placidly in French: "It is unfortunate, madam, but I speak French. The situation was really painful. The young bride was not without tact. Once more she begged pardon, and during the conversation which ensued she informed me that they had only been married a week. Her husband was a German by pirth, but had traveled a great deal in Canada, Mexico, and the United States, where he had lived so long that he had become completely Americanized As she said this she cast a most admiring glance at her broad-shouldered husband. She herself was a German, but she had been to Wisconsin on a visit to an uncle, and ther she made the acquaintance of ber said husband. She returned to Germany. orresponded, and now he had come over to Germany, married her, and they were on their way back to Wisconsin via Havre and

New York, etc. She was only 18, etc.

They seemed to be so much devoted to each other that I dropped the conversation as soon as possible. It was evidently a great strain upon them to desist from conversing with each other, and at last the husband whispered audibly: "My concentido." But im-mediately an expression of apprehension came over his features, and, turning to me,

"Do you understand Spanish also?" I replied, laughingly, that I lived three years in Guatemaia. As I said this the faces of both appeared to grow longer. Their last hope was gone.

Just at this moment the train stopped. There was a delay of half an hour. I got out of the coupe and beckened to the fat conduc-tor. I was determined not to prolony the misery of the bridal couple.

I returned a week afterward over the same road and on the same train. The fat con ductor held out a tortoise-shell comb, such as ladies wear in their bair, saying he had found it in the car. He thought it might be mine. As I had seen that identical comb in the hair, of the bride I inferred that her hair had be-come disarranged after they had gotten rid of noticed that Representative Hoblitzell's desk was ornamented with a magnificient floral harp. It was composed of roses, violets and ferns, and was the only desk on the floor that was laden with hothouse products. For a short time Mr. Hobitzell was very proud of his possession. It was beautiful, smelled deliciously and attracted attention; but his contentment, was short-lived. Members began to come closer. They looked for the card that generally accompanies floral offer-ings. That card was tucked away and alnost hidden among roses and violets.

as brought to light by Mr. Cox of Ne York. It bore the simple words "From Violet." This was enough for Cox, who is known as the enfant terrible of the house. He soon had a crowd around Hoblitzell. Con wanted to know who "Violet" was. Mr. Hoblitzell denied all acquaintance with "Violet'" and said he believed the harp was for Mr. Cox. "If." said he, "there had been a champagne bottle by it, he would have been certain that it was meant for Cox." But he could not get off. His fellow-members plied him with questions and insinuations he could not answer. At each question and at each innuendo everybody laughed. Mr. Hob-litzell got warm. Hethen got warmer. Mr. Cox of New York began to hum, softly, "Sweet violets, sweeter than all the roses," and Representatives Bland, Hiscock, Townshend Brandhead and Murrow, ioland in the GERMAN CHERNUT CAKES .- Boil some nice fair chesnuts, earefully picking out all wormy, ones. Pound six ounces of them in a mortar, mix with quarter of a pound of sugar, the same of flour and four eggs. Knead into a paste, roll out thin, cut in various shapes, brush with beaten egg and bake on buttered tins.

ILALIAN RICE .- Boil nicely some rice, and whendone mix with it enough rich well-seasoned stock to thoroughly moisten the rice. In stirring the two together do not break the grains of rice into a mush. Serve with ac ompanying dish of grated Parmesan cheese CREAM SAUCE FOR PUDDING .- Beat a half cupful of nice fresh butter to a cream; add gradually a cupful of powdered sugar, beat-ng all the while. When all is reduced to a light creamy substance, add gradually, and still beating, a quarter of a cupful of rich cream and a teaspoonful of vanilla extreat. This sauce looks inviting and tastes deli-STEEL JEWELRY (TO CLEAN) .- First rub them with the finest glass paper, then with oil and putty powder, rubbed through muslin; rub finally with leather; this is the ornaments are very rusty. Sometimes sifted coal-ash is used instead of emery. If the ornaments are not very bad, spirits of wine and brown paper will clean them, rubbing afterwards with a leather. To prevent rust, keep them in powdered starch. BECHAMEL SAUCE .- It doesn't need a cook at $200 a month to make this sauce, which adds so much to many dainty dishes. Simply simmer together a pint of cream and some rice, rich meat stock, until reduced to the consistency you prefer. Do this in a double kettle that it may not burn. Season to taste. SPOON CASES .- Take a strip of the heavies canton flannel, wide enough so that after laying the spoons and forks on it, the cloth can be folded over them. Then stitch a band of the material to the upper part of it and fasten, leaving the spaces or loops through which to slip the silver. HOW TO CLEAN WALNUT FURNITHERE When oiled walnut furniture begins to grow lingy,it can be made to look as fresh as new by reciling. Linseed or even olive oil can be used, but pure, good kerosene oil is much the best. Rub in well with a soft woolen rag, and polish with clean, dry flannel.

FINGER MARKS .- Dust and marks of children's fingers can be removed from windows by rubbing them with a sponge which has been dipped in ammonia and water. To remove finger marks from and restore luster to the keys of a piano, wash off with a chamois tkin wet with cold water: then rub the sur tace with sweet oil, mixed with half its quansity of turpentine GIRLS THAT HAVE FOLLOWERS, BUT NOT

HUSBANDS .- The girl of sixteen, who will neither sew nor do housework, has no business to be decked out in finery and rambling about in search of fun and frolic unless her parents are rich and in that event she needs the watchful direction of a good mother none the less. There is no objection to fun, but it should be well chosen and well timed. No woman or girl who will not work has a right to share the wages of a poor man's toil. If she does work, if she makes the clothes she wears and assists in the household duties, the chances are that she will have enough selfrespect to behave when playtime comes; but if she should still be a little "wild" the hon-est toil she has done will confer upon her some degree of right to have her own ill-judged though it be. The wild girl usually aspires to prominence in some social circa or other, and her manners and conduct are in greater or less degree designed to attract the following of men. She should remembe that followers are not always admirers, and that the most sincere admiration a man ever feels for a woman in a drawing-room is when he looks upon her and says in his own consciousness, "She is a perfect lady."-

He Go the Wrong Girl. On a large farm, nearly in sight of the quiet little town of Federalsburg, Md., resides a blooming young girl of twenty-two summers, also her cousin and her father's ward of two years her senior. Both of these have beaux whom their stern old father and uncle do not approve of. The lover No. 1 and his sweetheart, unbeknown to the other parties, had made all arrangements to steal off in the still of the night and get married This was also the plan of the contracting parties No. 2. The ladder was hid back of parties No. 2. The ladder was not back of the garden for the purpose of scaling the walls at the proper time. In the bewitching hours of the night, when the graveyards yawn, lover No. 1 placed the ladder to the window of girl No. 2. The night was dark just at that time. She made her exit out of the window and into the arms of her sup posed knight, and was hurried off to the carriage near by. Not a word was spoken as along the ramparts (the old man's back lane) they burried. The carriage was gained and the lash was applied to the horses When they arrived at the preacher's house, who was waiting to tie the knot, the gallant knight then discovered that he had got the wrong girl. Of course, there was some salts and inward cuss words, and the tug of war came-how to get the weeping girl back undiscovered. Lover No. 2 met with an accident by running his buggy against a post and carrying away his port wheel, and failed that night to arrive at the house. The old man has bought a $18 gun, and is nightly in ambush for the raiders.

He would therefore say to the unfortunate sufferer who may read this notice, that you are treading on dangerous ground, when you longer delay in seeking the proper remedy for your companit You may be in the first stage—remember that you are approaching the last. If you are bordering on the last, and are suffering some or all of its ill effects, remember that if you obstinately presist in procrastination, the time must come when the most skillful physician can render you no assistance; when the door of hope will be no assistance; when the door of hope will be closed against you; when no angel of mercy can closed against you; when no angel of mercy can bring you relief. In no case has the doctor failed of success. Then let not despair work itself upon your imagination, but avail yourself of the beneficial results of his treatment before your case is beyond the reach of medical shill, or before grim death burries you to a premature grave Firesquired without using Kanteor regarder.

MIDDLE-AGED MEY There are many at me age from thirty to sixty who are troubled with frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or "uning sensation and weakening the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the Prinary deposits a topy sediment will often be found, and sometimes smail particles of abumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin, or milkish thee, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of weakness of vitalorgans. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of these organs.

Only one interview required in the majority of cases. Baiance of treatment tan be takenachome without any interruption to ousiness.
