THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

It Discusses Sanitation, Street Sweeping and the Fire Department.

The most interesting matter considered yesterday morning at the meeting of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce was that of the three resolutions adopted by the council to advertise for bids for sweeping streets, removing the garbage from the streets and finally disposing of it.

Mr. H. S. Fairchild said that the sanitary matter at St. Paul, but that he had failed to discover that it was true. He regarded St. Paul as a very healthy city. As to the sweeping of the streets he could not see the necessity of a sanitary matter at all. He stated that the chairman of the committee on sanitary affairs, Mr. Hodgson, was not in town and the committee had not held a meeting, consequently had no report to make.

Mr. E. F. Drake spoke of the filthy condition of the streets of St. Paul and said he had noticed while he was abroad, and other gentlemen who had been abroad had also noticed the difference in the cleanliness of the streets of foreign cities and at home. The streets of St. Paul were in a very bad condition, and he expressed the opinion that such a cheaper mode of cleaning the streets would be devised than that of scraping them.

H. P. Hall asked Mr. Drake how the streets of Chicago compared with those of St. Paul for cleanliness.

Mr. Drake did not know as to that. H. P. Hall—I was in Chicago two or three weeks ago and the streets of Chicago were then ten times more filthy than those of St. Paul.

Capt. Blakeley moved to adopt the three resolutions. Dr. Day desired to know what the proposed measures were going to cost. He understood that it would cost $100,000 or more. He wanted to know something about that or he should vote against the proposition.

Mr. Murray asserted that the chamber proposed to go off, as usual, half cocked. Capt. Berkeley referred to the immense cost of such a sweeping change. We always seemed ready to vote one thing or another, just as it happens. He thought, however, that it was best to take a little time and consider matters, and get some information upon that that is to be voted on. We have five departments, a large expenditure, not less than $65,000, for engines and houses. Our fire department is just as good as that of Minneapolis, and their department does not cost near as much as ours does. It is time to stop and consider before we sanction such an expenditure of money as is called for by these resolutions. Where is your money to come from? The county is out of money. The city is out of money. We have got no school. Now, under these circumstances, would it not be better to stop and consider as to this new departure.

Mr. Scabary explained that the resolutions would tend to find out what it would cost to do the work.

H. P. Hall, declared that he had recently been in Chicago, Cincinnati, Rochester, Toledo, New York and a number of other cities in the East and he had seen the condition of the streets of St. Paul in any worse condition than those in the cities named.

Gen. Bishop said it was useless to talk of sweeping the streets as long as we had so many side streets and alleys, and the condition of the streets. Two-thirds of the money spent in sweeping the streets would be lost.

Mr. Delano offered the following, which was adopted: "That nothing in these resolutions shall be construed to mean a recommendation by this chamber to fill or make water-tight any privy vault or cess-pool that shall not be declared by the board of health a public nuisance."

Dr. H. P. Hall said that he was not proposing to fill the vaults nor to use or seal them, but to watch over all that are to be built hereafter. Finally, on motion of Mr. Souther the matter was laid over.

THE WEST ST. PAUL LEVEE. Mr. Delano called attention to the West St. Paul levee. The inside line of the levee, he said, had been fixed the whole length of it next to the property, except for a small space near the bridge. He favored the establishment of a similar line on this side and the passing of an ordinance to protect squatters and jumpers. He had examined the surveys of the United States, and thought it would be a good thing to fix the line so as to be ready to receive all the benefits to be derived from the protection of the levee of St. Paul, along with all the other harbors on the river.

Mr. McClung insisted that the city ought to go to work and build the levee.

Mr. Oppenheim declared that that could not be done. It would amount to confiscation. The dirt would all wash away and you would not have any levee.

Mr. McClung proposed to rip-rap it. Mr. Oppenheim wanted to see what the money was to come from. If you assess the property it's confiscation.

The matter was dropped without anything being done about it.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. E. F. Drake, from the committee on buildings and fire department, reported in regard to the communication from George W. Hall in reference to enlarging the fire department, that it was not advisable to enlarge it to the extent asked for by the gentleman, but that it ought to be increased some, as follows:

First, purchase lots, erect houses and fully equip three chemical engine companies in West St. Paul, St. Anthony hill and on Rice street. Second, purchase a lot, erect houses and fully equip one steam engine company near the power works in the Fifth ward; third, purchase steamer and hose carriages and fully equip one steam engine company, and locate the same at the corner of the corner of Eighth and Minnesota streets; fourth, erect addition to No. 2 house on Wabasha street, so as to accommodate Chemical No. 1, now kept at headquarters.

This will give an increase of three chemical engines and two first-class steam engines and hose carriages and 4,000 feet of hose for same. The estimated total cost of the above, ready for first-class service is $65,000. The fire commissioners thought this was all the city could stand in the year 1885, and that it should satisfy any insurance demands.

The report closed with a resolution to the effect that the chamber of commerce request the council to grant the request of the fire commissioners for the amount of $65,000, and the same was adopted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The communication of the board of education that was read at the last meeting of the board, explaining about the bonds that were issued many years ago for school purposes, was read and filed.

Mr. Clason of the St. Paul & Milwaukee road appeared and stated to the chamber that the directors of the United States and Canada would be in Minneapolis, where they would be banquered. He desired to present the matter to the chamber, but that the conductors could not be treated at St. Paul. He also stated that the Northern Pacific had tendered them a train to take them to Yellowstone park.

Mr. D. D. Merrill reported in regard to the Mississippi river convention held at New Orleans. Everything was harmonious.

A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY.

Two Hack Drivers Quarrel, and One of Them Is Killed by Death by a Horse.

A fatal casualty—whether a homicide or not has not yet been determined—occurred at Brennan's lively stable, on St. Peter street, near Ninth street, about the middle of the afternoon, resulting in the death of Albert Nelson, a hack driver, and better known as "Big Al."

The circumstances of the affair are substantially as follows: About the hour named Mr. Brennan and one of his men were engaged in measuring feed at one of the bins, when their attention was attracted by loud and angry words between Nelson and a hack driver named Edward Ricker and known among his associates as "Friday." The latter was heard to call Nelson a vile name, and when Mr. Brennan quitted his work and went into the stable proper, he witnessed the quarrel. The men were found clinched, and just as Brennan approached with the view of separating them, Nelson received a shove and fell between the hind legs of one of the horses. The horse casted the animal to the ground, and he lay there for some time before he was able to get out of the way, and in so doing he stepped with full force on Nelson's head. Realizing his danger, Mr. Brennan caught Nelson by the feet and pulled him from under the horse's feet. His head was smashed almost to a jelly and Dr. Murphy and Boardman attended him, but he died in about twenty minutes.

Coroner Quinn was notified, and when the case will be fully investigated and the blame placed where it belongs. The deceased was about forty years of age, single, and he was a man of good habits and a good workman. He was employed by Nelson and in the employ of Jerry O'Brien, driving hacks. When sober he is a pleasant, industrious fellow, but when drunk he is disposed to be quarrelsome.

Officer Merriman found Ricker on Eighth street about 4:30 o'clock and arrested him. A GLOBE reporter visited him at his cell in the station house. He said he went into the barn yesterday afternoon to take out his horses and was engaged in putting on the harness when he saw Nelson and Ricker. Nelson began to quarrel with Ricker and Nelson began to kick him, and finally attempted to choke him. Ricker warned him off and finally gave Nelson a push which staggered him across to the stable door. Nelson then ran against the heels of one of the horses. The animal at once began kicking, and Ricker attempted to quiet the horse and was one of the first to pull Nelson from beneath his hoofs. The contest between Nelson and Ricker has always been friendly, and the latter believed from Nelson's actions before the trouble began and from his disposition shown to seek a quarrel, that he was under the influence of liquor. Ricker spoke of Nelson as a good fellow, and deplored the fatal termination of the dispute, and finally broke down entirely, his feelings preventing him from proceeding, and he requested to be left to himself until he regained control of his emotions.

A LIVELY SESSION.

An Old Time Day in the Police Court—A Big Grist of Buns Disposed Of.

Only a long green note, reposing in a till; Only a thirty buck with his eye on a dollar bill; Only an outstretched hand, a moment of sweet repose; Only a sad-eyed man joining the workhouse procession.

He was a gentleman of the shade, a minion of the sun, he was on his financial uppers, and he resorted to a unique way of replenishing the exchequer.

Saturday night he waited into a saloon and called for a glass of lager. As the cocktail chemist turned to draw the beer the bustling stranger extended his taffy-pointed cane across the counter and in the act of cabaging a greenback from the till when the beer-jerk turned and seized him. He was in court yesterday and gave the name of Thomas Williams, and was sent out for thirty days.

Joe Salera, a degenerate Roman who runs a peanut roaster on Market street, was up on the charge of beating his wife. He is jealous of his better half and in a fit of jealousy he seized her by the neck and strangled her last Sunday. The woman was not in court yesterday, but the fellow was put under bonds of $300 to keep the peace.

John Falk, a very mean sneak thief, was up for larceny. Last Saturday evening he stole a pair of shoes from a man in a saloon, and he was caught in the act of walking off with them. He will do the buckskin act for the next thirty days.

The case of John Murphy, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, came up on a continuance. He is one of a trio of men who broke up a dance on West Seventh street a couple of weeks ago and inaugurated a free fight. It cost him twenty-five days.

Michael Burk, a regular boarder at the workhouse, celebrated his release Sunday by getting royally budgeted. He was walked out to his familiar home again for thirty days.

Patrick Broderick, a tough youngster, and one of the Rice street gang, was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. Last Sunday the accused, in company with his brother Ed, James and John, entered a saloon, pounced on a Swede in the infamous saloon kept by Nordenskjold on Rice street, and almost killed the poor fellow. The other offenders have not yet been arrested and Ed's case is still open.

Joe Costello was on a bender, and when taken in charge he insisted the officer. He got twenty days. John Sultet, a colored chin scraper, cabaged a whip from a buggy and he went out for thirty days.

STREET SAYINGS.

It is related that the proprietor of one of the most elegant drinkeries on Wabasha street is striving to quiet certain spirits which transpired in his place on Sunday morning. It appears that his front door had not been securely locked at close of business the night before, and when he arrived in the morning he found unmistakable evidences, from the depletion of his stock and a generally disorganized and disreputable appearance about the establishment, that some one had been there while he'd been gone. Among other things which confirmed this suspicion was a letter posted conspicuously upon the water-heater, which read as follows:

St. Paul, Sunday, April 13, 1885. Brother: Finding your church open, an audience assembled and the pulpit vacant, I took the liberty to officiate in your place and preach your sermon for you, and the congregation was gratified by the effort. I regret to say that the proceeds of the contribution box were not proportionate to the number of the spirits who attended. In addition to these are 200 or 300 more to come in. J. J. Allen Esq. AMUSEMENTS.

Nat Goodwin and His Company as High Rollers—The New Starlet a Success.

When the green baize curtain fell upon the last act of Nat Goodwin's new play, "The Skating Rink," at the Grand last night, a very large and brilliant audience was present, and seems to run a roller rink with the same ease as he runs a steamboat line and a score of other enterprises, was heard to remark that he believed he would have to serve an injunction on the show for infringing on the rights of the enterprise. As between the two, the performance, however, was thought that the large audience in attendance last night would lift up their voices to a man and shout in favor of the satire.

The play is described as a musical and satirical comedy, and is a very clever and original thing by the way it "caught on." This gentleman must have possessed a deep and profound knowledge of his subject. Indeed, one would imagine that he may have been, in the past, a professional actor, or even a "professor" of the high and mystical art which lies in the manipulation of the little wheels.

The performance is not confined to the satire, however, for as a matter of fact it includes a trifle of variety, being as light and airy as the white-cap foam on an Atlantic beach breaker.

During the performance, everybody and everything from the chief engineer of the rink to the property cow and the real bull dog, enjoy a roll and there are not a few leaders. The cast includes about a dozen people and there is scarcely a moment in the play when the audience is not kept in a continual cackle of merriment. The thing is highly nonsensical but the people who go to laugh receive the worth of their money and come away satisfied.

Nat Goodwin, at his usual witty and sparkling wit, and his imitations of Edwin Booth in "Richard III," Henry Irving in "Shylock," Joseph Jefferson in "Rip Van Winkle," the lamented Sothorn in "Dunbar," and the late Mr. W. C. Gillette, and received with shouts of applause. His burlesque of "Camille" was also very clever. The cast includes Mr. Schiller and Mr. Radcliffe, both clever comedians; Mr. Williams, Mr. Day, Mr. Hart, Mr. B. J. Martin and others. During the evening the Fleishers gave a fancy exhibition on rollers, which was very artistic and enjoyable. A number of entertaining songs were sung, and the performance, as a whole, was a very successful one.

The sale of seats for the engagement of W. J. Scanlan, the comedian, opens at the Grand this morning. "Friend and foe" will be given on Wednesday night, and at the Saturday matinee, and "The Irish Minstrels" Friday and Saturday evenings.

A "Charivari."

The patrol wagon was hastily summoned by telephone, about 9 o'clock last night, to the neighborhood of East Fifteenth street. There was a wedding in progress, and a crowd of upwards of 250 boys and spectators had gathered about and were making life burdensome to the residents thereabouts by rattling in the windows, cat-calling, and kindred pleasantries. When the presence of the patrol wagon became known there was a great hurrying and scurrying to get out of sight, and in two minutes from the time of the arrival of the patrol wagon the scene in the vicinity. Not one stood upon the order of his going, but each ran down alleys and over fences—any way to get out of reach of the blue coats. One provincial, demagogical and vulgar fellow, who was standing with a bench engaged in his work that the situation didn't dawn upon him until after the others had vanished, and Officer Beer was almost within reach of him, he quickly grasped the situation, however, and plunged headlong over the fence and was seen no more.
