VIEWING THE REMAINS

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 5.—The files of people which began passing the remains of Gen. Grant in the senate corridor at the capitol when the doors were first thrown open yesterday were not diminished at midnight. The solid tide of visitors entered from Washington avenue, split at the foot of the casket and two streams filed out through the State street portals until 10 o'clock this morning, when it was estimated that the remains were being viewed by 100 persons per minute and that up to that hour 60,000 persons had seen the face of the dead general. At the executive mansion the sons of Gen. Grant, with Drs. Douglas and...

from this city to New York, arrived, each wearing across the lapel of the black coat a white badge, at the top of which were the words "City of New York." Underneath this the arms of the city, and at the bottom "Gen. Grant." The committee were early this morning at the capitol, and made arrangements to secure possession of the catafalque and funeral car after the remains had departed. An offer of $5,000 has been made for the catafalque. As they are the property of the national government, however, it is not likely that relief funds will obtain it. The catafalque built at Troy was completed last evening at 6 o'clock. The undertakers and embalmers who have immediate charge of the body of the dead general were alert and not a little anxious to-day. The jolting of the body through the catafalque on its passage to the capitol had no good effect. The lower jaw of the general's face is being kept in place, it is believed, by strong rubber bands. The face as described last night has the same glistly appearance. Every effort is made to keep the face as it was being employed by the embalmers and undertakers to preserve the remains in such condition as will make it both possible and proper to display them in New York. Those who are in charge say there is no doubt this will be done, but there is some ground for...

At 10:30 the capitol doors were closed and the preparations for continuing the journey commenced. Slowly the general car, drawn by six black horses with their harnesses and trappings moved to the State street side of the capitol. Gen. Hancock, mounted on a black charger from West Point and followed by his staff, approached the capitol, as also did Gen. Farnsworth and staff. Gov. Hill and staff had gathered on the sidewalk in waiting. Eleven o'clock had passed and it was a half hour later when the great doors of the capitol swung open on the State street side and the guards of honor from U. S. Grant post were seen by the waiting crowds with the remains of the general in the catafalque. The guard of honor moved out into the sunlight to the slow strains of music and the sounds of the trumpets of the regulars upon the upper steps of the capitol, thirteen men bearing the casket and so surrounding and shielding it from view. The caisson was waiting at the foot of the steps in the street. Four men were inside the car and assisted in lifting the remains to the black dais within the mounted catafalque. Then Col. Beck and Maj. Brown raised their rifles and the vicissitudes of the car, the front being level with the heads of the horses. The Grand Army guards took positions, the...

BLARE OF TRUMPETS. The procession started at a measured pace down State street, the various organizations marching on either side, and the dull boom of cannon and the tolling and chiming of bells in the steeples. The line of march through Broadway to Steuben street and thence to the depot was everywhere densely thronged. The sons of Gen. Grant and their companions of yesterday were in the front ranks. The long black funeral train was awaiting its burden. Guns boomed while the remains were being placed in the car Woodlawn and the bells tolled slowly. The committee from New York entered the cars. Gen. Hancock and staff went aboard the train. The remains were quartered and the great train started. Hundreds of persons standing nearest the tracks laid coins on the rails to have them flattened beneath the wheels of the train that carried Gen. Grant on his journey. In the front ranks of the train were hundreds of military bands and regiments met either by the government or the members of the various organizations. The expenses of the visiting soldiery will have to be paid for by someone. The invited persons were provided with refreshments in various ways. In fact, so many are the ways afforded by a great funeral such as Gen. Grant's will be to dispose of money, that the aggregate outlay will be nearly $1,000,000. The actual cost of the procession of 75,000 men and 1,500 horses, with the million yards of draperies now displayed on the fronts of the houses, will be as follows: Expenses of regular troops, $3,000; Expenses of national guards, 30,000; Expenses of the city, 25,000; Expenses of civic organizations, 250,000; Expenses of draping, 500,000. Total, $872,000.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The interest in the state elections to be held this fall continues to be very great here. Every scrap of information to be had about the situation in Virginia, Ohio and New York is eagerly grabbed up here and discussed with an earnestness which shows that an unusual interest is felt in the elections of an off-year. It is pretty evident that the fight is to be very hot in every one of these states, and that each will become a national instead of a state struggle. While expressing great regard for the civil service law and principles, each party is quietly preparing to put a good deal of money to work into the fight, and the result is very eagerly looked for. Of course, the new administration would feel very much mortified if its own state should go against it in the light, and would very much regret to see Virginia captured by the Republicans, Ohio by the Democrats, and New York by the Democrats.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—The postoffice department received telegraphic information to-day that F. B. Dutton, just appointed postmaster at Center Lincolnville, Mo., is in Portland jail serving a term of eight months for a crime which he confesses is the more unpardonable. The idea that this administration pledged to give the people better government and better officers and engaged in a hand to hand fight with the bad elements of both parties, has been deceived by those who ought to be worthy of implicit trust, is atrocious and such treason to the people and to the party ought to be punished by imprisonment. Your confession comes too late to be of immediate use to the public service and I can only say that while this is not the first time I have been deceived and misled by lying and treacherous representations, you are the first one that has so frankly owned his grievous fault. If any comfort is to be extracted from this assurance you are welcome to it. Yours truly, GROVER CLEVELAND.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5.—Acting Commissioner Walker of the general land office has prepared a circular to all registers and receivers, which has received the approval of the secretary of the interior, restricting the power of land granted railroads in making selections of indemnity lands. Heretofore the selection laws have been such that they have allowed practically select such land and in such quantities as they pleased, without being required to show the amount of land they had lost through the operations of the general land laws. From this original grant, lands so selected were always the choicest portions of the indemnity lands, and these were withheld from settlement for years, and in some instances, although the roads could not sell and give title, they are reported to have sold to ignorant purchasers such rights as the selection laws gave them. The circular requires the road to file a list of the lands they claim to have lost, making oath to their correctness before being permitted to make any selections for indemnity, and land officers are instructed to carefully compare lists with the records in every case. When indemnity selections are heretofore made without the specification of losses, the local officers are instructed to require the companies to designate deficiencies for which such indemnity is to be applied before further indemnity selections are allowed where deficiencies exist for which indemnity is allowed by law. The indemnity selections are required to be made hereafter from the vacant unappropriated lands nearest to the granted sections in which the loss occurred. Land officers are required to reject all selections not made in conformity with these instructions.

REFORMERS RESOLVE. NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 5.—The fourth annual meeting of the National League of Civil Service Association was opened this morning in the Channing Memorial church. There was a good attendance of the public and a large sprinkling of ladies. Among the more prominent members present were George W. Feltus, of Providence; Willard Potts, secretary; Everett P. Water; Col. Silas W. Burd, naval officer of New York; George Graves, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, and Carl Schurz of New York. At 11:30 a. m. Mr. Curtis was introduced and delivered the annual address before the association. Mr. Curtis addressed the members of the league adjourned to Channing parlors, where a business meeting was held. George William Curtis was elected president amid applause. The treasurer's report was read and showed that there was a larger balance on hand than usual. Secretary Potts made a report, which showed the league was in a flourishing condition. He said there were at present sixty associations which were doing excellent work. Reports of associations were then presented. The committee on resolutions reported the following: That under a popular Republican government like ours the employment in those positions of "civil" and "military" officers are administrative and not political, ought to be open on equal terms to every citizen, and that the chief executive authority over the civil service, like that over the military and naval services, is an official trust to be exercised, not for the advantage of party, but for the common welfare.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—"There has been a great deal of talk lately about a match between John L. Sullivan and myself," said Paddy Ryan on Coney island to-day. "But although arrangements have been several times made they always fell through, and I am not in the habit of making arrangements to be made that will reach the culminating point, as you will see. Sullivan telegraphed me yesterday that he would spare me any time before Sept. 11, and I quickly drew up articles of agreement and sent them on to him for his approval. It has been the wish of my life to meet Sullivan and spar or fight him, anyway at all. The articles read: To spar six rounds according to the Marquis of Queensbury rules, with gloves, the winner to take all the receipts. The sum of $500 is to be deposited by each to assure a meeting, the person not showing up to forfeit that amount." It was proposed that the contest take place at Point Breeze park, Philadelphia, on Sept. 17, next. Ryan is keeping himself in trim and is training near the sea, at his place at Coney island. Sullivan will, no doubt, soon begin to get into shape, as he has lost of superfluous flesh to the gird.

It is supposed in official circles that the object of the article is to prepare the public for a large increase in the military budget. All the German newspapers, following the Gazette, dwell upon the fact that the approach of France and Russia toward each other is coincident with increasing good will between England and Germany. The rector of the University of Berlin at a celebration yesterday in honor of the founder, Frederick William, toasted the health of Emperor William in the following words: "Let us live in peace; should, however, the arrogance of our neighbors pass from daring words to daring deeds, they will learn that the old spirit still lives."

Before he was beaten insensible, however, he shouted a cry, and several men, to which Officer Feis promptly responded, arriving in time to arrest one of them, who said his name was J. E. McFadden. The other one skipped, taking a watch and a little money which Lederer had on his person. McFadden was taken to the police station. The officer then returned and got a description of the other man, who, it seems, were amask. He at once began a search for him. Meantime Frank Chandler came to the station ball McFadden out. Lieut. Walsh refused ball, and in a conversation with Chandler came to the conclusion that he, too, was mixed up in the matter. A little later Chandler was brought to the station by officer Feis as corresponding to the description of the person he was looking for. McFadden is a young man, well known in St. Paul, who has been engaged at several places as bartender. He corresponds in size and description to the man who committed the burglaries on Saturday and Sunday nights, but the police refused to express any opinion as to whether or not he is the man wanted for that crime.
