drive him again out of Bulgaria and accepting his throne on that condition, the prince will prove as was in the hands of the ally Russia and diplomats and Russia will have gained what she started out to secure, a step nearer Constantinople.

MISTAKEN MODESTY. As Uncle John Whitcomb would say, the Minneapolis exposition must be expected to put the minister. They are putting clothes on the statuary in the gallery. Modesty is a most commendable grace; at the same time the Exposition managers should remember that it is also a discerning grace which only blishes in the proper place. In the present instance there is a manifestation of prudishness entirely out of place in a public exposition. There can be nothing vulgar in art except to the vulgar minded. In their mistaken eagerness to obscure the suggestion of vulgarity in the art display the managers have only made it the more suggestive. The Globe's advice to the managers would be to remove the drapery, and if the exhibition is not decent without the drapery then remove the statuary. A work of art which is not fit to be looked upon as it came from the artist's hand is not fit to be seen at all.

RETALIATING. The United States has at last found the opportunity to retaliate in kind on the British government. For every school-teacher who has been captured by the American revenue cutter Corwin for poaching in Alaskan waters, Capt. ABNEY of the Corwin reports to the treasury department that he caught his prey in the act of stealing American seals and that he stripped the vessels of their arms and ammunition and towed them into port. They had about 2,000 seal skins aboard. If the Canadian fishermen can furnish a ransom for the American schooners catch a few worthless fish in British waters, the United States government is certainly justifiable for running down British vessels engaged in stealing seal skins. If the British authorities show a disposition to kick all we have to do is to present the Canadian fishing episode as a precedent.

ANOTHER MINE HORROR. Pennsylvania has a dark record in the way of the numerous mine accidents which have of late years taken place within her borders. She is supposed to, and doubtless does, maintain a sufficient corps of mine inspectors and presumably they perform their duties as well as any one could under the circumstances. There is every probability that the accidents are not to be attributed, except in an occasional case, to negligence on the part of these inspectors. On the contrary it has been shown that in many instances accidents have occurred very soon after the inspectors have made their examination and found everything apparently in good order. But it is manifestly impossible for the inspectors to maintain a constant supervision over mines. The managers alone can do that through the constant enforcement of precautionary regulations. But human life in the mining regions, estimated from the operators' standpoint, is exceedingly cheap, and the proprietors of the coal fields have not been in the habit of regarding its safety as an essential element in their calculations. It is, however, the occurrence of every accident brought home to the owners forces by the infliction upon them of heavy fines or even imprisonment, a radical change would take place. There would be no further careless waiting for the visit of the inspector to determine the safety of the mines. A constant and vigilant system of private inspection would be constantly enforced and the result could not fail to be a diminution in the annual number of casualties. The experiment is worth trying and Pennsylvania evidently stands badly in need of something of the kind.

HITCH YOUR HORSES. The majority of runaways which occur in the city are occasioned by the neglectful leaving of horses standing unhitched. There is an ordinance aimed at this evil which directs the fastening of all horses whose drivers may leave them for however short a time. This ordinance should be rigidly enforced. It should be especially maintained during the fair week, when the streets are full of people and teams and the dangers of accidents are therefore increased. A law is worse than useless unless obedience to it is compelled, and that against the careless leaving of horses unhitched, together with the twin evil of fast driving, should be rendered at all times effective.

WHEN Montreal, where the law compels to "realistic" pictures to be turned with their faces to the wall, hears of Minneapolis' exhibition on the same day that the circus is to be in the city and that the singular mistake should be made of fixing Minneapolis day when there is to be a show up here. But as human nature is the same here in the Northwest as it is in other parts of the world, the state fair management may as well look the situation squarely in the face and prepare to meet it. The Minnesota state fair is the finest agricultural exhibit ever known in the West. The point is conceded. But that doesn't win the case in opposition to a circus attraction. If the garden of Eden was open to a free exhibition on the same day that a circus tent was up the biggest part of the crowd would go to see the circus. That is a fact which is not peculiar to Minnesota or to the Northwest. It is true wherever human beings exist, and has a special application to the American continent. The seasons may come and go, the seed time and harvest fall, but the love of the circus in American nature is perpetual. To the average American's way of thinking, life without the circus would be absurd. It is our American character, but it is there all the same. It is one of those things that can't be reasoned out of a people. Earthquakes may shake the earth to its center, the fatal breath of the cyclone may desolate the land, governments may crumble and the very palladium of our boasted liberty may fall, yet the average American citizen would continue to patronize the circus just as if nothing had ever happened. It is born in him, and he can't help it. In the face of all these facts it might be wisdom for the state fair management to reverse the dates that have been fixed for St. Paul and Minneapolis, and to attend both the fair and the circus.

ALEXANDER'S RETURN. If, as seems likely, Prince ALEXANDER has returned to his throne under suzerainty from Russia and with the understanding that he will be the creature of that large body of his countrymen, he will forfeit a ambitious career just as if nothing had ever happened. It is born in him, and he can't help it. In the face of all these facts it might be wisdom for the state fair management to reverse the dates that have been fixed for St. Paul and Minneapolis, and to attend both the fair and the circus.

Fighting for Prohibition. Special to the Globe. RED WING, Aug. 30.—From present indications it seems that a strong sentiment has been worked up here in favor of prohibition in certain parts of the county. It has even gone so far that it is said no Republican will be supported for the state office. The question of prohibition being put before a popular vote. What the outcome of this movement will be remains to be seen. The result, if it proves true, can easily be imagined.

FOR THE LITTLE ONES. Yesterday at the Exposition Devoted Especially to Children. With Fine Weather and Large Crowds, the Institution Booms.

The second week of the Industrial exposition received a fine send-off yesterday. Opening up clear and cool, with a bracing breeze, the day proved delightful, and resulted in the heaviest attendance yet seen. The atmosphere of the big building was delightfully pleasant, and even the presence of so large a crowd was not felt, either in the crush or in the necessity of the fire department. The day was set down as especially devoted to children, and thousands of little folks crowded the building all day long. The only feature in this regard was the distribution by exhibitors of various toys and novelties, which were eagerly seized upon and carried off. Of course the presence of so many children meant an unusually large number of ladies, so the concert seats and the art department were well patronized. The day passed without accident or special incident, as the utmost care was taken in the machinery department to allow the little visitors to see without endangering themselves. Children are the best advertisers in the world, and the exhibitors wasted their substance in handsome card souvenirs, with the certainty that they would all be taken home.

SHALL IT OPEN ON SUNDAY? This morning the directors will meet in solemn convocation to decide the question of Sunday opening. So far as can now be ascertained, the majority of the directors are leading church members and will oppose the opening on the ground of Sabbath desecration, though there are enough of the twenty-four who favor Sunday opening to make the session of the directors interesting. There are two arguments in favor of Sunday opening: First, the desire of many who have no other time at their disposal to see the fact of Sunday attendance would be large and the result of it day a clear "pick-up." It is generally believed that whatever today's action may be, the Exposition will eventually be opened on Sunday. Second, the fact of Sunday opening the art gallery alone, while still others will agree to open the entire building provided the machinery is not run. Those who go to the world's fair will favor Sunday opening on the ground that the public libraries are open on Sunday, or public parks. The industrial classes have no day but Sunday and would, many of them, like to spend that day at least once at the Exposition.

OLD SETTLERS' DAY. To-day has been set apart as Old Settlers' day, and an unusually large attendance is expected. The Mexican exhibit will play ancient airs, special illuminations of the cascade will take place and the old settlers will have a reunion in the evening. It is not to be understood that the old settlers are limited to Minneapolis, but the term is meant to include all old settlers in the state. From appearances many of the latter will be on hand. The crowd of strangers in the city was generally noticed yesterday, and the hotels all report an unusual influx of guests, most of them being from the state. The excursion rates for the state fair are generally noticed yesterday, and one visit to the Exposition will be made by others, as not half the beauties and curiosities can be seen in one day.

MEXICAN BAND PROGRAM TO-DAY. Besides the regular program of the Mexican band, to-day the band will play ancient airs, special illuminations of the cascade will take place and the old settlers will have a reunion in the evening. It is not to be understood that the old settlers are limited to Minneapolis, but the term is meant to include all old settlers in the state. From appearances many of the latter will be on hand. BEYOND THE WOODS. Cleveland Heads His Party Far Into the Woods. SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The president's party left Saranac Inn this morning for the upper lake region for a few days, hunting and fishing in that remote territory. With them went Col. A. H. Belo of the Galveston News and Harry W. Brown of Philadelphia. The steamer launch Nellie conveyed the party down to Saranac lake to Sweeney's carry, where a long jaunt across the country awaited them. It is not yet determined whether Mrs. Cleveland will accompany her husband on this jaunt or await the return of the party at one of the hotels on the edge of the wilderness. In all probability they will make the venture, as Mrs. Cleveland has been so long absent from the city, and she will be glad to see her friends. The party will not return before the latter part of the week. The guides took along "Major," the Scotch deer-hound, a famous old hunter in this region, and Thursday in St. Paul and Minneapolis. They arrive in St. Paul at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday. The party includes Gov. and Mrs. Alger of Michigan, Gen. and Mrs. Nathan S. Sargent of New York, and the late Saranac Inn last year, called on Mr. Cleveland just before his departure. The party have gone beyond the reach of telegraphic communication, and may not be heard from until their return.

Gen. Logan Coming. Special to the Globe. BELLINGHAM, Mont., Aug. 30.—Gov.
