The entertainment was opened at 7 o'clock by the officers and their followers congregated on the bridge where a circle was formed, and the services, if such they can be called, were commenced.

On the stage were seated the members of the army, and numerous other persons who have caught the infection.

Capt. Evans opened the meeting by asking for the singing of a hymn. The marking as he did so: "The secret of singing well is to open your mouth wide. Everybody can do that. Now, all sing."

He said the Salvation army had come to Minneapolis to save men and women from everlasting perdition, and called upon all present to consider how much better it was to live in the love of the Lord than to grope along in the dark.

Lieut. Clark then advanced to the foot of the stage, and in a voice not unlike a fog-horn, requested the audience to sing an evening hymn, "To Thee."

Capt. Evans was not pleased with the manner in which the song was rendered, and remarked, "you people of Minneapolis are good singers, and while you are singing that song over again, I will have money to invest."

WILKINS DISSECTION. members of the "army" had been subjected, and stated that one member had even served fifteen days in one city for disturbing the peace of an alleged Christian.
