THE THOMAS FESTIVAL.

Preparations for a Great Event ..

Some of the Points. Messrs. S. C. Gale, W. D. Washburn, John De Laittre, E. J. Phelps, C. M. Loring and Courtlandt Babcock have issued a circular to the people of Minneapolis in relation to the Thomas musical festival. The committee wrote to Charles E. Locke, general manager, at New York, expressing the hope that Mr. Thomas would come and with the association assume the risk of the festival; in reply to which Mr. Locke wrote, urging a

But unless this is done it would be impossible, for the reason that the expense of sixty solo mu- there shall be a sicians and six vocal artists, forming a troupe superior to any he ever before presented, is too great to make it possible for him to depart from his invariable custom of requiring a guarantee in some form sufficient at least to cover the actual cost. If you will therefore institute an immediate canvas for subscriptions, and apprise us of the result, meanwhile carrying out in good faith your assurance of hearty co-operation in working up the festival and furnishing the chorus, Mr. Thomas will be pleased to come.'

PROPOSITION ACCEPTED. The Philharmonics gladly accepted the proposition and on Wednesday night appointed the committee named above to carry out its provisions. The association further considered a proposition of Col. Mapleson -several stockholders having already proffered subscriptions to the stock of such a building of $500 each. These facts are set forth in the circular,

THE PUBLIC MORALS.

Judge Young Charges the Grand Jury to Give Particular Attention to Municipal Offenders. After the public has but recently been assured by the mayor of Minneapolis in his annual message that the city is in a comparatively healthy moral condition, and the police authorities have been quoted to show a remarkable decrease of crime, Judge in the district court, in which he confined himself almost wholly to a consideration of the deplorable condition of affairs in Minneapolis, will be a surprise. He assured the jury that if they took the trouble there would be little difficuly in finding open vio-lations of the law carried on with the knowledge and connivance of the authorities. After dwelling at considerable length upon the importance of the duties of grand jurors the judge said:

"It rests largely with the people as from time to time they are summoned to serve as grand and petit jurors, as to whether they desire to have the penal laws of the state faithfully administered, and so serve as a power in the interests of justice and good order, or whether the

LAWS SHALL REMAIN UNEXECUTED and crime be winked at and overlooked. Our penal laws are in the main good and well calculated to suppress crime and afford protection to the life of person and property of the citizen; and not only are these personal interests sought to be protected by statutory enactment, but the peace and good order of society, the purity of society, girls, from pernicious publications and devices and, in short, all our social interests are remembered by the legislature. But all these laws are continually, and some of

OPENLY AND DEFIANTLY VIOLATED. The effect of an unrebuked violation of salutary laws cannot be other than pernicious and especially so upon the young. They are led to look upon the prohibitory term of the law as without power because practically without penalty. They argue and logically, too, if the laws which in erms prohibit gambling, prostitution, selling liquor without a license and on Sunday, to minors, to habitual drunkards, may be openly violated without punishment, why not as well any and all other laws?" After referring to the evident increased distrust of the power and efficacy of the courts in this country as shown in the numerous lynchings daily reported, and eautioning the jury to see that indictments are not found to gratify personal animosities, the judge again came to the matter which was evidently uppermost in his mind, and "You are to diligently inquire in respect to any violations of law of which you have knowledge or which you have good reason to believe exist. Your inquiries in respect to public offenses are very important, even nquiries are directed present an indictment. The fact that a body of business men, interin ferreting out crime and clothed with official power, are at each term of the court to make diligent inquiry concerning the commission of offenses within the county, and are not to be limited in such nquiries to cases wherein arrests have been made, will lessen crime and MAKE THE LAWLESS LESS BOLD. In a city like this, where there is an organized police, grand juries are usually dis-posed to avoid, so far as possible, inquiries in respect to local offenses, and leave the municipal authorities to deal with them exclusively. It is an error to suppose that local vice in a large city is only of local importance, and is therefore to be dealt with by local authorities alone. The vices, the crimes, the immoralities of the large cities of this country extend their pernicious influence to every part of the country and to every community and hamlet therein. It is impossible to permit these populous centers to become and remain impure and limit the evil effect | Miller and Catherine Roderic. of such condition. It has come to be understood, therefore, that the power of the law and the diligence and faithfulness of in large cities and towns, and if it sometimes occurs that local police authorities to whom is intrusted the administration of municipal affairs, either from the manner of their selection or from a familiarity and sometimes a clear sympathy with vice, fail to eqecute faithfully the laws for the suppression of crime. This fact of itself when it shall exist increases the responsi-bility of bodies possessing and exercising judicial powers which are further removed from these local influences. There can be no doubt but upon diligent inquiry you would be able to find in this city open and defiant violations of law

The municipal authorities have a right to expect your aid and assistance in ridding the city and society of these criminal vices. There should be an earnest co-operation on the part of the officials and all law abiding citizens in effecting this end. It needs no prophetic wisdom to enable one to predict with certainty what must be the inevitable result of compromising with crime. Unless execution of our criminal laws, and thus a limiting of the growth of crime in this city, vice and misrule will ere long have gained the mastery. I have thus particularly called the attention of this grand jury to its responsible duties, hoping that from the wis dom and discretion of the citizens who compose the jury your action may not be without good results. The statute prohibits the keeping of houses of ill-fame, keeping gambling houses, selling liquor in violation of law, selling pernicious literature, pictures, devices and paintings. The importance of these statutes in preserving and building up social morals, especially among the young, is great. The statute gives to the grand jury jurisdiction of these offenses, and expects you to make as faithful inquiry in respect to the same, as in cases of murder, burglary, larceny and other felonies. Qualify and Officers Elected. The first meeting of the library board created by the late legislature was held last evening in the office of Johnson & Leonard, on Nicollet avenue. All were present except President J. W. Johnson of the board of education, member ex-officio. The other ex-officio members are Mayor Pillsbury, President Northrup of the state university, and E. H. Moulton, city treasurer, and the treasurer of the board. Prof. Sven Oftedahl was called to the chair, and lots were drawn to determine the length each meinber should serve upon the board, resulting as follows:

Thomas Lowry and J. B. Atwater, one year; Prof. Sven Oftedahl and T. B. Walker, for three years; Judge M. B. Koon and E. M. Johnson, for five years,

Upon motion of Judge Koon Messrs. Walker, Johnson and Atwater were appointed a committee to draft by-laws to be reported at the next meeting. The bonds of the secretary were fixed at $500, and those of the treasurer at $100,000. President Northrup and Prof. Oftedahl were appointed a committee to design a device for a seal of the board, and they were structed to report at the next meeting.

Fifth Annual Session of the Fire Underwriters of the Northwest.

"That's a fine looking body of men." The speaker was a local insurance man and made the remark as he looked in on the gathering of fire underwriters at the West hotel yesterday afternoon. It was the fifth union of Wisconsin, Minnesota and Dakota, an organization the object of which is explained in the name and which includes nearly every reputable insurance man in the states named. The hour fixed was o'clock, but at that time quite a number had not yet arrived, and it was 2:30 before the union got under way, with Judge C. W. Potter of Milwaukee in chair. The business transacted the routine and of little public interest. Reports from various com-mittees were heard and the ratings of a large number of towns and villages were discussed. President Potter made his annual report, which will be printed. At 5:30 the union adjourned until to-day,

BAD BOYS

There were seven arraignments before his honor of the municipal court yesterday for too much familiarity with the properties of John Barleycorn. Six of the unhappy boys with swollen heads paid a fine of $5 each while the seventh got off with a suspended sentence. Hans C. Erickson was charged with bas tardy at the instance of Mary Olson. He looked guilty, but may possibly be innocent. He waived an examination and was held to await the action of the grand jury. William Orr, a discharged clerk of the West hotel. paid a fine of $5 for disorderly conduct. He had a little unpleasantness with Detective Hoy at the hotel. F. L. Scherer appeared before the court to answer the charge of keeping his saloon open on Sunday. He wanted a jury trial and the case was set for April 27. CURRENT COMMENT.

Superintendent Henion of the water works department, has in his office a reliable diagram showing the exact water pressure during the year ending March 1. record is taken by an ingenious mechanical device kept at the central pump station. Mr. Henion also has another register in the superintendent's office. The record for Christmas day is a curiosity. It shows the pressure during the Academy of Music fire, and the tracings are zig-zag, indicating that the pressure was exceedingly irregular, although the mean pressure was quite satisfactory. The irregularity was owing to the burst in a water main, and to the vast amount of water thrown on the fire. diagram even gives the hours of the day as well as the days of the month.

The superintendent's office is being supplied with a fire alarm gong. ***

It is not very generally known that the city owns an artesian well, but it is true nevertheless. A number of years ago the paper mill company on the island sunk a pipe 180 feet and from that pipe a volume of water flows to the amount of two barrels pumps that cost twice the sum. It has a per minute. The water is absolutely pure, being free from lime or alkali. The sure is sufficient to throw a powerful stream to the roof of the East side pumping station, in which the well is located. It has been suggested that a larger pipe be substituted for the one used at present, and that the East siders be supplied with pure drinking water, and the plan appears quite feasible.

> W. W. Eastman, after examining the artesian well yesterday, remarked that he should sink one on Nicollet island to supply his tenement flats this season. Undoubtedly it will be a success.

The sixteen-inch water pipe which has alone supplied the East side with water un-til yesterday will not be removed until the bridge is built. Then another pipe will be laid.

All is not serene with the council committee on salaries of city officers. A wide diversity of opinion prevails respecting what the city attorney should receive in the future. They vary from $1,800 (the present amount) to $6,000 per annum, and there seems to be little likelihood of the members of the committee arriving at anything like a compromise. It is held by some that the $1,800 is more than the of-ficer is actually worth to the city, while those in favor of the maximum named argue that this city cannot afford to pay a small salaty to anyone who occupies such an important office. To this the others assent, yet they urge that the present incumbent is not worth the amount his friend and admirer stipulates as a just and equitable salary. The result is that at least two reports will be submitted at the meeting to be held The result is that at least two reports on Friday evening, and perhaps a third report. There is music in the air. The license committee also finds it difficult to arrive at specific amounts. There will be a majority and a minority report, and the fight will be taken up in the council.

Although Mayor Pillsbury is non-committal as to details, or minutize, sufficient information has been ascertained to warrant the prediction that he will make very few changes in the police department this year. As a whole he is pleased with the force, yet he realizes that there are some members who are unfit for the position. These lack courage, patience and persistency, are pug-nacious, and disposed to beat and ill-treat prisoners who indulge in insulting language to them when effecting an arrest. The mayor believes an officer should expect to be saluted with harsh language from pris-oners, and that the officer should never re-He will instruct the force to never use force in excess of what is absolutely necessary to make an arrest, to never illtreat a prisoner in any manner, and furtherwill be drawn to-day from the list of 500 more never to make an arrest unless it is Part of its 11, 12, block 3, Morrison & necessary to preserve the peace or dignity violence. That is, if anyone is too noisy on the streets he should be cautioned and not arrested. If he is the worse for intox-icants and unable to take care of himself he should be taken home, if the officer can find out where he resides.

The above is practically the charge made by ex-Mayor Ames to the police force two years ago.

Judge Young's charge to the grand jury will be read with interest. It is evidence in itself that his honor knows a thing or two outside of the walls of the court house and the covers of law books. The grand jury will now go to work as an investigating committee, while fear and trembling will be the guests of many questionable citizens until the inquisition is over.

A prominent citizen with known liberality and love of music remarked yesterday: "I do hope some means will be employed to prevent speculation in Thomas' festival tickets. I was in Chicago last week and heard Patti, but it cost me $8 to do it. The whole affair was in the hands of speculators from the very opening of the sale and it was simply shameful."

TRAPS FOR MALE DUPES. Schemes by Which Pretty Female Confidence Operators Bleed Their Victims.

New York Cor. of the Troy Times. Among the persons who leaned over the ice-box in the Pearl street undertaking establishment, not long since, in which lay the ington Hatchet. body of Lyman D. Minor, the Broadway merchant who committed suicide, was a woman of scarcely 23 years of age. She was soberly dressed, and when she raised her veil a modest little face and a pair of jet black eyes twinkling beneath black eyelashes were seen. With her kid-gloved hand she smoothed back the hair from the ugly bullet wound in is no hardship for a youth in love to go the temple of the dead man, and when she | without his dinner.—Philadelphia Call. was leaving left a bunch of lilies on the box. She came and went as unostentatiously as a Greenville, who, in connection with Pliny White, the king of confidence men, was the unseen power that drove the merchant to his grave. Sergt. Frink of the Central police ffice said Annie Greenville had a heart of iron and was a tool in the hands of White. White would never leave a man while there was a dollar in him. He was heartless, treacherous and cruel.

It is perhaps an ungallant thing to say, but in New York and large cities generally beauty and blackmail have come to be associated to such an extent that the only safeguard for a boolish, and don't know what to do with susceptible person is to steer clear of goodlooking strangers altogether.

This blackmail is a trade that can only be plied successfully in the great populous cities, there the possibilities of detection are reduced to a mere nothing. It takes an adroit rogue to be a first-class swindler, hence women, who have more tact than men, are always chosen to do the fine work of enrapping the victim. Once in the toils the plucking is done by the male confederates and is usually an easy and safe process. Their methods are many, curious, and novel. The latest and most novel is one recently come to light. A beautiful and accomplished girl sought employment in a down-town business establishment rup by a father and son. She managed to entangle both, and get up an escapade with the young man which cost him a very tidy little sum before the end was reached. He wrote her affectionate letters, made short excursions around and had a lovely time generally, until one fine morning an elderly ruffian stepped up, claiming to be her father. The idiot was only too glad to disgorge liberally on the spot. Then the ex-charmer threatened to sue for the recovery of her letters and a balance due on some furniture; to avoid a scandal he paid up handsomely. Finally, fearing he was to be bled to death by these vampires, he appealed to the police. A single visit with a promise of arrest sufficed to settle the whole business. A neat trick is for a pretty blackmailer to enter the store where there are a great many clerks. Once in the store, she plies all her feminine arts on the chosen victim (one who holds a pretty good position, and whose circumstances she has learned something about) and, engaging him in conversation, lets slip some stray remark, which she emphasizes with her eyes. If he smiles and retorts in the same vein, a point has been gained. After that the conquest is not difficult. A visit or two, a matinee, an opera night, and then some fine day my lady sails into the store like a Spanish pirate bent on plunder. A hurried talk; the man looks glum, but hands the money the ensnarer has demanded. After that she rends him regularly, only at shorter and shorter intervals, until something "goes bust," as the saying is. Either she gets in jail or a big scandal breaks out, or possibly he defies her; but as a rule he hasn't the pluck to do that, and in many cases the pay process goes on for years.

A well-known editor of much brilliancy and sagacity on the metropolitan press was badly done for some time ago by a pretty little widow. She first called on him, and her woful tale, backed by her girlish face, enlisted his sympathies in her cause. Then came requests for theater and concert tickets and ther courtesies, in the compliance of which he generally sent a gallantly worded note. On the strength of these letters and a confederate it cost him $1,000 inside of three months. He was too sensitive to public opinion to hand her over to the police, and had not a friend of his stepped in and grappled matters with an iron hand he probably would have been a victim to-day of either her greed or lies. Here is another case: A Broadway merchant who makes a specialty of silks and satins has a dark room fitted up in his store where he can show the effect of gaslight upon his goods. One day he escorted a lady to this room to show a fine piece of satin under the gas jet. Hardly had the door shut upon them than she tore off her bonnet and sacque and flinging her arms about his neck shrieked at the top of her voice. The clerks rushed in and saw the boss struggling with a beauti-ful lady whose clothes were half torn off her Here was a pretty kettle of fish. It cost $500 to hush the matter up, but he refuses to enter that room with a lady unless accompanied by a cash boy now.

There is no limit to the resources of the business, and, like Mulberry Sellers' eye-water, "there's millions in it." They have water, been known to invade a private wedding and come off successful. Women invariably are the principals. Men suspect men always, but they are consummate fools enough never to suspect a handsome woman. The glamor of ner tace, the witchery of her eyes, and the soft ripple of her tongue is too much for their senses, and their suspicion is lulled until too late to be of any value. One meets these women everywhere—at the theater, on the cars, in the street. The summer boarding houses and seaside resorts are favorite stamp ing grounds for them. Saratoga is full of them in season, and not long since I knew of one who entertained two clergymen-one a bishop in the Episcopal church-with their wives at a cozy dinner. Of course the guests had no idea of the true character of the "charming" bostess, and perhaps some day, wnen I write up her brilliant but checkere career, they will rub their dear old ecclesiastical optics.

THE SPECTRAL DEER.

Hunters Vainly Shooting at a Fleet Creature With Blazing Eyes. Macon (Ga.) Telegraph. The singular occurrence stated below is given by a Baptist minister now serving in the Indian Nation, as a strictly authentic gnost story. He says:

A few nights ago Mr. J. W. Huier and Sanders Bolling of South Canadian were out fire-hunting. They saw about fifty yards from them what they supposed to be a deer's eyes. Mr. Huier drew up his gun to shoot. About the time he got on range of the supposed deer his gun went off accidentally, when the deer's eyes brightened up and made as much light as a headlight on an engine and began to move off in a southerly direction. He could see the light plainly for two and a half miles. It seemed to move at the rate of sixty miles an bour and to fly through the air. He could see the tree-tops plainly, and saw a turkey roosting in a tree near him. which he shot and killed. The turkey was yellow, something very uncommon for the wild bird. Three days later Mr. William Chism saw in daylight what he supposed to be a deer, near where Mr. Huier saw his flery deer. Chism had a Winchester rifle and fired at the deer. To his surprise it began to light up as before. He fired eight or nine shots at it. He says that it looked like a brush pile on fire, moved off rapidly and made a whistling noise as it went. Mr. Charles Pettit, a prominent merchant and Adams express agent of this place, went up to turn out of his lot a pony he had been riding that day about an hour after dark. In the lot he saw what he supposed to be a deer. He returned to his store, got his gun, came back to the lot, fired at the supposed deer, and, to his surprise. he shot his pony and killed it. He says when he fired at the deer he could see his pony in an opposite direc-tion to the deer in the corner of the lot. This seems to be a ghost story, but every word of it is true. Messrs. Huier, Bolling, Pettit and Chism are all responsible, and say they will go before any justice and take an oath that they saw this strange deer.
