

WEDDED COUPLES' WIVES.

Judge Brill Called Upon to Act as Arbitrator.

RETURNED TO HER FATHER.

Desertion, Cruelty and Drunkenness Prominent Factors in Six Divorce Suits.

The divorce mill was in good running order yesterday, and through the grinding press passed again before 2 p. m. Judge Brill managed to work off half a dozen cases before 5 o'clock. The first case called was that of Mathilda Sturneck against Fred Sturneck. When the plaintiff's name was called a handsome young woman, prettily dressed, took the witness stand. She stated that she had married Fred Sturneck three days after her husband began quarreling with her. She lived with him two months, during which time he gave her but $15. He treated her cruelly and accused her falsely. He never took her out anywhere. A stout lady, with a good natured face, was the next witness. The husband had come to her house for a while. A few days after their marriage they had a quarrel. Sturneck acted like a crazy man. At one time he threatened to have us both arrested. He drank a great deal and called his wife hard names. Mrs. Sturneck had to leave him and come to my house. Ten days after the wedding she returned to him again. He wouldn't give her enough to eat. I thought she was worth plenty for her. The court took the case under advisement.

James T. Moran vs. Julia M. Moran. The first witness called in this case was the plaintiff, James F. Moran, a well-dressed man who was a sailor. He was married at Jackson, Wis., Sept. 25, 1881. He, with his wife, afterwards came to St. Paul. March 16, 1885, Mrs. Moran was taken to the hospital to her parents in Nebraska. She would give no reason for so doing. The following night she left him and he had not seen her since.

He believed she never cared for him, and that she married him simply to escape a disagreeable stepfather. Jennie Ray, a witness, said that she was kind to defendant. Mrs. Moran told her one day she was going to her mother's. She was homesick and wanted to go to her mother's. She explained of her husband. The decree of divorce was granted.

William J. Kearney vs. George Kearney. This suit was the first of the kind in this case being the first. The plaintiff's wife, Mrs. Kearney, was a pover, and on very slight provocation hid herself away to Western climes. Mrs. Kearney was the first witness. She was married at Rockford, Ill., Jan. 16, 1884. A year later they came to St. Paul to live. They first went to live at her father's house. Afterwards they went to housekeeping, but Kearney refused to pay the rent. She then told him she would move back to her father's house. This seemed to increase him, and one evening he ordered his departure. She had not heard from him since.

Mrs. Pierce took the stand next and said she knew Mr. Kearney in Rockford, Ill. In her opinion he was no man at all and was laziness personified. Chester Pierce took Kearney's departure from St. Paul for Portland, Ore. He had never seen him since he left. After Grace Edmundson had testified as to Kearney's character, the court granted the decree with leave to plaintiff to assume her maiden name.

Joseph Rimmel vs. Pauline Rimmel. The defendant in this case, who speaks English, was called, and said that he married defendant in Germany, July 10, 1879. In 1884 he came to America, and she followed him. He had a "fraudulent" would not come along. Three months after arrival he found himself in comfortable circumstances, and she never came to him. She answered the letter and said she wouldn't come. He had written five or six times since but the letters that he had never received. The grounds for the divorce asked for. This was denied on the ground that the defendant had not come to him for the purpose of the commencement of the action.

Alida S. Green vs. Frank Green. This was a little case and a short time was spent in disposing of it. Frank Green, the plaintiff, testified that he was married to defendant May 12, '86, at Stillwater. They lived happily together until the defendant, Mrs. Green took a trip to Utah. He had written to her right along until 1874, when his correspondence ceased. Mrs. Green's sister testified that defendant came to live with her after defendant had gone away. She knew of no reason why Green had deserted his wife. The application for divorce was granted.

The last and most interesting case, interesting because of the prominence of at least one of the parties to the action, was that of Fannie Wilson Wright against Thomas Wilson Wright. Besides the judge and clerk and a few reporters there was no one in the court room when the case was called. The plaintiff is the daughter of Russell Blackly of this city. During the hearing of the other cases, Mrs. Wright, together with her father and another lady, occupied one of the seats.

THE SMALL COURT CHAMBERS. The reason of this, of course, was to avoid the rude stunts of curious, gaping spectators, who are always on hand when anything sensational is in the air. When the case was called, Mrs. Wright entered the court room, followed by her father and an elderly lady dressed in deep mourning. The plaintiff is a tall, handsome lady, beautiful in face and figure, with large, lustrous eyes and dark hair, she was attired in a suit of grey material and wore a sunny blind hat trimmed with dark and light ribbons. The complaint stated the ages of plaintiff and defendant to be thirty-one and thirty-two years respectively. They were married at St. Paul, Sept. 18, 1873, the issue of the union being two children, Lillian, now eight years old, and Charles, now six years old. The complaint further averred, had been grossly derelict in his duties as husband, habitually intoxicated, and wholly neglected to provide for his wife. This continued until October, 1887, when his habits becoming intolerable the plaintiff with her child sought her father's house. Her husband was a gambler, unthrift, lewd and licentious.

Mrs. Wright told the story of her woes as follows: My husband always drank more or less money. He would go on sprees lasting three or four days. His excesses were worst during 1887 and 1888. He spent all his money for liquor. I would give him money to buy liquor. Everything I had to support myself and child. We always boarded, because we never had enough money to go to housekeeping. Fred Wright, until I could stand it no longer, when I went to my father's home.

Mrs. Braddock was the next witness. Mr. and Mrs. Wright had boarded at her house on Pleasant avenue. Mr. Wright spent all his earnings in drink and pawned everything he could get to raise money to buy liquor. He was always making promises of reform to his wife, but never kept them. His actions caused Mrs. Wright to become sick.

The case was taken under advisement.

the common council ordered the grading of Hastings avenue, from Plum to English streets, for which the board of public works levied an assessment on plaintiff's property of $27.08. A contract for the grading of this avenue was let to McArthur Bros. April 3, 1888, who proceeded to grade the traveled portion of the old Plum Douglas road, and in so doing, plaintiff claims, unreasonably and unnecessarily wholly obstructed ingress and egress to his property. He further avers that Old Plum Douglas road was not Hastings avenue, between Plum and English streets, and that defendant had no right to grade this road. Damages are asked for in the sum of $15,000. Judge Brill issued an order restraining defendant from collecting the assessments levied against plaintiff's property until further orders of the court.

Joseph Minea vs. Lucy T. Miller et al. An action requiring that certain real estate in block 15, Rice & Vine's addition, be partitioned between Lucy T. Miller, Olivia Josephine Minea, Mary Rosalin Minea and the plaintiff, and that the plaintiff be appointed to make the partition.

James D. Hinds vs. John B. Cramsie et al.—Plaintiff's attorney filed an affidavit stating that a summons had been served on defendants, and that an answer had been received, and asking for judgment according to law. The action is to quiet title to certain property in Kern's addition.

Paul A. Lavale vs. St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway company. Plaintiff's motion for a new trial denied.

A similar order was issued in the case of Patrick Grady, deceased, against the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway company.

HONORED BY POPE LEO.

Conferring of the Pallium Upon Archbishop Ireland.

WHAT THIS INSIGNA IS.

Thursday will be a glad day in the history of the Catholic church in St. Paul, and a memorable one to the Catholic population. On that day will occur the crowning ceremony which promotes Archbishop Ireland to the lofty dignity which he now holds, and elevates the saintly city into an ecclesiastical province. The pallium will be conferred with all due pomp, immediately after the mass. The programme for Thursday has been completed and is as follows: Shortly before 10:30 p. m. the clergy will leave the bishop's residence and march in procession into the cathedral and take their places on the altar. Pontifical high mass will begin at 10:30. Right Rev. Thomas M. Marty, of Dakota, being the celebrant. Rev. Louis MacIntyre will officiate at the altar on honor. Father Trobec, of St. Agnes church, and Father Cotter, of Winona, deacon and subdeacon respectively. Archbishop Ireland will officiate his throne during the mass, and will be assisted by Father O'Gorman, of St. Thomas' seminary, and a clergyman from Ireland. The sermon will be preached by Rt. Rev. J. J. Keane, of Richmond, rector of the Catholic university at Washington, immediately after the mass. The pallium will be conferred on Archbishop Ireland by Rt. Rev. Thomas Grace, the archbishop's predecessor. It is a gratifying task for Bishop Grace to confer this honor on one with whom he has been associated so long and upon whose shoulders

THE MUSIC ON THIS OCCASION will be grand and impressive. Gonod's "Messe Solennelle" will be given by the cathedral choir, and accompanied by members of all the Catholic choirs of the city, under the direction of Prof. Manner. The Introit, gradual and offertory of the mass will be chanted by the Seminarians from St. Thomas'. After the conferring of the pallium the clergy will march in process to the front of the cathedral, where the visiting clergy will be served at the Ryan hotel at 2 o'clock. A reception will be tendered the archbishop and the visiting church dignitaries by the Catholic ladies of St. Paul at the Ryan hotel. Admission to the church will be by tickets which can be secured on application at Crusader's hall, corner Washington and Sixth streets, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. There will be no charge for tickets. Children will not be admitted to the church. It is probable that all the bishops in the Northwest will be present, also clergymen from the dioceses of Tanquer, St. Cloud, DuSable, La Crosse, Milwaukee, Green Bay and Chicago.

The pallium is a band of white wool worn on the shoulders. It has two strings of the same material and purple crosses worked on it. It is worn by the pope, and sent by him to patriarchs, primates, archbishops, and some bishops, though rarely to bishops. It is taken that they possess the "fullness of the Episcopal office." Two lambs are brought annually to the church of St. Agnes of Rome, the spot where the shepherds while the Agnus Dei is being sung. These lambs are presented at the altar and received by two canons of the Lateran church. From the wool the pallia are MADE BY THE NUNS of Torre de Spezia. The subdeacons lay the pallia on the tomb of St. Peter, where they remain all night. A bishop can not, strictly speaking, assume the title of patriarch, archbishop, etc., cannot consecrate, consecrate churches, ordain clerics, consecrate chrism, churches, till he has received the pallium. He is bound, if elected to a see in a metropolitan or higher rank, to receive the pallium from the pope, "instantly, instantissime," within three months after he was already a bishop, and has come to the metropolitan see by translation. Meanwhile he can depose another bishop to consecrate, if he has in due time applied for the pallium. He receives it from the hands of another bishop delegated by the pope after taking an oath of obedience to the latter, and wears it on certain great occasions, a list of which is given in a pontifical. He cannot transmit it to his successor or wear it out of his own patriarchate, province, etc. If translated, he must beg for another pallium. The pallium of a bishop, if he has received more than one, are buried with the bishop to whom they were given.

STRANGEST OF CREATURES.

A Blue-Eyed Baby Covered From Head to Foot With a Thick Growth of Hair.

Of all the strange people that have lived on the face of this earth, perhaps the most remarkable will be seen at the Dime museum next week, and it gives her additional interest when it is known that she was born in Minnesota. She is a lovely girl baby, sixteen months old, covered from head to foot with a heavy growth of long, silky hair. There is not a spot on the child's body that is free from the hair, sub-ecid to see that it is particularly heavy on her face. She was covered with the peculiar mantle when she was born, and it has grown since. The hair is of a fawn color and is very soft and silky.

The hair on her head was about six inches long when she first saw the light of day. Since then it has grown to a length of fourteen inches. It is unusually soft and very fine. The baby has beautiful blue eyes, and, notwithstanding her remarkable covering, is very attractive. She is large for her age, and very bright. The parents are a contractor, and well-to-do. The parents have always tried to hide the little one, but his existence was whispered in a contract with the child. The child, but without success. With infinite trouble and the payment of an enormous salary, $1,000 a week, they consented to sign a contract with the child. The child, and she will be seen in public for the first time to-morrow.

There will be a number of other strong attractions at the museum. Gen. Puss, the midjet; St. Stone, the diminutive lightning calculator; Count Osun Dariff, the tattooed Circassian, will also be in the hall. Upon the upper stage, Brown & Edwards' Comedy company will present "The C of Ice." In the lower theater, the Imperial Ideal Vaudeville company will appear.

present it to a friend in the English army. The spinster had apparently had brought along the bird as a traveling companion. Both birds were exceptionally clever linguists, but their talents had been moulded in opposite schools. The major bird swore like a trooper most of the time, while the spinster was given to praying with forty-person power. And, to make matters worse, the major spoke a day in the forenoon with his bird teaching it to outburge the old woman in the next cabin. The consequence was that the next evening the spinster was astonished to hear a voice stridently say: "Confound that old woman next door!"

AFGHANISTAN'S AMEER.

The Report of His Death Causes Anxiety in Political Circles.

SALISBURY'S GOOD SCHEME.

England's Policy Is to Watch and Wait Until Russia Shows Her Hand.

Special Cable to the Globe. LONDON, Sept. 22.—Grave anxiety prevails in British ministerial circles over the reported sudden death of the Ameer of Afghanistan. Although Indian officials have discredited the rumor, the ameer's death at any moment would surprise no one acquainted with his condition. For several years Abdul Rahman has suffered from periodical attacks of gout, and it is not quite a year ago since a well-known English physician visited Kabul and reported to the secretary for India that the ameer, in addition to having the gout, was suffering from an incurable disease. His tenure of the throne therefore, even if the report of his death is untrue, is very precarious, and politicians are prepared to learn at any time that intrigue or disease has carried him off. The Indian government is actively engaged in taking stock of the position, and is preparing a policy in the event of the disappearance of Abdul Rahman from the throne. The death of the ameer would not only have a serious effect on England, and English politics, but might also have a serious effect on the Balkan States, Russia and England. Lord Salisbury cannot afford to damage England's prestige by a reaction of the peaceless and vacillation displayed over the Penjdeh incident. There is no doubt that on that occasion Lord Salisbury cut a corner, and the result of the event of the British name amongst the Orientals. But the British government's understanding with the ameer is a purely personal one. They are not bound to his dynasty, nor are they pledged to his people. What policy the British government will pursue in the event of the death of the ameer cannot at present be definitely indicated. One part of the cabinet is in favor of sitting still and watching the development of events, and not to be drawn into fresh entanglements. In support of this policy a cabinet minister said to-day: "If Russia ever attempts to invade India I shall far better for England that she should have to traverse the 'long lane' from Herat to Candahar, than that the British should deliver their arms to the western frontier of Afghanistan. British soldiers have had a painful experience of the difficulties of marching through AFGHANISTAN in whatsoever capacity they went. If Russia attempted the subjugation of Afghanistan, as a preliminary step to the invasion of India, she would rather away her forces before ever she reached the threshold of the empire. The policy therefore of the Indian government should be one of watchfulness and waiting. The frontier is at present in insufficient working order to make the scientific frontier a fait accompli. I can therefore well afford to act entirely upon the defensive."

AN IRISH WILD FLOWER.

She felt, I think, but as a wild flower can, she felt her sadness, but she felt the dark, the cold; she felt her heart, remembering when man's hand had touched her little head with gold.

Above her, hollow-eyed, long blind to tears, she felt the shadow of a thousand years. Where you have fallen, is this the thing that grows? —Sarah M. B. Platt.
