THE RING OF GOLD.

Merriam's Record as a Political Financier Darkens His Candidacy.

Even Republicans Confess That Popularity Does Not Follow His Money.

His Campaign Expenses Reported to Have Ben Enormous in Amount.

He Is a Low License Candidate Standing on a High License Plank.

Now that the first excitement over Mr. Merriam's nomination has passed, the wisest and best leaders of the Republican party begin to realize that it was not so creditable a thing after all to do, and that the manner in which it was brought about has placed a stain upon the state. It is singular that the newspaper records of 1882 show that with the commencement of Mr. Merriam's canvass in that year (for the legislature) the talk of "boodle" and of a direct corruption of the voters of the

The claim of the Republican party, persistently made, has been that it nominated only its vote-getters. This argument applies with capital force to Merriam, who possesses a secret power of getting votes that worked with wonderful success. He came to the convention with admirable recommendations as to his vote-getting qualities, for in 1886 he was charged by his political opponent with corruption; a charge that has never been refuted. He was defeated in the canvass for the mayoralty by an overwhelming majority of 3,690. And when he asked his own party friends to elect a delegation to the state convention in his interest, they responded by tion in his interest, they responded by snowing him under and clear out of sight.

Had it not been for the secret ballot Merriam's success in the convention might have been rendered very doubtful. The people who had chosen these delegates to perform a certain duty honestly had the right to know how they voted. But to reveal how they voted would have convicted a large portion of the delegates present of the dishonor of breaking their expressed pledges. For delegation after delegation that had been sent to this convention that had been sent to this conven-tion to support Scheffer or McGill, broke that pledge under the cover of the secret ballot and voted for Merriam.

I,000 gentlemen (sic) who climbed the stairs leading to a prominent horseman's office three days before the Ramsey caucuses could tell?

Mr. Gilman is responsible largely for the Merriam victory, and it is to his discredit that it is so. The votes that he received on the first ballot came from the Merriam strength, and were given with a purpose. Gilman's name was there to divide the strength of McGill and Scheffer, and all that the Globe there to divide the strength of McGill and Scheffer, and all that the Globe has charged as to the combination between them was doubly proven true. When the vote came as to whether balloting should be secret or open, the Gilman men voted solidly with Merriam for the secrecy. The roll call of the counties shows that every Gilman county, from Aitkin down' voted solidly for the secret ballot. Those defeated are not slow in cursing Gilman for this, nor in hinting that his betrayal of the people's rights at this juncture was not wholly rights at this juncture was not wholly

It would be amusing if it were not shameful to hear the politicians still lingering at the Merchants telling of the sums of money expended to secure Merriam's nomination. The latest statement is that, including his canvass statement with the total cost was

A St. Paul evening paper yesterday printed the affidavits of J. V. Johnson, of the Otter Tail delegation, in which he states that he was offered $250 by George Dahl, of Fergus Falls, to vote for Merriam. Mr. Johnson came to the convention as a Scheffer delegate, and it was to change his vote to Merriam that he says the money was offered him.

The Republican platform and Merriam do not pull well together. The platform is for high license and Merriam is a lowflicense man of the worst type. He voted for low license, and in 1886 refused to vote for high license, leaving the house so that his name should not be called. The temperance people realize this as the following letter to

To the Editor of the Globe.

An evening paper quotes a preacher from an obscure village as saying that Merriam is very popular with and acceptable to the temperance people of the party. Now, I am a Republican and a prohibitionist, and, with hundreds of others, will oppose Merriam. The aforesaid preacher, of course, having had all his expenses paid while in the city by Merriam, will talk that way, but what has Merriam done to merit the support of temperance people? He left the capitol, and (in 1886) had business down town when temperance legislation was about to be voted on. He took the members of the legislature to his home and gave them all the liquors they could trink. He is a glub house anisto. and gave them all the liquors they could drink. He is a club house aristocrat, and gives more willingly to a Sunday base ball match than to a church. Sunday base ball match than to a church. He has no honorable sympathy with the laboring man, and acts towards the struggling masses as if he despised them. Now, the people of Minnesota do not want that kind of man to be governor. No, sir. Give us Wilson every time. It won't hurt the state institutions to have a party house cleaning, any how. There will be a regular stampede from the Republican party of the temperance people. Many will vote for Hugh Harrison and many will vote for Wilson, all of which will beat Merrian for the good of the state. riam for the good of the state.

Gov. McGill takes his defeat with sor-Gov. McGill takes his defeat with sorrow, and his friends feel inclined to put on the war paint. They allege that it was money that beat them, and they begin to feel disposed to show how it was done. McGill had only the offices to promise delegates, and against cold cash they were worth nothing. During the convention Loren Fletcher rushed up to a delegate from the Fifth district and offered him a railroad commissionership if he would change the four votes of his county from Merriam to Canning for Congress.

Special to the Globe, St. Cloud, Sept. 8.—The St. Cloud Times came out this afternoon with the following editorial article strongly advocating the nomination of Hon. Charles Canning for congress. It is believed here that his nomination would be a tower of strength in the district to the state and national tickets, and that he would be supported by the Farmers' alliance. The Times says:

alliance. The Times says:

The Times is emphatically of the opinion that the Democrats of the Fifth district should nominate Hon. Charles Canning, of Norman county, for congress. He is a leading farmer of his region. He has served in the legislature, and is known to be heart and soul in sympathy with the farmers of the state. Leading members of the alliance, as as well as farmers of the district generally, ask his nomination and pledge their support. If the Democrats would win they must nominate a man who will get the farmers' votes. Charles Canning is that man. His nomination will add great strength to the state and national tickets. The Democrats of this district canning Tuesday next, and the Firth district canning Tuesday next, and the Firth district will be carried for the national, state and congressional candidates.

state began, and have gained in volume every year. The fact that Mr. Merriam was a more than millionaire may not have had anything to do with this; the fact that in his canvasses enormous sums of money were supposed to be spent by somebody to aid him did cause it.

The claim of the Republican party, persistently made, has been that it nominated only its vote-getters. PIPESTONE, Minn., Sept. 8.—From present appearances the Republican representative convention, which is to be held in this city Oct. 10, will be a one-sided affair. The district is composed of Rock and Pipestone counties, the former having seven delegates and the latter six. The Rock delegates are all for the nomination of Harrison White, of Beaver Creek, while the Pipestoneites are for Hon. J. F. The latest candidate for sheriff on the Democratic ticket is "Hub" Schurmeier, who announced his intention yesterday of making a race for the nomination. He said yesterday: "I was born here and raised here, weigh 182 pounds and am six feet tall and don't see why I would not make a good sheriff if I can get the nomination. in Ramsey county, the total cost was $210,000. One politician, a little better posted than the rest, made up an item-ized list of these expenses, which read siderable excitement, in the town and great crowd at once assembled round the cage. Mr. Bostock mounted a platform and informed the public that his old friend Samuels had volunteered to perform a deed of daring such as had never been done in the menagerie since its establishment in 1805. Mr. Wiltshire had, he said, recently at Cardiff entered the cage in company with Mme. Salva, the lion tamer, and had by his action caused a great sensation in South Wales. But Samuels was going to surpass this feat, for. though urged to let Mme. Salva accompany him, he declined to enter the den at all unless allowed to do so alone. This lie was now about to do.

The referce has been hearing voluminous depositions taken during the past two days. A number of witnesses have sworn to criminal intimacy with Mrs. Hamilton, and the defense has offered testimony tending to show that the alleged acts could not have occurred at the times stated. The evidence of several witnesses, showing defendant's good character prior to her marriage, was rejected to-day on technical grounds. Mrs. Hamilton, with defense has offered testimony tending to show that the alleged acts could not have occurred at the times stated. The marriage, was rejected to-day on technical grounds. Mrs. Hamilton will go on the stand Monday and the case will probably occupy most of next week. Public sentiment seems to be with the fair defendant.

SIGHTS

The announcement was received with great cheering, though it was evident that, on the part of many present, there was a feeling of considerable anxiety and alarm. Samuels, however, seemed to share none of these feelings of uneasiness. Attired as a prize fighter and with a blue rosette on his breast, he appears at the entrance to the cage, and, cudgel in hand, boldly entered it. The lions appeared in no way to relish this intrusion, and it looked as though Samuels would have had a warmer welcome than he bargained for. Possessed apparently with nerves of steel, the man walked undaunted up to the end of the cage where the animals were huddled together awaiting only the slightest encouragement to spring on the intruder, together awaiting only the signtest en-couragement to spring on the intruder, and held his cudgel threateningly be-fore the nose of the fiercest. Growls of rage greeted this act; but Samuels, in no way discomposed, walked among the animals, and made them fly right and left before him. This he did several times, and on one occasion acted so times, and on one occasion acted so rashly that grave fears were entertained rashly that grave fears were entertained for his safety by those in charge of the exhibition. These—who, as a precaution, were armed with redhot irons—were ready to act promptly, when Samuels again obtained the mastery over his savage companions, and showed his fearlessness of them by firing a loaded pistol at their faces. Then, his courage maintained to the last, he went to the gate of the dental content of the last, he went to the gate of the dental content of the last, he went to the gate of the dental content of the last of the last, he went to the gate of the den the last, he went to the gate of the den and waited in a dangerous position while Mr. Bostock presented him, amid the cheers of those present, with a unique chain composed of spade and crown, and with a certificate recording the fact that he had accomplished his purpose. Immediately afterwards the band played "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," and Samuels was borne in triumph out of the menagerie and through the streets.
