Frolics En Masque.

Any girl will be tickled to be invited to the grand masquerade, a la a square. Here is where the young man will find something so fascinating in the idea of being enabled to flirt with anybody and everybody with alarming freedom without the necessity of a presentation or the revelation of identity that it is simply irresistible. Here is where the young man will also find himself at advantage, especially if he be a youth of handsome shape and his disguise gracefully gotten up. It is not impossible that a tenderhearted girl will be experienced by the Egyptian princess or the Indian queen for the young court favorite of the middle ages or the nomadic nobleman from the far East, as the susceptible maid surveys the nicely-curled outlines of knickerbockered limbs, so it will be for the ambitious dupe to make good use of moss or sawdust. Almost any girl of slender waist and a voice that sounds like the falling waters of some mountain brook will take well with the boys. But let Cleopatra ponder that Anthony is less captivating when standing behind the desk tracing figures on a monotonous book, and it is not merely as a suggestion to the latter, let her not allow the warmth in his breast to gain the mastery until he has seen Cleopatra in the morning in a toilette of negligee and with a repulsive wig of hair and paper on her head. The flirtation of the masquerade should be harmless and intense, and the bashful swain and timid damsel should go in for one evening of self-unbending for all it's worth.

Perhaps the girls are not aware that Halloween is almost at hand, and it is the custom to perform all sorts of remarkable tricks to become posted upon their future prospects in the matrimonial direction. Halloween was ever revered by the foremothers of this generation, who have converted the feast into a time of fun and frolic. Once the young man is longing for a change in life, sit quietly at the feet of somewhat superstitious, although delightfully entertaining grandma, and learned several methods of peering into the future. She professed to not believe a thing the old lady said, then she went out into the dark of evening and tried it, just for fun. How delighted was she when the spell proved of good omen, and for days and weeks the next night lingered.

Orange Blossoms.

It is not meet, to smile, to betray feeling, to pledge a troth, to be wed, to be loved, to come to heads. The same old story, but it is told in the life of nearly every popular young man and miss of society. Were it not so, a sadder tale might be told, and the hollow-eyed, the dirt and disappointment would be the crabbled batchelor or miserable spinster instead of the precocious forerunner of the happy. Happier 'tis to submit to the inevitable fate to continue companionless and cross. It is true it enjoins upon the fated to flit no more, and much fun is to be had, but it has the advantage of establishing the young folks firmly in the community, and after they have been socially lionized, setting them among the censors and manipulators of society. Nothing is lost by it except the expense of making the marriage the one sweet occasion of life, and this pecuniary reason is not for an instant to be considered while young hearts are throbbing with intense joy. There are a number of young people in the city whose announcements will be made public in due time.

ON A MAGNIFICENT SCALE.

Last week was marked by the splendid wedding of Elizabeth E. Frost to Miss Elizabeth S. Hancock at St. Paul's church, 4 p. m. Thursday. The church was crowded with relatives and guests of the parties immediately concerned. Rev. E. S. Thomas officiated, the ceremony being according to the Episcopal ritual. Floral decorations were abundant and appropriate, and everything incidental to the occasion was neatly gotten up with admirable taste. Harry Johnson was groomsmen and Miss Cook, of Washington, maid of honor. Misses Draper, Price, Moore and Mann, attired in white valence, were the bridesmaids, the little Misses Marion Lamprey, Zilla Oakes, Frankie Tarbox, Abbie Hancock, Mabel Merriam and Florence Lamprey, in crepe lace draped silk, were the handmaidens. Messrs. Hiram Odell, W. Merriam, Sherman Finch and Fred C. Sibley in black morning dress were the ushers. Little Ilay Lamprey in a toilette of white plush was the special handmaid in attendance upon the bride, while Willie Merriam and Freddie Tarbox in black velvet with Venetian lace were the paces. The bride looked lovely in white satin and tulle with diamonds, sapphires and other precious stones, and the bridegroom was very pretty in white brocade with an abundance of diamonds. The relatives who witnessed the ceremony were Col. and Mrs. John Hancock, of Washington, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Frost of New York, parents of the groom; Capt. and Mrs. Eugene Griffin, of Washington; Capt. and Mrs. Hare, of Fort Meade; and Mr. and Mrs. William R. Merriam, the bride's maternal uncle and sister of the three latter ladies. Her father, Col. John Hancock, gave her away. Selections from Tannhauser, Gylmaut, Faust and Mendelssohn were produced from the organ during the ceremony. All the ladies in attendance were in full dress. After the ceremony a reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Merriam, and the bridal party held in their private car for the East, to return about Nov. 1, and to be at home to their friends at No. 355 Summit avenue—a beautiful residence included among the groom's presents to his bride. The other presents to the bride were very numerous and valuable. The immediate friends in attendance at the ceremony and entertained during the reception were:
