County Commissioners—A Grist of Local News That Was Gathered on Tuesday.

THE MAYOR EXPLAINS Why He Did Not Sign the Ordinance Vacating Greenbrier Avenue.

A grist of business was transacted at the city council meeting last evening, the more important being the fixing of the city tax levy, which is given in detail in another column.

The following communication was read from Mayor Rice relative to the veto on the Greenbrier avenue ordinance: To the City Council of St. Paul: I return herewith, without my approval, the resolution of your honorable body, passed on the 21st inst., to the effect that all that part of Greenbrier avenue between Margaret and Minnehaha streets be vacated.

My reasons for not signing the ordinance are as follows: The majority of the owners of property on the line of said avenue, residents of the city, did not petition for its vacation, but the majority of the owners along the line from Margaret to Minnehaha street, a distance of 100 feet, do so.

The length of the street is more than two miles and a half, and liable to be extended, it would be necessary, in my view of the law, to vacate the whole of it.

Second—The board of water commissioners, a very important and co-ordinate branch of the city government, and the city attorney, have presented their objections to the vacation of the street on the ground that they have selected it to conduct water from the high pressure main on East Seventh street to the highlands on Arlington Hill addition and other neighborhoods in the vicinity.

The trial of city cases was begun in the Ramsey county district court yesterday, Judge Brill presiding. Most of the day the attention of the court was occupied with a case involving the title to certain lots on the corner of Eighth and Cedar streets, was dismissed.

The communication, together with the resolution, was referred to a special committee, consisting of Ald. Long, Cullen and Peters.

A BACHELOR'S CAROL. I'm a jolly old bachelor, blithe and jocos, I'm as happy as June days are long. How I pity you bachelors, tall and morose, who can see now just where you went wrong!

I've had narrow escapes, too, myself, in my time. And my gratitude now I express In sincerity, if not in true transcendence, To the dear girls who wouldn't say Yes.

There was Kate, now, the beauty, who first won my heart, If she'd had me, where would I be now?— Providing for seven four years from the start.

And buying "the milk of one cow." Then Jennie, who jilted me next, what of her? She's an invalid now, thin and pale, And her husband has ruined himself, they say.

Buying tonics and Bass' pale ale. Then Mollie, and Lillie, and Gertrude, and Belle, And Fanny, and Florence, and May, And Jessie, and Josie, and Hattie, and Nell; All writhing and wringing and wailing, While I am as jolly and young as a boy.

And my thanks once again I express To the scores of young maidens, proud, haughty and coy, To the dear girls who wouldn't say Yes. —Somerville Journal.
