

IF FIGURES DON'T LIE

The Democracy Will Capture New York To-Morrow, and Possibly Iowa and Virginia.

New York Republicans Badly Discouraged, and Gov. Hill Now in the Lead.

In Iowa the Democratic Candidate for Chief Executive is Very Hopeful.

Mr. Coon's Little Talk on Ohio Politics is What Caused His Sudden Deception.

A Bright Outlook.

Special to the Globe. ALBANY, Nov. 1.—The last week of the campaign closes with Gov. Hill and his managers more hopeful as to the result than at any previous time since the nominations were made, while the Republicans display increasing nervousness owing to the tenor of the reports from various portions of the state, with a handful of winning candidates and the beginning of a succession of bad plays which have all but destroyed their chances of success, and it is conceded now that if Davenport wins at all it will be by a narrow margin. The largely increased registration in New York city is accepted as presaging a Democratic majority of from 40,000 to 45,000 majority in the metropolis. Special to the Globe. WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Secretary Manning's letter accepting Assistant Secretary Coon's resignation contains a good deal less tatty than is customary on such occasions. When the president's answer will be received, Commissioner Thomson's resignation will not be written a long letter but he did say something pretty to him about his arduous and valuable services. Secretary Manning accepts Mr. Coon's resignation, and he has resigned under serious charges his resignation could not have been accepted with more formality and brevity. The fact is that Mr. Manning took a fancy to Mr. Coon when he first met him in the department, and he has since then been very friendly. Their relations have been very amicable, and though it was likely that at some time Mr. Coon would be succeeded by a Democrat, there were no signs of any impending change until after the Ohio election. It may be that that event Mr. Coon was interviewed by a reporter, and he expressed his gratification at the Republican victory, mainly because it would assist Davenport to beat Hill in New York. Of course there was a howl from the Democrats, and the retention of an ardent Republican so important an office as Coon held, but this was not the worst of it. In various quarters in New York there were doubts whether the president would elect Hill. There was a man only one step below the cabinet who was expressing his hope that Hill would be beaten. If he remained in office, plenty of New Yorkers on both sides of the political fence would infer from it that the president was indifferent to Hill, as had been already indicated by the fact that he was not to be assisted. Hill when he was greatly in need of assistance, to get Coon out, and to have his resignation known and accepted before the New York election, and to have him go out with no flying colors, but under such conditions that the Democrats would be Secretary Manning's curt note implies. It is a political necessity after Mr. Coon's interview about the Ohio election for the administration to unload him, and to do it with some show of roughness.

Republican's Disheartened. Special to the Globe. NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—An important understanding was arrived at by the Republican district leaders, who held a meeting at a late hour last night in the Gilsey house. The Republican canvass is in a demoralized condition. The betting, that a week ago was 100 to 60 in favor of Davenport, has veered directly around. The $25,000 that was raised by Logan's appeals was only a morsel for the campaign, and the district leaders decided to hold a conference where they could talk plainly to each other and decide what was to be done. Chilled and disheartened at the treatment he received from Cornell's committee, and hurt by the demands for his resignation, he left the city days ago and went to his home in Bath. As the election of the Republican committee said to-night: "Mr. Davenport is not lifting a finger in the canvass. He has gone home, and is letting the committee do what they please with his name." It is not surprising that the election of Mr. Davenport is not lifting a finger in the canvass. He has gone home, and is letting the committee do what they please with his name. It is not surprising that the election of Mr. Davenport is not lifting a finger in the canvass. He has gone home, and is letting the committee do what they please with his name.

Reducing Republican Majorities. Special to the Globe. WATERLOO, Ia., Nov. 1.—The Republicans closed the campaign in this city last evening with speeches by Larabee and Hutchins. Mr. Larabee was the first speaker, and retired primarily to the Republicans in Iowa. Col. Hutchins followed with a discussion of national affairs, with special reference to the tariff and the election of a United States senator to succeed Sen. W. H. Williams. The indications point to the election of the Republican ticket in this county by reduced majorities, the principal shrinkage being on the legislative ticket.

Established a Censorship. Special to the Globe. WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Secretary Manning has established a sort of press censorship of the bureau reports in his department. The reports of the treasurer, the commissioner of internal revenue, the comptroller of the currency and the acting superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey, will not be allowed to be published until his own report is made public after congress meets. For this there is the sufficient reason that these four reports contain the basis of recommendations he intends to make to congress, and he does not want his report discounted. In regard to the other bureau reports in his department he has ordered that bureau heads making the reports shall make abstracts for the press, but the reports themselves cannot be seen by newspaper men, and until such reports are regularly published this matter the public will know nothing of their contents except what heads of bureaus put into their abstracts. This is an entirely new scheme. One of the bureau chiefs has made a pretended abstract of his report, but the abstract is worthless. The correspondent can see this report and make his own abstract. The secretary has gone to Albany to vote, and when he gets back he may direct another and a fuller abstract to be made, but unless he does, the public will not know anything about the income until it emerges from the government printing office.

Iowa Democrats Hopeful. Special to the Globe. DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 1.—Locally the contest closes to-morrow night by address to the opposition forces at Pavilion park, with a short speech from Hon. John A. Kasson by both East and West Des Moines. It is expected that Mr. Witmer, for senator, will run spiritedly, but as Col. Gatch has about one thousand over the combined opposition to him, the outlook is somewhat forbidding, yet it is likely

BEECHER AND TALMAGE

Bright Discourses from the Two Most Brilliant Pulpit Orators of the New World.

Mr. Beecher Talks on the Single Word "Beautiful," and Incidentally Compliments Old Maids.

Dr. Talmage Dwells Upon the "Queen's Visit" and Turns Thoughts Logical.

A Tempting Dish of Mental Pabulum Alike Entertaining to the Godly and Ungodly.

"Beautiful."

Special to the Globe. NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—It is Mr. Beecher's custom to have the head of his sermon written down for reference, the sermon itself being mainly extemporaneous. This morning he amused the congregation by saying: "Accept a very unusual gift from me, an apology, and if my discourse should be too long, or too short, or too ragged, please understand that in changing my coat before I came I left my notes at home. I am sorry to trouble so many who have Sunday clothes and change them when they get about in the week and leave their religion behind with their garments. I will speak to you from one word, the word 'Beautiful.'" It is contained in the third chapter of Genesis, and it was the first word that came from his mother's womb, was carried, whom they laid daily at the gate of the temple which is called Beautiful. The temple represented the Jewish religion and the gate by which you entered was called Beautiful. Every single quality that is in the human soul is in the word Beautiful. The beauty of holiness is mentioned significantly. The beauty of conduct is also mentioned.

God is Called the Beautiful.

Special to the Globe. NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The New Testament, though it does not mention beauty as the Old Testament does, nevertheless has a special mention of the word. Every single quality that is in the human soul is in the word Beautiful. The beauty of holiness is mentioned significantly. The beauty of conduct is also mentioned.

Their Way Up to Lasciviousness.

Special to the Globe. BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 1.—Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was the principal speaker at a mass meeting held in the Academy of Music, in the city of New York, last night. He was the principal speaker at a mass meeting held in the Academy of Music, in the city of New York, last night. He was the principal speaker at a mass meeting held in the Academy of Music, in the city of New York, last night.

Reducing Republican Majorities.

Special to the Globe. WATERLOO, Ia., Nov. 1.—The Republicans closed the campaign in this city last evening with speeches by Larabee and Hutchins. Mr. Larabee was the first speaker, and retired primarily to the Republicans in Iowa. Col. Hutchins followed with a discussion of national affairs, with special reference to the tariff and the election of a United States senator to succeed Sen. W. H. Williams. The indications point to the election of the Republican ticket in this county by reduced majorities, the principal shrinkage being on the legislative ticket.

Established a Censorship.

Special to the Globe. WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Secretary Manning has established a sort of press censorship of the bureau reports in his department. The reports of the treasurer, the commissioner of internal revenue, the comptroller of the currency and the acting superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey, will not be allowed to be published until his own report is made public after congress meets. For this there is the sufficient reason that these four reports contain the basis of recommendations he intends to make to congress, and he does not want his report discounted. In regard to the other bureau reports in his department he has ordered that bureau heads making the reports shall make abstracts for the press, but the reports themselves cannot be seen by newspaper men, and until such reports are regularly published this matter the public will know nothing of their contents except what heads of bureaus put into their abstracts. This is an entirely new scheme. One of the bureau chiefs has made a pretended abstract of his report, but the abstract is worthless. The correspondent can see this report and make his own abstract. The secretary has gone to Albany to vote, and when he gets back he may direct another and a fuller abstract to be made, but unless he does, the public will not know anything about the income until it emerges from the government printing office.

Iowa Democrats Hopeful.

Special to the Globe. DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 1.—Locally the contest closes to-morrow night by address to the opposition forces at Pavilion park, with a short speech from Hon. John A. Kasson by both East and West Des Moines. It is expected that Mr. Witmer, for senator, will run spiritedly, but as Col. Gatch has about one thousand over the combined opposition to him, the outlook is somewhat forbidding, yet it is likely

THE RIVER RETEMENT

Summary of the Annual Report of the Mississippi River Improvement Commission.

A Detailed Statement of What the Commission Has Accomplished During the Year.

The Greatest Amount of Money and Work Put in Between Cairo and Vicksburg.

Recommendations for Appropriations and for Further Prosecution of the Work.

That the River May Roll.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The report of the Mississippi river commission covering its operations from Oct. 1, 1884, to the end of the fiscal year (June 30) is made public. The works at various points are briefly described in general terms in the report, and the detailed reports of the officers in charge of each work are submitted as appendices. The commission cites the acts of congress under which it acts and quotes from its own reports and statements of its plans and purposes, which are committed upon the plan, it says, contemplates the closing of outlets of both low river outlets and crevasses. The concentration of water ways of the river where widths are excessive and the suspension of going on maintenance of the banks. The execution of the plans is thus briefly outlined and in strict accordance with its original intent and for no other object or purpose the money appropriated by congress has been expended. It is not to be understood that the commission has any objection to the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

THE RIVER RETEMENT

Summary of the Annual Report of the Mississippi River Improvement Commission.

A Detailed Statement of What the Commission Has Accomplished During the Year.

The Greatest Amount of Money and Work Put in Between Cairo and Vicksburg.

Recommendations for Appropriations and for Further Prosecution of the Work.

That the River May Roll.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The report of the Mississippi river commission covering its operations from Oct. 1, 1884, to the end of the fiscal year (June 30) is made public. The works at various points are briefly described in general terms in the report, and the detailed reports of the officers in charge of each work are submitted as appendices. The commission cites the acts of congress under which it acts and quotes from its own reports and statements of its plans and purposes, which are committed upon the plan, it says, contemplates the closing of outlets of both low river outlets and crevasses. The concentration of water ways of the river where widths are excessive and the suspension of going on maintenance of the banks. The execution of the plans is thus briefly outlined and in strict accordance with its original intent and for no other object or purpose the money appropriated by congress has been expended. It is not to be understood that the commission has any objection to the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

THE RIVER RETEMENT

Summary of the Annual Report of the Mississippi River Improvement Commission.

A Detailed Statement of What the Commission Has Accomplished During the Year.

The Greatest Amount of Money and Work Put in Between Cairo and Vicksburg.

Recommendations for Appropriations and for Further Prosecution of the Work.

That the River May Roll.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The report of the Mississippi river commission covering its operations from Oct. 1, 1884, to the end of the fiscal year (June 30) is made public. The works at various points are briefly described in general terms in the report, and the detailed reports of the officers in charge of each work are submitted as appendices. The commission cites the acts of congress under which it acts and quotes from its own reports and statements of its plans and purposes, which are committed upon the plan, it says, contemplates the closing of outlets of both low river outlets and crevasses. The concentration of water ways of the river where widths are excessive and the suspension of going on maintenance of the banks. The execution of the plans is thus briefly outlined and in strict accordance with its original intent and for no other object or purpose the money appropriated by congress has been expended. It is not to be understood that the commission has any objection to the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the

Opposition to the Bland Act.

Special to the Globe. CHICAGO, Nov. 1.—After the regular monthly banquet of the Chicago Commercial club last night, the Warner bill was discussed. Congressman A. J. Warner of Ohio, who had been invited to be present, was moved to rise and make an explanation of his views, which were read to the gathering by Mr. McCarthy of Chicago. Mr. Warner held that the silver issue at this time presents two distinct phases. First, the movement to practically demonize silver by extending the product of silver mines from the money supply in the future, and reducing existing coins to the condition of subsidiary money; and second, the fact being recognized that there has been a disturbance in the relative value of gold and silver, so that neither the European coin ratio of 15 1/2, nor our own ratio of 16 to 1, any longer represents the commercial ratio between them, the question arises, is it desirable to attempt to readjust the monetary use of these two metals to their commercial value? This, he said, was the phase of the question, which bi-metalists especially are called upon to consider. It was with a view to such an adjustment, the writer says, that he submitted a plan to the commission, and if a new use of silver as money conform, through paper representation, to the actual commercial ratio between the two metals throughout the world; and he announced at the outset that the main object of his present paper was to refer to existing on the proposed bill, and to explain more fully some of its provisions. He said that much of the